U. S. STEAMERS TO EUROPE ARE DECIDEDLY DRY

But Returning Passengers Carry Their Own Assortment of Wet Goods Aplenty These Days.

NO LIQUOR SERVED

(By Bob Dorman)

NEW YORK, May 7. — This cheerful cable called me back from Europe: "Come home on American ship and find out if it's dry."

I sailed from London on the S.S. President Van Buren of the United States Line I had to wait a week for accommodations on this dry ship.

I'm neither a prohibitionist nor a souse But I recalled sadly that on the trip to Europe on a British liner I could buy a highball for 30 cents In Germany I had beer at 4 cents a stein Scotch whisky at 8 cents and cognac at 7, and the best wine at 60 cents a quart.

"Sailing on a dry ship!" said the barmaid at my London hotel. "Better take something along."

I did. Oh, purely as an investigator! Scotch, government-diluted, was $3 a bottle. Pre-war Scotch was $3.75. Champaigne was $4.

* * * * *

Aboard the President Van Buren was a dour notie, posted on the bulletin board, prohibiting the serving of liquor on the ship.

"Sorry," he said, "but there's not a chance—even unofficially."

Official caution, I thought. So I gumshoed around and tackled an under-steward. He said he didn't think I could buy a single drop aboard.

"It's as much as a man's job is worth to be caught bootlegging," he said, "not to mention the penalty of the law."

Room stewards, dining room stewards, the genial "George" of the smoke room of other days, and stewards of various races and occupations all said the same.

* * * * *

There was drinking aboard all right. All private stock, though. Passengers discovered this with mixed emotions. There were those persons—say six out of 10 of the will-take-a-drink" folks—who hadn't been beforehanded enough to bring their own booze. They were under the impression that the captain would clap them into irons if they brought such contraband aboard.

I didn't ask Captain Moore about it. But I didn't hear the irons clank all the way across.

Those who hadn't been forehanded and daring were out of luck unless they made the right friends. That's one way to get popular. I was popular.

Otherwise those-who-didn't-have-it found a favorite pastime in leaning over the rail and admiring the watery expanse of the Atlantic Ocean, something I rarely saw happen on the British ship I crossed on.

"It reminds me of home," said a cynical young man.

* * * * *

Drinking was confined to cabins. Sly drinking was necessary not only from motives of economy, but because the ship's officers frowned on open libations. They said it might give the impression that liquor was obtainable aboard. You couldn't bring it into the dining room or the smoke room.

* * * * *

The smoke room was funereal most of the time. Only one poker game was organized, and it died of innocuous desuetude.

"Poker and near-beer don't seem to mix," said W. T. Jenkins of Cotton, Minn.

This item appeared in the passenger list booklet: "The bar opens at 8 a.m. and closes at 11 p.m."

Nobody seemed to care much. Lemonade, near-beer and ginger ale hardly seemed to require disciplinary closing hours.

Usually there were more women than men in the smoke room. Lots of women smokers, playing bridge. Even chess was a more popular game than poker. There were no card sharps on board, which was one mercy of prohibition.

* * * * *

"What the deuce do Americans want, anyway?" he said. "Why I remember a voyage when we were selling liquor and the total sales were around $131 I suppose if there was a constitutional amendment against toy balloons, you fellows would smuggle in a pocketful."

There wasn't any liquor smuggled in when we reached New York. It was all gone.

Children Playing With Matches are Cause of 3 Fires

Children were responsible for a fire which did damage amounting to over $50 to a small stable on Chamberlen street yesterday afternoon. This is the third case in a few weeks where children playing with matches have caused fires, the damage resulting from these fires totalling over $4,000.

A chimney fire demanded the attention of the firemen at 121 Stewart street at 10.25 a.m. and a grass fire broke out on Engleburn avenue at 5.46 p.m.

WOMEN MANNED PUMPS AT FIRE

Blaze in Straw Stack at Ennismore Threatened Serious Consequences —Origin Not Known.

A fire which might have had very serious consequences broke out in some unexplained way in a straw stack in the barnyard of Mr. Philip Crough, of Ennismore, on Saturday afternoon. The farm buildings, which form a hollow square about the yard, and might easily have been destroyed by the blaze, escaped unharmed. Telephone messages by the central operator were sent to neighbors, who mustered within a few minutes a large bucket brigade. Armed with pails from the store, the women manned the pumps, and the men quenched the blazing stack, fanned by a moderate wind. The well held out nobly, even though, as one observer phrased it, "there must have been nearly a thousand pails of water drawn out of it."

Work on the new church in Ennismore is proceeding apace. It was expected that cement would be poured to-day. The repairs made to the floating bridge, making it available to traffic again, facilitate the work.

KING ACCLAIMED BY THOUSANDS

ROME. May 7—(Canadian Press)—King George and Queen Mary of England arrived in Rome at three o'clock this afternoon on their long-planned visit to Italy.

King Victor Emmanuel, Queen Helena, Crown Prince Hubert and other royal princes and princesses greeted their royal guests at the station. Included also in the welcoming party were members of the cabinet headed by Premier Mussolini, General Diaz and Admiral De Revel representing the army and navy president of the Senate and Chamber and members of the British Embassy staff. King George was in full dress uniform and as the royal visitors stepped from their carriage they were greeted with a tremendous cheering.

From the station to Quirinal palace the streets and public squares were crowded with applauding people, and buildings along the route were decorated with flags and flowers.

Signor Cremoness Royal Commissioner of the municipality and several notables in historical carriages of the city welcomed the royal couple to the capital. The royal cortege, proceeded and followed by Cuirassiers in their breast plates and helmets, presented a brilliant and impressive sight. The square facing the Royal Palace was filled with an immense crowd and in response to its applause King George and Queen Mary accompanied by all the sovereigns, and Royal Princess present appeared upon the balcony.

PRINCE NOT COMING.

LONDON, May 7. Canadian Press—There is no truth whatever in the rumour that the Prince of Wales may visit Atlantic City in June, an equerry of the Prince said to-day.

CITY COUNCIL CANNOT ARBITRARILY CUT THE ESTIMATES FOR POLICE

Such is Opinion of R. R. Hall, K.C., Who Contends That Aldermanic Board Can Only Eliminate Estimates Beyond the Powers of Police Commission to Control.

Attorney-General Raney made a statement to the House that the City Council had the power to "prune" the estimates of the Board of Police Commissioners. If he meant that the City Council could arbitrarily cut the estimates of the Board, I submit that he is wrong; but if by pruning he meant that the Council could cut out estimates that are beyond the powers of the Board to ask to be voted, then he would be right.

Section 298 of the Municipal Act says: "The Council of every municipality shall in each year prepare estimates of all sums required for the purposes of the municipality during such year." This creates a positive duty on the part of the Council to provide the necessary money to maintain the Police Force.

Power of Commission.

Under Section 354 a Board of Police Commissioners for Cities is duly constituted, and under Section 359 the Board have exclusive power to determine the number of policemen that are absolutely necessary for the city in which the Board acts.

Under Section 361 the Board have power to make regulations "for rendering it (the Police Force) efficient in the discharge of its duties," and under Section 362 the members of the Police Force are "subject to the government of the Board and must obey its lawful directions."

Under Section 363 "the Board shall on or before the first day of March in each year prepare and submit to the Council for its consideration and approval its estimates of all moneys required for the ensuing year to pay the remuneration of the members of the Police Force and to provide and pay for offices, watch-houses, watch-boxes, arms, accoutrements, clothing, and other things for the accommodation, use and maintenance of the force."

All these sections must be read together in order to determine what this "half-baked" Section 363 means. The Attorney-General has evidently overlooked a very important rule for the construction of statutes of this character and that is that where the power is given to a Municipal Council —whenever the public interest or individual rights call for its exercise— the language used though permissive in form is in fact peremptory. What the Council are empowered to do for the Board of Police Commissioners the law requires shall be done. The power is given not for the benefit of the Council, but for the Board. The power to provide funds for the maintenance of the Board is placed with the Council to meet the demands of right and to prevent the Police Force being rendered useless and disorderly conduct rampant.

Duty to Supply Funds.

The Council have the power to supply the funds, and when all the sections are read together it is their positive duty to supply the funds required by the Board for the proper maintenance of the Police Force. The right and duty of the Council is to examine the estimates so far as to ascertain that it is for the purposes within the power of the Board. If an item or class of items is clearly for a purpose for which the Board is not authorised by law to expend money, it is the right and duty of the Council to reject it. But beyond this in my opinion the Council cannot go, because it is the manifest intention of the Legislature that the Council have no discretion to either reduce the Police Force or render it inefficient or to pay them less than their services are worth.

What is the remedy in case of dispute? There are several remedies, but the cheapest and most effective way is to invoke the provisions of Section 164 of the Criminal Code, which expressly provides that "every one is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to one year's imprisonment who, without lawful excuse disobeys any Act of any Legislature in Canada by wilfully omitting to do any Act which it requires to be done."

From the facts that have been drawn to my attention, it appears that the City Council have not objected to any particular item in the estimates of the Board, but have wilfully and arbitrarily sought to cut down the estimates without any regard to the rights and powers of the Board of Police Commissioners and contrary to the advice of the city solicitor.

Under the circumstances, therefore, I am of the opinion that the duty of the City Council can be most cheaply determined by having its members who illegally sought to prune the Board's estimates duly indicted under Section 164 of the Criminal Code.

This is a question of great public interest, especially to the mother of every child in the city of Peterborough.

In cites where the Police Force is inefficient, the motor speeder recklessly and criminally drives over little children playing on the street with the same disregard for human life as he has for the life of a rat that comes out of the sewer.

MISS AGNES LOGAN GETS OVATION FROM PETERBORO

Escorted by some twelve or fifteen motor cars, with sirens blowing, preceded by the Salvation Army Band, which played valiantly all the way from the C.P.R. Station to her home, surrounded by admiring friends and relatives, Miss Agnes Logan returned to her home in Peterborough at noon to-day after a triumphal week in Toronto, during which this seventeen-year-old girl captured five of the first awards of the Ontario Musical Competition Festival, against entrants from all over Ontario, and won special and very flattering personal mention from one of the adjudicators, E. Granville Bantock, of London, England.

In the words of J J Duffus, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, who took part in the ovation accorded Miss Logan at the C.P.R. Station "this is probably the first time that such a signal honour in the musical world has been accorded to a citizen of Peterborough."

The Salvation Army Band welcomed Miss Logan as she stepped off the train from Toronto accompanied by Miss Mathilde Masson, who also received a first award in the Competition for soprano solo work, and representatives of the City Council, the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, the Board of Education, the Conservatory of Music, where Miss Logan has received the major portion of her musical education, with many of her friends, pressed forward to greet and welcome the young musician, whose honours have apparently not altered in any degree the unassuming manner and sweet disposition of one who is yet a school-girl.

Mayor Taylor, in the name of the City and its Council, presented Miss Logan with a large bouquet of pink Columbia roses, accompanied by a brief speech of congratulation.

A. A Fowler, chairman of the local Board of Education, and J. J. Duffus, president of the Chamber of Commerce, reiterated his sentiments, to which Miss Logan responded with a very hearty "thank you."

Three cheers and a tiger were raised for the young lady, who has added to her own laurels and also placed a large credit entry on the Publicity Ledger of Peterborough. These were repeated at the end of the drive which brought her to her home.

Representatives of the various local societies who took part in the reception to Miss Logan included Mayor Taylor, Messrs. J. J. Duffus, A. A. Fowler, F. Whitehouse, John Crane, J. A. McKone, H. Meyers, S. Gordon, J. John, Leon Frazer, W. H. Bradburn, J. M. Greene, James Hamilton, R. H. Turner, P. Westbye, H. Boyle, H. Gilgour, J. W. Meyers, and J. W. Worth.

A presentation of a bouquet of roses to Miss Mathilde Masson, in recognition of her success in vocal work at the Festival, was made later in the name of the City Council and the citizens, by Mayor Taylor and Mr Frank Whitehouse.

DIRECTORS AND HORSEMEN MEET

Air Cleared by Discussion About the Use of Race Track at Exhibition Park.

The differences between the Exhibition Board and the local owners of racehorses were amicably settled on Saturday at a conference in the city hall with Mayor Taylor, Aldermen Crowe and Phelan bringing the two parties together. The representatives of the Fair Directors, Messrs. Denne, John Gillespie, Harry Webber and Tom Brown acknowledged that the Peterboro horsemen who went to the trouble and expense of keeping the track in condition were entitled to special consideration, but they were incensed at the action of the "Barney Google" type who practically lived in the horse barn last summer while they were training their horses and then did not race them at the Peterboro Exhibition, departing for the circuit without paying any fee for the privileges they had made full use of. On the other hand the horsemen agreed, practically unanimously, that the Fair Directors had good grounds for complaint in those circumstances, and they were also willing to contribute something toward the interest and insurance charges on the racing stable it was finally decided that the local horsemen would be given private locks for the track which they were to continue to use at a rental of ten dollars each.

Frank Montgomery, Jim Sutherland and Eddie Jones represented the horsemen. It was generally felt that the meeting had the effect of clearing the air, by bringing out certain facts which were not generally known to both sides. Mr. Denne emphatically stated that the racing charter which had been reported to the Finance Committee of the Council as having passed into the hands of the Exhibition Board, was owned by a few private citizens including Mr. Denne himself, who had paid some $90 to redeem it and save it from lapsing and had also paid the annual fee for some years.

Directors said that the whole incident could have been avoided if the horsemen had attended the Fair Board meeting last Thursday night as, it was said, they were urged to do.

SAYS TURKEY IS BUSY DISBANDING HER ARMY

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 7 (Canadian Press). — Adnan Bey, the Nationalist governor of Constantinople, has assured the Acting French High Commissioner here that the Turkish Government had no hostile intention toward France.

Turkey ,he said, conscious that the conclusion of peace in the near future would ensure the country of an era of tranquility and prosperity, was engaged in disbanding her troops with a view to establishing her army upon a peace footing.

DUBLIN, May 7 (Canadian Press) —Irregulars on Saturday attacked the residence of Senator Fitzgerald, proprietor of the Freeman's Journal.

The sentry guarding the house called on three women to halt, but they replied by firing revolvers at him.

FORMER PASTOR OF ST. ANDREW'S GIVES ADDRESS

MUSICAL WINNERS

Rotary was likened by Rev. J. G. Potter, pastor of McVicar Memorial church, Montreal, and formerly of St. Andrew's church in this city, in an address to the Rotary Club today as a magnificent organ, each pipe of which would give out an individual note if its key were struck, but which in the hands of a musician was capable of wonderful harmony.

There was a 90 per cent. attendance of members, and a large number of visitors, including Rupert Gliddon, head of the Conservatory of Music, and City Solicitor Joseph Wearing. Alex. Kay was introduced as a new member of the Rotary Club.

Miss Kathleen Gorrie delighted the Rotarians with three most enjoyable numbers, her splendid singing being htoroughly appreciated, and she was recorded a hearty vote of thanks.

S. Dickson Hall was named as the chairman of the Public Affairs Committee and Dr. Bruce Marshall as a member of the same committee, while Leon Frazer was appointed as correspondent to the Rotarian.

Rev. Mr. Potter, the speaker of the day, in a thoughtful and eloquent address, dilated upon the friendship nature of Rotary. He was not one of those who believed that such clubs were the result of lack of sociability and friendship in the churches, but rather felt that the spirit of brotherhood in the churches was carried out into Rotary and other clubs and enabled the organizations to do a larger and more comprehensive work for the benefit of the community. He had watched, with a good deal of interest the work of Rotary in Montreal, and was impressed with what had been accomplished.

The speaker referred to the many happy years he had spent in Peterboro and said that his family had been ready every hour of every day of every month since they had been in Montreal to return to this city. Rev. Mr. Potter expressed his delight at the many evidences he had seen of the expansion of Peterboro since he had left here, the new churches, new factories, and general signs of progress and he was sure it was a fine thing for Rotary members to feel that one had a share in bringing about such an achievement.

President McElderry referred to the success of Peterboro musicians in Toronto, congratulating Miss Agnes Logan, Miss Mathilde Masson and the Trinity Orchestra upon their success.

Rotary John Crane, in exhibiting to the members the silver shield won by the Trinity Orchestra, and the gold medal captured by its leader, Mr. Gliddon, expressed the opinion that such clubs as Rotary should see to it that the sinews of war were provided for Peterboro contestants in the Ontario competition next year.

Mr. Rupert Gliddon, who was given a hearty reception, briefly reviewed the events of last week in Toronto. Of Miss Logan he said she had been in a class by herself and that it would not be long before she would no longer belong to Peterboro but of the world. Miss Masson had won first honours in a class of 18 singers, and her work had been referred to by one of the adjudicators as the outstanding vocal accomplishment of the week. As for Trinity orchestra it had scored high marks and hoped to retain the honors next year.

MANY BUMPS FOR 1923 MOTORISTS

Fledgling Drivers Forget About Traffic Dangers in Concentration on First Lessons.

The nerves of the street car crews will need the stimulation of those potent tonics that are slyly recommended among friends if this spring's crop of automobilists continue to show the recklessness or thoughtlessness that has already accounted for a string of minor accidents since the fine weather came.

One car a day, more or less severely bumped, was the record for last week, and some of the motormen consider that only the kindly intervention of Lady Luck prevented really serious accidents.

"A car backed out of a lane on Charlotte Street the other day," said one of them, "and without a thought about where he was, the driver kept right on until he stopped on the car track about five feet ahead of my car. What are you going to do with people like that?"

One of the George Street cars broke a wheel off an automobile driven by Dr. Forrest, of Port Hope, as it suddenly turned onto the track near Rye's boathouse a few days ago. And so it goes while the motormen have been reduced to the first stages of nervous exhaustion. It is expected that after their first flights that wear off the novelty of the heady experience behind their wheels, the 1923 flock of autoists will get over the idea that they are in ten-acre fields or that there is no one on the streets but themselves. In the meantime the street cars will do their best to dodge them and keep their sandboxes full, their emergency breaks working, and the reverse apparatus right on the trigger.

SCHOOL ISSUE IS DISCUSSED

Writer Suggests That the Soft Pedal Be Used—Some Labour is Non-Productive.

Editor, Examiner:

I wish to thank Minister for his letter of the 23rd inst. It is quite in order to call attention to any difficulties that may be in the way for a reorganization of our educational systems. May I make a very humane simile. A person who has developed a serious malignant growth requires the services of the surgeon with his knife and they may also require the services of a sympathetic nurse and possibly a minister. So between Business Man's "ruthless application of business economy" and Minister's "sympathy" for the mentally strong but physically weak ,all will eventually reach their proper niche. However, the hours of the teachers is only one phase of the general re-organization necessary.

In this letter I wish to deal with the proposed expenditure of nearly half a million dollars for extensions and additions, part of which "does not cost us anything" as it is a grant from the province. I fear that Peterborough city will find out before many years that they are part of the province and will have to pay their share of present day extravgancies, whatever the purpose. We feel it a bit now for the magnificent 100 ft. roads for our American tourist friends to travel on.

Is it necessary to make this expenditure at the present time? Since 1920 the population of Peterborough has remained practically stationary. We have added to our school buildings the Prince of Wales school, thereby releasing for the higher forms the South Central school. We have the extra scholars added by the Adolescent Act but we can at any time notify the county to look after their own scholars which will balance this increase .The Adolescent Act is only in its experimental stage and a great deal of opposition has developed against it, indeed it is only by the liberal use of permits to ignore it, that it has not caused more bitter opposition and possible repeal.

Is it the time to perform large public works? A year ago labor was a drug on the market, for some time past workmen and others have had to draw on their reserves until there are not many that can afford to encourage heavier taxes for several years at least. Rentals are so high now that the average workman is helpless to develop a better living which has been our hope and dream for years past. An extract from a well-known magazine, published on-

BRITISH BREAK WITH FRANCE IS LOOKED FOR

A MIDDLE GROUND

LONDON, May 7.—(Special.) — The possibility of a joint Italian-British note to Germany differing radically from that sent Sunday by France and Belgium was discussed by London papers to-day as the Cabinet met to consider the reparation situation.

Emphasizing the British-Italian accord the press reflects the heated resentment understood to have been felt by the government when Premier Poincare went right ahead with a reply rejecting the latest German reparations offer without consulting Britain.

The tetx of the Franco-Belgium note was handed the German Charge D'Affaires at Paris last night. The French and Belgians declared the German offer of thirty billion gold marks inadequate and the guarantees proposed by Chancellor Cuno insufficient. Ruhr resistance must end, the note said.

For two days Lord Curzon, Acting British Premier, in the absence of Premier Bonar Law, who is away on a trip for his health, sought to have the Franco-Belgian note held up and made a joint Allied document. Although they delayed delivery of the note out of deference to Curzon's wishes, the French and Belgians refused to change its tone of flat rejection of Germany's offer and finally sent it forward.

Say Too Pessimistic.

Political observers consider the press is over-emphasizing the possibility of a definite break in the former entente cordiale and an alignment of Britain and Italy on the one hand ,opposed to France and Belgium. But taken in conjunction with the visit of King George and Queen Mary to Rome, where they arrived to-day, the stress laid on Italian-British amity is considered significant. After the Cabinet discussed the matter of a note to Berlin, it was indicated this would be forwarded during the week.

A Middle Ground.

Hopes of finding a middle ground for discussion of reparations were expressed by officials here. The Cuno government probably will withhold reply to the note of France and Belgium received Sunday until one from Great Britain arrives, when there will be opportunity to compare the attitudes of the various Allies and profit by what is expected to be the greater leniency of the British reply. Cuno is to address the Reichstag Friday. Although his downfall has been predicted, officials supporting him, insist a basis for negotiations leading to settlement of the reparations tangle may be found shortly.

FRANCE AND BELGIUM REFUSE TO ENTERTAIN OFFER FROM GERMANY

Joint Note is Sent to Germany With a Categorical Refusal to Consider the Terms Proposed.

CRITICIZES OFFER.

PARIS, May 7. — (Canadian Press.)—France and Belgium have categorically refused to consider Germany's recent offer of thirty billion marks as reparations.

Their refusal is contained in a joint note sent the Allies Saturday and delivered to the German Embassies in Paris and Brussels last evening.

The note criticizes point by point the German offer and in doing so, announces the determination of France and Belgium to be paid in full and not to consider any proposal until German resistance in the Ruhr ceases.

Surprise is expressed at the German pretensions, which, the note says, would mean tearing up the Versailles Treaty. In the final paragraph it remarks:

"The German Government, if it will look into its own heart will not be astonished that such a bargain should be refused."

After mentioning a number of objections to the German proposal the note continues:

"The French and Belgian Governments should add that the present proposition of Germany is altogether unacceptable from several points of view. Germany's offer does not represent even one-fourth of the sum fixed by the Reparation Commission and recognized by Germany as the amount of her debt to the Allies. France and Belgium have declared on several occasions, and they are led to repeat now, that they cannot accept a reduction of their own shares and although they are reading to offset them with inter-allied debts, the yare obliged to collect the remainder to repair the terrible disaster the German invasion inflicted upon the two countries."

Asked For Delay.

It was first announced that the note would be delivered last evening, but the British Ambassador asked for delay, in line with the British suggestion that there be a consultation with the Allies before Germany was answered. France and Belgium complied by giving Great Britain one day to think over the note, but with no expectation that the British would finally come into "a united front," or without any intention of modifying the terms at Great Britain's request, as France and Belgium consider themselves alone qualified to answer in this case.

The note lays strong emphasis not only on the inadequacy of the money offer, but condemns the vague terms and rejects the idea of an international commission replacing the Reparations Commission and the Allies as a final tribunal. It also emphasizes Germany's failure to offer security that her obligations as enunciated in the new note would be met ,remarking that under the German plan with all its shortcomings it would amount "once again only to some words on paper."

The note denies the truth of the German assertion that France and Belgium violated the treaty by entering the Ruhr, but on the contrary, asserts that the German offer in several essentials is incompatible with the Treaty. The document sets forth how the treaty procedure was followed in a legal way by fixing reparations, which Germany formally accepted and adds: "Since then she has not kept the engagements she made; a partial moratorium was granted her, but she has not even fulfilled her reduced obligations."

Co-operation in Ruhr.

France and Belgium, it is pointed out, hoped for pacific co-operation in the Ruhr on the part of the industrialists but Berlin prevented this, for "it was not the population, but the German Government that willed and organized resistance."

The note further says: "The Treaty obligates Germany not to consider as an act of hostility any penalty imposed after the Reparation Commission has declared her in default."

It reiterates phases of German resistance and then repeats the declaration:

"The Belgian and French Governments cannot take into consideration any German proposal so long as this resistance lasts."

It is set forth that France has advanced one hundred billion paper francs, chargeable to Germany, while Belgium has advanced fifteen billion, and "there remains for each of them, besides their pensions, more than half of thir damages to repair."

"The economic interest of France and Belgium ,the economic interest of the whole world, and justice itself' 'continues the note, "requires that the ravaged countries shall not be condemned to ruin themselves longer to promote enrichment of their debtors."

MRS. HARBACH GAINS 24 LBS.

Declares Tanlac Restored Her Completely When Health Was Practically Destroyed.

"The Tanlac treatment restored my health and strength and increased my weight twenty-four pounds two years ago, and I am one of the happiest women in Canada, for I have been feeling fine ever since," declares Mrs. Alice Harbach, highly esteemed resident of 26 Dundas St. W., London, Ont.

"I was so nervous I trembled like one with the palsy, and feared a complete breakdown. I couldn't relish my food, many days I didn't eat a thing, and lost weight until my clothes were away too large for me. I had piercing headaches, was so weak I would give out before the middle of the day, and at night just seemed to hear the clock strike every hour. I suffered more agony than tongue can tell.

"But Tanlac ended all my troubles, and if I had my say, I would put a bottle in every home. It has won my everlasting gratitude, and I will always praise it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

DRURY IS GIVEN NOMINATION BY HALTON COUNTY

WARM RECEPTION.

MILTON, May 7. — (Canadian Press.)—Hon. E. C. Drury, Premier of Ontario, was nominated by the People's Political Party of Halton, Saturday here, as their candidate in the coming provincial elections. Premier Drury represented this seat in the last Legislature being elected at a by-election after he had accepted the leadership of the farmer forces in the provincial house. His nomination means a three cornered contest in the riding, as George Hillmer, of Oakville is in the field as a Conservative, and A. Roy Dale of Georgetown, as a Liberal. Although just fresh from the council meeting the Premier did not mention Mr. Raney's resignation.

The Premier was given a warm reception by the convention which packed the local theatre. No other name but his was even mentioned as candidate and his nomination was quite unanimous. His speech was part defence of his four years of government and part attack on the administration of the department of forests and lands when Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, the present Conservative leader, had charge of it in the last administrtaion in Ontario. "If Mr. Ferguson could not run a department efficiently he cannot run a government for the whole is greater than the part," said the Premier. He also declared that prohibition must be an issue in the election because of the attitude of the other parties. He nailed the flag of prohibition to the government mast, declaring there was no demand for a change or even for a vote for a change.

"The policy of the Conservatives on the O.T.A. is for slackness and the policy of the Liberals is to refer it to the people again very soon" said the Premier. "Mr. Ferguson has stated that he will produce a policy that will please the temperance crank and the drinker. I have been waiting a long time for him to produce that policy. Meantime his chief lieutenants are casting doubt on the act. I think the O.T.A. should stay on the statute books and be enforced vigorously and well. It is our duty to enforce and maintain it. The time is not opportune to have another vote nor is there any demand for it." He said that Major Tolmie had stated that the Liberals if elected would have another vote.

Premier Drury said the Ontario financial state was as good as that of any other province being proved by the standing of provincial bonds and the opinions of financiers. He contended the government action on hydro radials had saved the credit of the province and the public owned national railways from other public owned competition. The government had appointed only three major commissions and one the timber inquiry, had brought back to the province three or four times what it had cost, and the revenue from the department of lands and forests had gone up because of the mistakes of administration the injury had found. Mr. Drury defended the Backus deal by comparing it with the Shevlin Clarke deal put through by the former government. He said the Backus limits were extensive but not valuable and the limits the Shevlin Clarke got were small in comparison but very valuable. He said that it was like comparing a large field bolder to a diamond, and Shevlin Clarke had got their limit without tender and their manager was Mr. Mathieu ,Conservative member for Rainy River. "The Shevlin Clarke deal was one of the grossest pieces of inefficiency (I am not calling it anything worse) that this province ever saw." The Premier contended that the present Conservative leader when in office had thrown away a million in Kapuskasing. In conclusion the Premier appealed for support on the government record giving Hon. Manning Doherty much credit for the removal of the cattle embargo. "If the policies are compared I think we will get the support we deserve." M. A. Campbell, vice-president of the association, presided.

Lake Freight Rate Heard in the West.

WINNIPEG, May 7.—Before the Legislature was prorogued Saturday a resolution proposed by Premier John Bracken, calling on the Dominion Government to suspend the Dominion coasting regulations and to take steps to insure fair and equitable lake freight rates, was unanimously passed.

Attacks on the lake shippers were made by Premier Bracken and Hon. Robert Jacob, when dealing with the lake freight rates resolution. The Premier declared the farmers had lost $20,000,000 through the increasing rates last Fall. Mr. Jacob asserted a combination of the most vicious nature appeared to exist, and he urged the Dominion Government to act fearlessly and ruthlessly in destroying the present "monopoly."

THORNTON PROMISES LOW RATE FOR COAL

Canadian National Railway Will Bring Both Western and Eastern Coal to Ontario for $9 a Ton—For Train Load Lots in May, June and July.

OTTAWA, May 7 (Canadian Press). — Lower railway rates on coal from Alberta and the Maritime Provinces are in sight.. In a telegram to Senator J,. S,. McLennan, chairman of the Special Committee of the Senate on Fuel Supply, Sir Henry Thornton, President of the Canadian National Railways, states that the national roads are prepared to quote a rate of $9.00 a ton on Alberta coal moving in train-lots to Ontario, and "similar consideration" on Maritime Provinces coal.

Sir Henry Thornton's telegram follows:

"After careful consideration, Canadian National Railways are able to quote rate of $9.00 per ton on the average for Alberta coal moving in train-load lots from the coalfields of that Province to Ontario. It is understood that in naming this rate, it will be applicable only during the months of May, June, and July, as prior to May, adverse weather conditions materially affect the cost of movements, and after the 1st of August, our equipment is needed for the transportation of grain. Similar consideration will also, of course, be given to the rates on coal from the Maritime Provinces. It is also to be understood that coal operators at shipping points and distributors in Ontario will co-operate with the railway company to achieve the common object as I am sure will be their desire."

The Senate Committee, under the chairmanship of Senator McLennan, has been investigating the question of fuel supply since early in the season, and has not yet concluded its deliberations. Sir Henry Thornton, giving evidence before the committee, pressed the inadvisability of the Central Provinces being dependent on the United States for fuel supply.

The House Committee on Mines and Minerals is also inquiring into the coal supply, and Sir Henry Thornton will, it is expected, give evidence before that committee shortly.

Crossed Channel on Half a Gallon of Gas

SAINT INGLEVERT, France, May 7 (Canadian Press) —Georges Barbot, French aviator, yesterday crossed the English Channel to Lympne, and returned, winning the Matin's 25,000 franc prize for the first airplane with a maximum cylindric capacity of 1½ litres to make the round trip.

The conditions called for a French airplane with a motor of less than 15 horse-power, for which a little more than half a gallon of petrol was thus provided.

Barbot flew to England in 1 hour 1 minute, and returned to France in 3 minutes, using only about three-quarters of the power of his 13 horse-power motor.

The distance all told is about 40 miles.

Social Conditions Are Bad in Dundee.

LONDON, May 7. — (Canadian Press Cable.) — Dundee has the worst industrial and social conditions to be found in Great Britain according to a report prepared by executive of the general federation of trade unions which handles industrial insurance.

The percentage of married women working in Dundee is 41 against 7 in Glasgow and Edinburgh. Among certain workers in Dundee women can earn more than men and it is stated to be not uncommon for the husband to act as housekeeper while the wife goes to work. The general effect is made worse by the low industrial standard of living says the report. Bad housing and ignorance of hygiene go hand in hand with a reckless increase of numbers.

The defence of the college authorities is that he failed to maintain discipline and violated college rules.

TWENTY-THREE HAD DANGEROUS JOURNEY ON ICE

Passengers and Crew of Steamer Kyle Scrambled For Thirteen Miles Over Rough Ice to Shore.

STUCK IN THE ICE.

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., May 7 (Canadian Press). — After scrambling for thirteen miles over one of the roughest ice packs ever piled up off Sydney Harbour, twelve passengers and eleven members of the crew of the steamer Kyle reached shore yesterday afternoon, making the last few hundred yards of the journey in dories which put off to meet them.

The Kyle is stuck in very heavy floes about eight miles off Cranberry Head, and has abandoned all efforts to reach North Sydney until the wind changes and breaks up the pack.

Only enough steam is being kept up to heat the living quarters. There are only about 25 tons of coal in the ship's bunkers.

After eighteen days in Fortune Bay, she left Port Aux Basques, N.F., last Sunday, and has been a ful lweek at sea covering a distance which she makes ordinarily in a night's steaming.

Yesterday it was decided to send a party ashore across the ice to get some flour, and twelve passengers who were anxious to be on their way decided to accompany the seamen

So rought was the going over the huge piled-up floes that many detours had to be made, increasing the distance to more than thirteen miles.

Shortly after the party left the ship, it was learned by wireless that the ice pack was drifting away from shore, and by the time the adventurers reached the edge of the ice, there were several hundred yards of blue water between them and their destination.

Modern Highways for Modern Traffic

HIGHWAY traffic has outgrown the road. The traffic of to-day demands highways of a permanent character—roads that bring economy through permanence. Increasing travel, increasing loads and other similar factors make highway construction a serious problem. Permanent roads pay for themselves and the solution of Canada's highway problem lies in speeding up the building of

CONCRETE HIGHWAYS

The automobile has revolutionized our traffic. In 1910 Canada had 8,960 motor vehicles; to-day our motor car and truck registrations total 510,000. Roads that used to carry 20 to 30 vehicles per day, now must carry many times that number per day, and not the old slow-moving light weight horse drawn vehicles, but cars that travel 20 to 30 miles an hour and trucks that carry heavy loads.

This increasing traffic and constantly growing weight of loads combine to emphasize the importance of such a fuel-saving, skid-proof and really enduring pavement as concrete.

Concrete roads lighten the taxpayer's burden by practically eliminating upkeep. They lower haulage costs, attract tourists, promote the comfort and well-being of every community they serve.

THE SCHOOL EXPENDITURE.

The Examiner has heard many complaints from citizens as to the action of the Board of Education in deciding to have plans and specifications for the new Technical School and Collegiate Institute prepared at once.

It is argued that to go to the expense necessarily involved in the securing of the proposed plans is simply squandering the money of the ratepayers on something that will be of no avail.

In support of this contention, it is declared that the Council when called upon by the Board of Education to act will simply submit a bylaw to the people and that the ratepayers will administer a quietus to the whole proceedings as soon as an opportunity is allowed.

Undoubtedly there is very strong opposition to any attempt at going ahead with this undertaking at the present time, even among those who recognize that additional Collegiate Institute accommodation is required.

The general complaint of the burden of taxes leaves the ratepayers in a very unfriendly mood to this proposition that involves another drain upon the civic treasury, and the outlay against what is regarded as a sheer waste of money in securing plans for a work the people will not authorize merely emphasizes what little chance there would be of a bylaw of this nature being endorsed by the people, for the present at least.

BOYCOTTING SUGAR.

The boycott of sugar started by American women in an attempt to bring down the price continues to widen out, and women in many American cities are pledging themselves not to use sugar until there is a marked drop in sugar prices.

It is undoubtedly true that most people eat more sugar than they need, or than is good for them, and a reduction in the amount consumed individually would have a beneficial effect upon the people.

It is doubtful, however, if much relief so far as prices are concerned would be experienced unless the boycott were to be made much more complete than it is at present.

The extension of the boycott to the products in which sugar is largely used would also have to be included in the programme, for there would be little logic in declining to use sugar itself and consuming large quantities of other things of which sugar forms a big part.

If people were to decline to buy soft drinks and candy and jams and confectionery as well as to use sugar by itself it is possible that the price might be affected.

As it is the demand from the dealers in such articles is large enough at present to offset any falling off that may be caused by the action of American housewives.

The remedy rests with the United States Government, rather than in a more or less ineffective boycott.

PREVENTING ACCIDENTS.

Considerable motor legislation was passed during the session of the Ontario Legislature just closed, but in spite of the amendments adopted it is doubtful if much real progress was made towards the desired end—of making traffic conditions safer.

That there is urgent necessity of stopping the slaughter of pedestrians in the larger cities by automobiles and motor trucks cannot be denied, and it is significant that at a convention of American police heads held in New York last week in which this question was thoroughly discussed, there was an unanimous expression of opinion that the remedy lies in a more careful system of licensing of drivers—a system that will exclude the careless and the inefficient from the operation of cars of any kind.

The Examiner feels that at present in Ontario we are far away from any such system inasmuch as—although professional drivers, it is true, have to pass a more or less perfunctory examination—any citizen regardless of his ability or efficiency is allowed to take his own car out on the street and drive at his own sweet will.

A more efficient licensing system ought do much to solve the problem, and the suggestion brought forward by the United States police officials is worthy of study by the Provincial authorities.

Perhaps in time it may be decided that there is no such thing as "automobile accident"—that every one of them is due to the driver's failure to take possible and needful precautions, and that for every one of them some one should be punished with sufficient severity to inspire the caution requisite for public safety.

MR. RANEY'S RESIGNATION.

The resignation of Hon. W. E. Raney, the Attorney-General of Ontario, was received with considerable surprise throughout the Province, his decision to retire from politics being an unexpected development of the political situation.

Of Mr. Raney it might be said that temperance people loved him for the enemies he has made.

His enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act made him at once popular and detested, according to the individual viewpoint.

To certain sections of the opposition the Attorney-General has been a target, sustaining attack after attack to such an extent that he has undoubtedly acted in the capacity of a shock-absorber to the Government.

At the same time, he has unquestionably been a tower of strength to the Drury Government, not only because of the manner in which he administered the affairs of his important department, but because of his legal knowledge and his ability to assist the administration in handling the intricacies of what to most of them at least was a complicated situation.

Mr. Raney has been honest and genuine in his administration. Not even his bitterest political foes could criticise his sincerity of purpose, no matter how much fault they may have found with his methods.

If he has made mistakes they have been the mistakes of a conscientious man, honestly endeavoring to carry out the duties for which he assumed office.

There will naturally be great interest as to his successor, who will probably be selected without delay, as it is not likely the Government will choose to go to the people without an Attorney-General in the line-up.

THE FLIGHT TO SAN DIEGO.

The transcontinental non-stop flight of Lieutenants Macready and Kelly, of the United States Army, in the four-ton monoplane T-2 is a impressive achievement. The altitude record, 34,500 feet, is held by Lieutenant Macready. The record for "sustained lying," 36 hours 5 minutes and 20 seconds, was made at Dayton on April 17 by Lieutenants Macready and Kelly, who used the same machine in which they have now made a continuous flight from Roosevelt Field to San Diego, a distance of 2,700 miles, in 26 hours 50 minutes and 38 seconds. For more than eight hours they guided their great plane through the night. The sun had set and twilight had come before they entered Indiana. They did not see the sun again until they were crossing the Panhandle of Oklahoma, when they were following the Rock Island tracks and heading for Tucumcari, where the Canadian River flows east in New Mexico. All through the night hours the 400-horsepower motor roared far up in the air, over cities and settlements where people came to their doors to look up into the sky, wondering to see the monster speed on. A pilot must have nerves of steel to keep at his work, deafened by the noise of the engine and the whir of the propeller, straining his eyes to follow the tracks of a railroad diminished to a mere trace, feeling his way through the night, knowing that if the engine goes dead, perhaps over a forest or a desert, it will be the end.

This adventure of Macready and Kelly called for uncanny dexterity in finding the way—there could be no greater expertness in air navigation. All through the Eastern and Middle West States tangles of railroad lines with confusing lights lay under them, and only by flares lighted by prearrangement could they be sure of what city they were flying over. Then there were the rivers to puzzle about, the Wabash, Mississippi, Missouri and Arkansas, before the light of day stole over the landscape. It must have been with relief that they sighted the desert country, with every crag and pinnacle etched in the clear atmosphere and the arid plain smoothed out below. But there was still another severe test to come, the crossing of the mountain ranges of New Mexico. Arizona did not present so troublesome a problem, and when the Colorado was crossed above Yuma it was fairly straight sailing over the desert to San Diego. Triumph must have thrilled in the veins of these men when the white houses of the town gleamed in the sun in their setting of mountains with the vast blue of the Pacific beyond. Only the day before, early in the afternoon, T-2 had lumbered into the air at Roosevelt Field.

There is a temptation to compare the flight of MaCready and Kelly with the Atlantic passage of Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown in a Vimy bomber, a comparatively light but fast machine. The Englishman and his American comrade also flew through the night, making the 1,980 miles between Newfoundland and the Irish coast in 16 hours and 12 minutes at a speed of 120 miles an hour. They faced great hazards in cloud and fog, hail and snow. It served no useful purpose. At best it was a sporting event ending in a miraculous escape. Macready and Kelly have done pioneering work for the Post Office mail service and generally for civil aviation. They have proved that all-night flying is practicable. They have confirmed Brig. Gen. Mitchell's judgment that the continent can be crossed on "a definite schedule of twenty-seven hours."

The day may soon come when a flight from New York to San Francisco will be so familiar as to pass unnoticed; when there will be a regular and well-patronized passenger service. Lord Northcliffe said of the feat of Alcock and Brown that he looked forward "with certainty to the time when London morning newspapers will be selling in New York in the evening." T-2 carried copies of The New York Times of May 2, which San Diegans read at the supper table the following day. It may not be long before a Londoner can cut his travel schedule to San Francisco down to three days by patronizing a transatlantic and trans-United States aerial service.—New York Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The talking will now be transferred from the Legislature to the hustings—and there promises to be a lot of it, too.

The Workers' Party would be more truly described if the last two words of the title read "of Russia" instead of "of Canada."

The honors being paid to Miss Agnes Logan and other Peterborough winners in the Ontario Musical Festival are richly deserved.

After all, Quebec is not to have hedge courts for speeders. The measure as first announced would never have been a success—save in enriching unscrupulous revenue officers.

Every time the manipulators make the price of sugar soar they make the consumers of sugar sour.

With the resignation of Hon. W. E. Raney, the election campaign will lose much of its zest so far as Dr. Forbes Godfrey and a few other candidates are concerned.

Two resolves should be made by the electors of Ontario in the coming election—first to get on the list, and second, to vote.

Toronto Telegram writes appreciatively of the dandelion crop. The inference is that something will soon be brewing.

It is complained that prune juice is used to adulterate liquor in British Columbia. That's much better, however, than wood alcohol.

Ottawa Progressives are going to support a candidate who will follow Drury and not Morrison. But both have the same policy now, so why make a distinction?

LOST BREATH, HEART FLUTTERED after least exertion

Weak, Nervous Woman Obtains New Health

"Some months ago, I found that after the slightest exertion I suffered from shortness of breath and fluttering of the heart. Frequently I would get a stabbing pain in my left side. I tried various remedies but instead of improving I became worse. My appetite failed and soon even the sight of food became repulsive. Then my nerves became so weak that I would "jump" at any sudden sound.

One day a friend called and, seeing my exhausted condition, told me that what I needed was Wincarnis. I began taking it right away and in all I have taken four bottles and I am amazed at the wonderful result. Today I am strong and well and I owe all my renewed health to Wincarnis."

Taxation Proposals Will Be Considered.

SYDNEY, Australia, May 7. — (Canadian Press Cable, via Reuters.)—The Sydney Herald declares that Premier Bruce's taxation proposals, as announced in a speech last week at Perth, when he foreshadowed the agenda of the forthcoming conference of state premiers, have been unfavorably received in federal circles especially by leaders of the labor party, on the ground that the scheme is impracticable. At Perth the premier declared for no more tax-free loans and for a co-ordination of borrowing with a ten per cent. annual contribution to a sinking fund to cover all loans. He also laid down other conditions.

The Herald adds that at the premiers' conference on May 23 the state representatives will probably seek a modification of Premier Bruce's scheme or propose an alternative scheme.

THINK VISITORS ARE APT TO LIE ABOUT GERMANY

Claimed in Paris It Is Very Difficult to Get Into Germany—Tourists Are Wanted.

STORY OF A VISIT.

By ERNEST M. HEMINGWAY.

Special to the Examiner. Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.

OFFENBURG, Baden, May 7.—In Paris they said it was very difficult to get into Germany. No tourists allowed. No newspaper men wanted. The German consulate will not visa a passport without a letter from a consulate or chamber of commerce in Germany saying, under sea, it is necessary for the traveler to come to Germany for a definite business transaction. The day I called at the consulate it had been instructed to amend the rules to permit invalids to enter for the "cure" if they produced a certificate from the doctor of the health resort they were to visit showing the nature of their ailment.

"We must preserve the utmost strictness," said the German consul and reluctantly and suspiciously after such consultation of files gave me a visa good for three weeks.

"How do we know you will not write lies about Germany?" he said before he handed back the passport.

"Oh, cheer up," I said.

To get the visa I had given him a letter from our embassy, printed on stiff crackling paper and bearing an enormous red seal which informed "whom it may concern," that Mr. Hemingway, the bearer, was well and favorably known to the embassy and had been directed by his newspaper, The Toronto Star, to Germany and report on the situation there. These letters do not take long to get, commit the embassy to nothing and are as good as diplomatic passports.

The very gloomy German consular attache was folding the letter and putting it away.

"But you cannot have the letter It must be retained to show cause why the visa was given."

"But I must have the letter."

"You cannot have the letter."

A small gift was made and received.

The German, slightly less gloomy, but still not happy: "But tell me why was it you wanted the letter so?"

"Me, ticket in pocket, passport in pocket, baggage packed, train not leaving till midnight, some articles mailed, generally elated. "It is a letter of introduction from Sarah Bernhardt, whose funeral you perhaps witnessed to-day, to the Pope, I value it."

German, sadly and slightly confused: "But the Pope is not in Germany."

In the cold, grey, street-washing, milk-delivering shutters-coming off-the-shops, early morning, the midnight train from Paris arrived in Strassburg. There was no train running from Strasburg into Germany The Munich Express, the Orient Express, the Direct for Prague? They had all gone. According to the porter I might get a train across Strassburg to the Rhine and then walk across Germany and there at Kehl get a military train for Offenburg There would be a train for Kehl sooner or later, no one quite knew, but the tram was much better.

On the front platform of the street car, with a little ticket window opening into car through which the conductor accepted a franc for myself and two bags, we clanged along through the winding streets of Strassburg and the early morning. There were sharp peaked plastered houses criss-crossed with great wooden beams, the river wound and rewound through the town and each time we crossed it there were fishermen on the banks, there was the wide modern street with modern German shops with big glass show windows and new French names over their doors, butchers were unshuttering their shops and with their assistants hanging the big carcasses of beeves and horses outside the doors, a long stream of carts were coming in to market from the country, streets were being flushed and washed. I caught a glimpse down a side street of a great red stone cathedral. There was a sign in French and another in German forbidding anyone to talk to the motorman and the motorman chatted in French and German to his friends who got on the car as he swung his levers and checked or speeded our progress along the narrow streets and out of the town.

In the stretch of country that lies between Strasburg and the Rhine the tram track runs along a canal and a big blunt nosed barge with LUSITANIA painted on its stern was being dragged smoothy along by two horses ridden by the bargeman's two children while breakfast smoke came out of the galley chimney and the bargeman leaned against the sweep. It was a nice morning.

As the ugly iron bridge that runs across the Rhine into Germany the tram stopped. We all piled out. Where last July at every tram there had formed a line like the queue outside an arena hockey match there were only four of us. A gendarme looked at the passports. He did not even open mine. A dozen or so French gendarmes were loafing about. One of these came up to me as I started to carry my bags across the long bridge over the yellow, flooded, ugly swirling Rhine and asked: "How much money have you?"

I told him one hundred and twenty-five dollars "Americain" and in the neighborhood of one hundred francs.

"Let me see your pocketbook."

He looked in it, grunted and handed it back. The twenty-five-dollar bills I had obtained in Paris for mark-buying made an impressive roll.

"No gold money?"

"Mais non, monsieur."

He grunted again and I walked with the two bags, across the long iron bridge, past the barbed wire entanglement with its two French sentries in their blue tin hats and their long needle bayonets, into Germany.

Germany did not look very cheerful. A herd of beef cattle were being loaded into a box car on the track that ran down to the bridge. They were entering reluctantly with much tail-twisting and whacking of their legs. Along wooden custom's shed with two entrances, one marked, "Nach Frankreich" and one "Nach Deutchland" stood next to the track. A German soldier was sitting on an empty gasoline tin smoking a cigaret. A woman in an enormous black hat with plumes and an appalling collection of hat boxes, parcels and bags was stalled opposite the cattle-loading process. I carried three of the bundles for her into the shed marked "Towards Germany."

"You are going to Munich too?" she asked, powdering her nose.

"No. Only Offenburg."

"Oh, what a pity. There is no place like Munich. You have never been there?"

"No, not yet."

"Let me tell you. Do not go anywhere else. Anywhere else in Germany is a waste of time .There is only Munich."

A grey-headed German customs inspector asked me where I was going, whether I had anything dutiable ,and waved my passport away. "You go down the road to the regular station."

The regular station had been the important customs junction on the direct line between Paris and Munich. It was deserted. All the ticket windows closed. Everything covered with dust. I wandered through it to the track and found four French soldiers of the 170th Infantry Regiment, with full kit and fixed bayonets.

One of them told me there would be a train at 11.15 for Offenburg a military tram; it was about half an hour to Offenburg, but this droll train would get there about two o'clock. He grinned. Monsieur was from Paris? What did monsieur think about the match Criqui-Zjawny Kilbane? Ah. He had thought very much the same. He had always had the idea that he was no fool, this Kilbane. The military service? Well, it was all the same. It made no difference where one did it. In two months now he would be through. It was a shame he was not free, perhaps we could have a talk together! Monsieur had seen this Kilbane box? The new wine was not bad at the buffet. But after all he was on guard. The buffet is straight down the corridor. If monsieur leaves the baggage here it will be all right.

In the buffet was a sad-looking waiter in a dirty shirt and soup and beer stained evening clothes, a long bar and two forty-year old French second lieutenants sitting at a table in the corner. I bowed as I entered and they both saluted.

"No," the waiter said, "there is no milk. You can have black coffee; but it is ersatz coffee. The beer is good."

The waiter sat down at the table. "No there is no one here now," he said. "All the people you say you saw in July cannot come now. The French will not give them passports to come into Germany."

"All the people that came over here to eat don't come now?" I asked.

"Nobody. The merchants and restaurant keepers in Strasburg got angry and went to the police because everybody was coming over here to buy and eat so much cheaper, and now nobody in Strasburg can get passports to come here."

"How about all the Germans who worked in Strasburg?" Kehl was a suburb of Strasburg before the peace treaty, and all their interests and industries were the same.

"That is, all finished. Now no Germans can get passports to go across the river. They could work cheaper than the French, so that is what happened to them. All our factories here are shut down. No coal. No trains. This was one of the biggest and busiest stations in Germany. Now nix. No trains, except the military trains, and they run when they please."

Four poilus came in and stood up at the bar. The waiter greeted them cheerfully in French. He poured out their new wine, cloudy and golden in their glasses, and came back and sat down.

'How do they get along with the French here in town?"

"No trouble. They are good people. Just like us. Some of them are nasty sometimes, but they are good people. Nobody hates, except profiteers. They had something to lose. We haven't had any fun since 1914. If you make any money it gets no good, and there is only to spend it. That is what we do. Some day it will be over. I don't know how. Last year I had enough money saved up to buy gasthaus in Hornberg; now that money wouldn't buy four bottles of champaigne."

Beer, 350 marks a glass.
Red wine, 500 marks a glass.
Sandwich, 600 marks.
Lunch, 3,500 marks.
Champagne, 36,000 m[illegible]

I remembered that last July I stayed at a de luxe hotel with Mrs. Hemingway for 600 marks a day.

"Sure," the waiter went on, "I read the French papers. Germany debases her money to cheat the allies. But what do I get out of it?"

There was a shrill peep of a whistle outside. I paid and shook hands with the waiter ,saluted the two forty-year-old second lieutenants, who are now playing checkers at their table, and went out to take the military train to Offenburg.

WELLINGTON HAY FIRES OPENING GUN IN BATTLE FOR POLITICAL HONORS

Criticized Drury Government For Expenditures and Method of Governing Hydro Project.

NOMINATION RALLY.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., May 7. — Canadian Press. — Wellington Hay, leader of the Ontario Liberals, fired the opening gun in the North Riding of Oxford on Saturday, speaking here at the big nomination rally when Edmund Parker of Zorra was chosen to carry the local standard into the fray.

Outstanding among Mr. Hay's remarks was his frank contention that the voice of the municipalities of the province should be heard to a larger degree when such gigantic undertakings as the HydroElectric enterprises were under consideration The people of the municipalities shoulder the financial responsibilities, he asserted, while they had little or nothing to say about the operation or the development of the undertakings at issue.

The Liberal leader also made it quite clear that in his opinion the province should be legislation make it"comfortable" for those municipalities choosing to engage in Hydro radial ventures although the government should not be asked to guarantee the bonds for such enterprises.

Wellington Hay deplored the large and increasing expenditures of the past, voicing the stinging complaint that the administrators at Toronto have been making no proper provision for the liquidation of liabilities rapidly accruing.

"We have have a re-created system of bookkeeping in this province" declared the leader, "in order that at the close of each year the people of his province will know definitely how much they owe, and when in what manner it shall be overcome. The people must know just what their obligations are."

"The governments have been spending millions in the past, making no adequate provision for the retirement of their liabilities. This cannot go on forever. There must be a day of reckoning, irrespective of what party comes into power. The government of the future should set aside amounts from time to time as a sinking fund in order to liquidate their obligations."

"Consider the Hydro-Electric enterprises Nobody complains about their value or questions that they are real assets but the municipalities must and are shouldering the burden. Millions have been expended in this direction but the municipalities have no say or direction as to the operation, where the transmission lines should go, or similar affairs in this connection."

"The government appoints the Hydro electric commissioners, who are not responsible for raising the money. The people shoulder that burden but the government merely nominates the commissioners. We think that the government should have the right to say who should be on that commission. The municipalities should have one or two representatives also to determine when and how the money should be expended."

"The Hydro-Electric enterprises are huge undertakings. They call for the services of supermen, who shall devote their whole time to the task."

"I think further that the municipalities should be given the power to operate Hydro radials. I believe that if any municipality wants to undertake a venture of this nature that the government should make it as comfortable as possible by legislation although it should not be called upon to endorse the bonds."

The Liberal leader referred to the friendly, cordial relations that had existed between the Liberals and the Farmers and Labor men in the past. "They should be with us and not against us," he cautioned. "There never was a time when the Liberal party did not consider them in a friendly light, and it was a Liberal government that first established a Labor portfolio in the Cabinet."

The Liberals are friendly to the farmers and the Labor people," continued Mr. May, "because as business men we appreciate the fact that through those two fields of activity prosperity is alone possible. With their success comes success to the urban centres, and I do object to the hired agitators who go abroad preaching dissension and friction between the people of the rural districts and their fellow men in the towns and cities."

Mr. Hay was inclined to be tolerant toward the Drury government. "I do not think that they were so ill-advised as to think along the lines of class consciousness, although that impression did become prevalent."

He referred briefly to the efforts expended by the King government to ascertain what might be wrong with the rural activities and remedy any defects. A commission had been appointed for that purpose and the most satisfactory results are anticipated. Similar procedure should have been forthcoming from the Drury administration he felt.

Australia is Seeking Good Type Immigrants.

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 7.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters.)—Premier Bruce of the Commonwealth, in a statement on immigration, expresses the opinion that there is no reason why encouragement should not be given private schemes and organizations, the promoters of which are prepared to expend capital on development works calculated to facilitate immigration. The premier considers that the proposed nomination of British families by Australian church congregations is a promising plan and he is favorably inclined towards the group system of settlement as the likeliest for securing a highly desirable type of immigrant. He also favors expansion of immigration of boy farmers.

WANT NEW LAWS

MADISON Wis. May 7. — The "old horror of standardisation," above everything ,is what Dr. Maybelle Park seeks to avoid in the care of Wisconsin's homeless, neglected, dependent and delinquent children.

The state's little ward, she holds, has as good a right as any other child to an opportunity for development of his own individuality. She is determined that he shall not lose this right through the methods, however well meant, of any "institution."

Dr. Park is head of the recently created juvenile department of the Wisconsin State Board of Conrol.

She supervises all state homes in which children live.

Each Case Investigated.

She does not underestimate the importance of wholesome food, good care, sanitary attention, suitable employment, sufficient rest and proper educational advantages for such homes' inmates, but she points out that these things are not necessarily inconsistent with "institutionalisation" In Wisconsin, however, she intends that they shall be.

So far as possible, it is Dr. Park's aim to provide for the adoption of orphans who do not fall under the classification of defectives or delinquents, but she makes a point of investigating thoroughly both the child's antecedents and the character of the foster parents in each case of this sort in order to guard against disappointment on either side in the future

Wants New Laws.

She is arranging for the employment of older children in the state homes or schools, in colonies of 20 each, the boys at afforestation work, the girls at domestic tasks or in the model factories, the idea being to fit them to support themselves at good wages when thrown on their own resources.

At present she is working for legislation requiring all courts which commit children to state homes to retain competent physicians and psychologists and to employ suitable tests to determine how to place them to the best advantage.

Dr. Park considers Wisconsin and Minnesota the states best equipped with child welfare laws.

COBOURG, May 7.—(Special)—Cobourg Central Ontario baseball team nailed their first victory in an exhibition game played here Saturday afternoon when they defeated the Strollers of Toronto, by the one-sided score of 14-3. The game was staged at Horse Show Park and the large crowd present to witness it showed that baseball enthusiasm is already strong in Cobourg and District. The crowd of Cobourg supporters was supplemented by country folk who were in town for their Saturday marketing. COL. F. D. BOGGS A CANDIDATE IN E. NORTHUMBERLAND

COBOURG, May 7.—(Special).—The Conservative Association of West Northumberland got away to a start here on Saturday evening in the coming Provincial contest, when they chose Col. F. D. Boggs, of Cobourg, for their standard-bearer. Futhermore, they made the choice a unanimous one, although a number of other names came before the meeting. There were about one hundred and fifty delegates representing the different polling subdivisions in West Northumberland present, making the meeting a representative one, and as many more voters assembled, so that the hall was well filled.

A. E. Hoskin, president of the Association, presided. Among those nominated were: Col. Boggs, O. F. Allison, Cobourg; ex-Reeve A. E. Eagleson, of Hamilton Township; J. A. Noble, Camborne; A. R. Dundas, Cobourg; F. M. Field, K.C., Cobourg, and others.

Addresses were delivered by Hon. Mr. Henry, ex-Minister of the Hearst Government; Mr. Stewart, of Toronto; the candidate, and others, who elaborated upon the policy of the party in the coming contest.

Although West Northumberland Liberal Association has not yet held a convention, it is generally assumed that Mr. Sam. Clarke will be the candidate. Mr. Clarke has represented the riding in the Legislature now for a quarter of a century, and the electors showed their confidence in him by returning him at the last election to round out his silver jubilee of service by the largest majority he has ever had. Col. Boggs was his opponent in the last contest.

Crime Has Ally in Modern Automobile.

CHICAGO May 7. — The motor car of to-day in the hands of thieves and robbers, has far outstripped the stolen horse of pioneer days as an aid to crime, says the Chicago Crime Commission in its latest bulletin.

While the horse thief in the days when justice was stern and swift might see himself dangling from a halter, the automobile criminal has a different mental picture in the event of capture, according to the commission.

His modern view includes arrest, release on bond, conferences in the well furnished offices of the criminal lawyer, trips to court, delays, possible conviction, a new bond, appeal to the Supreme Court, the "fixing" of witnesses and escape.

Motor cars were a factor in 355 felony cases in Chicago in 1922, the commission points out, but the criminal courts increased the percentage of defendants penalised in 1922 to 37 per cent., as compared to 26 per cent. in 1921.

Ninety per cent. of Chicago robberies, in the opinion of these experts, are preceded by the theft of an automobile, and in 1922, 2,207 robberies were committed. These involved 115 defendants charged with robbery with a gun in cases where automobiles were taken from their possessors. Of these 115, only 12 suffered penalties, seven going to the penitentiary, four to the reformatory, and one to the house of correction.

During the year 15 manslaughter cases were called in criminal court, and only one of the defendants was penalised. He received a reformatory sentence, according to these records.

Church Union Issue Raised at a Meeting.

MONTREAL, May 7.—(Canadian Press.)—If the proposed church union bill is passed by parliament and the disruption of the Presbyterian church which the anti-unionists claim is inevitable, takes place what then will the dissenting churches in the east join with the weaker branches in the west and form a new national Presbyterian church in Canada, or will the western churches not entering the united church be left to make their own way?

This issue was raised by Rev. J. F. Shortt of Olds, Alta., at a public meeting under the auspices of the League of Presbyterian Church Association here on Saturday night.

"Why, man alive, have you been asleep? Haven't you seen those wonderful new highways the Government has been spending millions of dollars on?"

Ten Miles Easier Now Than Five Before

"Your wheel glides along those hard, smooth, dustless highways just like a ball rolling over a billiard table. Hardly any pressure needed on the pedals. You can ride 10 miles today more easily than you could do 5 or 6 miles on the old roads."

"That so, Jim?"

Like A Toboggan

"They've cut down the big hills, too, Fred. The new grades are easier to climb. As for coasting—you can let her go now just like a toboggan. And, say, it's great to feel the wind in your face and to see the trees whizzing by. And, after you reach the bottom you shoot on—and on—and on! You'd never believe you could coast so far unless you'd tried it yourself."

"Gee, you make a fellow anxious to get out on those new roads, too."

"Why not get a bicycle and come along with me, Fred? Come and breathe the clover-laden breezes. And see the fields sprout up this spring. And the grain ripen golden in the fall. I know some pools where there's a fish or two. And some places where the mushrooms grow. We'll take our bicycles along next vacation, too."

"You've sure got me going, Jim."

"Well, now I've got you going, I want to steer you right. Let me whisper a word of advice. Get a C.C.M. Bicycle."

"Why, what's the difference?"

A Poppy Bike

"For one thing, there's the Triplex Hanger. No other bike has it. The Triplex responds to the slightest pressure on the pedals. You start easier. Get under way faster. Every bit of weight you put on the pedals counts for speed. The Triplex Hanger is sure a peppy power plant.

The New Pedal

"There's the new Gibson Pedal, too. A beauty! Aluminum frame that looks like silver and cannot rust. Strong, yet wonderfully light. Watch how she spins! And see how perfectly it fits the foot.

"But I'm not a salesman, Fred. Just hike down to the C.C.M. dealer's. He will be glad to tell you all about C.C.M. Bicycles—why they're nickelled over copper, why the enamelling lasts so long, why English Seamless Tubing makes the best frames and all about the Hercules Brake.

Bottom Prices

"Go down and get your C.C.M. now and come out for a ride. You can easily afford one—C.C.M. Bicycles are almost down to pre-war prices; $15 to $30 less than the 'peak' prices. They've hit the bottom for a quality bicycle."

THE WOMEN WILL FIGHT FOR PEACE.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 7.—(United Press).—If men are not allowed to fight out their differences in fisticuff altercation or with guns, why should nations be? If courts ready to restrain the conduct of the various commonwealths, why not of the various countries?

These questions and various kindred will be asked by Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, of Iowa and Washington, D. C., chairman of the newly created department of international relations in the General Federation of Women's Clubs, at the biennial council to be held at Atlanta, Ga., May 7th-11th, and 2,000,000 women who compose the organization who expected to have something to do with the answering.

Women are weary of war. The world is weary of war. And, yet, nobody does anything about it. The thing to do, in the opinion of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which has members in 18 foreign countries as well as every state in the Union, is to establish a world court. The way to do this, the Federation believes, is to "so aid in forming an enlightened public opinion, that the people of every country will demand that a reign of law shall be established among nations as it has been among men." W.

"There is no reason why the disputes of nations cannot be settled by impartial tribunals as the disputes of men are settled by courts of law," says a statement given out by Mrs. Towner, who is the wife of Former Congressman Towner of Iowa, and now Governor of Porto Rico.

"In encouraging the study of world conditions, the International Relations Department of the General Federation is urging club women to inform themselves as to the history and status of international relations and of the world conditions which have followed the war.

200 Clubs Interested

"The General Federation is now prepared to furnish study programmes and reference lists and hopes soon to send out from Washington Headquarters a traveling library on foreign relations. Already more than 200 clubs are making International Relations a study.

"After informing ourselves and working to influence public opinion, we will strive to promote better understanding and establish friendly relations between the women of different countries, in 18 of which we now have club members."

The court that Mrs. Towner recommends is that suggested by Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, who is giving her every assistance in her work. Mrs. Hughes is honorary chairman of Mrs. Towner's department, and Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird is honorary vice-chairman.

"Mothercraft" is another Federation battlecry. The word has a nice homey sound. It was invented by May Bliss Dickinson, B.N., of Trinity Court, Boston.

Just as "home economics" came along and saved the day when kitchen drudgery began to pall, so mothercraft has, by becoming scientific, taken out all the irksomeness of "minding and 'tending the baby," and put training for motherhood on an altogether different basis.

While "mothercraft" originated in Boston as a school course, it quickly spread all over Massachusetts, and will soon be nationalized, as the General Federation of Women's Clubs will take steps to have it incorporated as a part of the curricula of every public school.

The work will be presented by Mrs. Ira Couch Wood of Chicago, chairman of the General Federation Child Welfare Division and nationally known child-welfare expert and co-laborator of Miss Dickinson.

Death Toll of 100,000

"No young girl would purposely kill a child, but more than 100,000 babies die in the United States each year, because the girls of today who are the mothers and teachers of tomorrow, are not taught mothercraft," says Mrs. Wood.

"We are trying to train girls for intelligent motherhood, and whether or not they become mothers, they will have profited by a knowledge of mothercraft. Almost 50,000 babies die each year in the United States before they are a month old. Investigation has proved that in most cases ignorance of the mother or wrong living conditions have caused the deaths."

REFORMED SALOON ATTRACTS PEOPLE

LONDON, May 5.—The opening recently of a "reformed public house," in Edmund Street, Camberwell, S.E. London, caused quite a sensation in the district. It was crowded all the evening by men and women who took the liveliest interest in the original design —bright, almost jazzy—decoration, and the general atmosphere of cleanliness and comfort. It is called The Rose.

Edmund Street is by no means jazzy. It is a typical London poor street. The Rose is the only bit of color and brightness in the neighborhood. There is no doubt that it will be popular.

The Rose pays a subtle tribute to the people of the locality. It assumes that they like artistic, clean and orderly things. Chairs, floor coverings, decoration and lighting are all on the "West End" level. The people are offered what is really an attractive club house where they may meet and talk or listen to a wireless concert, and get food any time of the day. There is one part where no intoxicants are served. Children are admitted there.

REV. DR. CREWS PREACHED TWO FINE SERMONS

Church in South End Passed its Sixth Mile stone on Sunday—Message of Goodwill.

SPECIAL MUSIC

What's in a hand clasp.'

Rev. Dr. Crews, of Toronto, in his evening sermon at St. James Methodist Church, on the occasion of its sixth anniversary yesterday, gave a practical answer to that question which he suggested in his text from the second Book of Kings, 10:15—"Give me thine hand."

Handshaking is an expression of goodwill, friendliness and kindliness, of which the world stands in great need today in virtually all the relations between men and nations.

"It is used among all peoples as a method of greeting, and an excellent method it is," said Dr. Crews. "It means that we are on good terms with our neighbor or that we wish to be on good terms with him."

Dr. Crews discussed this universal sign and seal of amity, friendship and brotherhood in five of its uses or aspects, social, commercial, political, ecclesiastical, and finally as a symbol of personal reconciliation.

God has implanted the social instinct in every one of us, the speaker explained. Robinson Crusoe got along very nicely in his solitude, but he was greatly comforted when his man Friday appeared because he then had companionship and fellowship. In Winnipeg a newspaper carried on its first page every day for a week an appeal in large type for men to shake hands with one another, with results that brought even strangers together in the expression of that social instinct. This spirit needed to be cultivated more in the church. Many people feel that the church is an exceedingly solemn place, that they must not smile, and that to laugh is an unforgiveable breach of decorum. Dr. Crews believed that this opinion was partly an influence of the old Puritanism. In their churches the pews were high and were fitted with doors. There were no friendly greetings among the Puritans after their services. With the last Amen they silently formed into lines and walked to their homes so solemnly as they could, without so much as a word to each other. That would have been regarded as a breach of the Sabbath.

"God never intended human beings to act like that," declared Dr. Crews. "It was contrary to the old testament and the new, and it was contrary to common sense and grace."

He related an experience of how new members had been attracted to his church through the friendly greetings to strangers by one of his congregation, and contrasted that genuine warmth with the machine-like handshake and stereotyped welcome sometimes met with that had a chilling effect upon people.

Handshake in Business

Passing to his next topic, Dr. Crews said, "Men in business are governed by the principle of competition, sell one against the other, each trying to make all he can out of business. I am not sure whether that principle is necessary or not. I seriously question it. There is a word I like better, that is co-operation. If we carried on our affair in the spirit of co-operation men ought to dwell side by side in business, and at the same time have friendly feelings for one another."

Dr. Crews said that in genuine neighborliness men would put into practical application the spirit of Jesus Christ. Instead of contending for everything that seemed due them, it would be better at times to show a willingness to yield to others.

Goodwill in Politics

"How much we need that kindliness and goodwill in political relations! We see one nation arrayed against another, one nation hating another. I am sorry to see that spirit of hatred continued and fostered. Shall we continue to hate the Germans, to take every possible opportunity of saying nasty things against them? God forbid. Patriotism is a fine thing. We admire that quality in men. It is splendid to see men who love their country and who are true to the flag; but that doesn't mean we must hate other countries. It has been heard said that Great Britain and the United States could whip the world. What would they whip the world for? I like it better that Great Britain and the United States could save the world. Do you know that seven-eighths of the missionaries in foreign lands have been sent out from those two countries?"

Dr. Crews referred to the increasing use and spread of the English language. "It seems as if God was behind this movement, as if His salvation was to be proclaimed to the people of the world in the English language."

Ecclesiastical Handshaking

While Dr. Crews regretted the divisions in the church he pointed out that relations were more friendly than they used to be. Members of one church were seeing good in other churches, and that they were engaged in the same work.

"There is so little difference between the evangelical churches that we can confidently expect that we shall have unity. In the meantime let us shake hands."

The simile "Like a mighty army moves the church of God" from this old hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers," Dr. Crews described as poetic license rather than truth. The church was moving like so many separate squads. The reason the Allies succeeded under Foch was because the armies under his command moved together under one well-arranged plan.

Speaking of the handshake of personal reconciliation, Dr. Crews said that often old friendships are disrupted, sometimes over trifles, and men who were friends pass each other without speaking.

"The man who refuses to forgive, breaks down the bridge he must pass over, because we all need to be forgiven. The unforgiving man or woman should never repeat the Lord's Prayer. "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us." What an awful thing to say, and as we hope to be forgiven bye and bye let us also forgive.

Dr. Crews closed with a reference to the figurative handshake of God as another form of personal reconciliation.

"'I held out my hand to you, and you would not heed,'" he quoted. "I don't know anything sadder or more pathetic in the Bible than that, men refusing the outstretched hand of God, our loving Father. You wouldn't treat your neighbor in that way."

The special music by the choir under the leadership of Mr. Leslie Unitt was impressively sung, including an unaccompanied anthem whose fine harmonies were very effectively brought out. Two solos by Maurice Park were the outstanding musical features of the service.

STRAYING HUSBANDS ALMOST ALWAYS COME BACK LIKE THE CAT

By vOY J. GIBBONS

CHICAGO, May 7.—Out of every ten men who leave their wives for other women, nine return, begging to be forgiven.

Statistics prove it.

This is according to Mrs. Josephine H. Lawrence, director of the Cook County Social Service Bureau, whose principal business is keeping families united.

No contested divorce suit gets into the Cook County courts that Mrs. Lawrence hasn't investigated. She's against divorce in all its forms, especially if there are children. Even if a husband has strayed, she opposes it. "You may not want to forgive him—you'd better, though—but as long as he's your husband, you can make him support the family. Divorcing an errant husband is the biggest mistake a woman can make—compel him to pay." Thus Mrs. Lawrence.

Let Them Roam

What makes husbands stray? "It's a primitive urge," says this authority. "They want to be free for a spell. Let them roam. All the chances are they'll be back again."

The time a man's in the greatest peril of being "vamped," Mrs. Lawrence says, is after the third year of marriage, and also after there are several babies in his home. "And 95 per cent of these cases arise," she adds, "because the wife doesn't take the right care of herself. She becomes careless in dress and appearance."

But after the "vamp's" got a man it isn't so easy for her to hold him. Why not?

"Well, for one thing," says Mrs. Lawrence, "the probabilities are he liked his wife's cooking best. That's a big reason. And he misses the sound of her voice. An awful lonesomeness settles upon a person who's separated from one he's lived with for years in intimate association.

Animals of Environment

Most men, too, are animals of environment, but having created one environment for themselves, they can't get used to a new one. Nor are deserting husbands ever so bad that they fail to feel the pangs of remorse, or the longing to undo the harm they've done.

"Regeneration generally begins to manifest itself about the second month, and the average runaway husband reappears at home two or three months later, the additional time being necessary to confirm him in his first estimate of his own wickedness."

Mrs. Lawrence's initial rule for a happy married life is:

"Marry for love and work for silver.

"Prematrimonial luxury," she warns, "makes the risks greater. The couple will get on all the better later if the road's a little rough at the start, because it will make them careful.

Mrs. Lawrence's position perhaps has no counterpart in the world.

She has:

Listened to 100,000 divorce complaints.

Reconciled 50,000 couples.

Found homes for hundreds of abandoned children.

Provided shelter for more unwed mothers than she can remember.

Brought aid to thousands of prisoners.

Supervised a visiting nurses' staff.

Cured great numbers of dope victims.

Looked after countless stray dogs and cats.

Carried her work, as a volunteer, into many rural districts.

All this is the 13 years that she has directed the destines of the Cook County Social Service Bureau, which she created.

CATS

due to a semicircular arrangement of canals behind the ears, possess an unerring instinct of direction toward home. You simply can't lose a cat, try as you may. If the distance is within its power to travel, 'twill "come back" every time.

MEN

married or single, possess a highly developed homing instinct, probably born of the time when they sought their respective caves in prehistoric wilds. Once established in a home, no matter what the outside attractions, back the average man will come.

The success of Dr Drew is regarded as of extreme importance. The scientists now propose to work backward and find the cause of the growth

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

"Yes, sir, I have. I have also completed some of yours. Coming away from the offic of my attorney, I noticed the office of your attorney right across the hall, so I dropped in and accepted service of the complaint in action for the foreclosure of your confounded old mortgage. This time your suit is going to stick! Furthermore, as I jogged down Main Street, I met Judge Morton of the Superior Court, and made him promise that if the suit should be filed this afternoon he would take it up on his calendar to-morrow morning and render a judgment in your favor."

"By George," Parker declared, apparently puzzled, "one gathers the impression that you relish parting with your patrimony when you actually speed the date of de parture.'

Mrs. Parker took Don Mike by the lapel of his coat. "You have a secret," she charged.

He shook his head.

"You have," Kay challenged. "The intuition of two women cannot be gainsaid."

Farrel took each lady by the arm and with high, mincing steps, simulating the utmost caution in his advance, he led them a little way down the veranda out of hearing of the husband and father.

"It isn't a secret," he whispered, "because a secret is something which one has a strong desire to conceal. However, I do not in the least mind telling you the cause of the O-be-joyful look that has aroused your curiosity. Please lower your heads and incline your best ears toward me. There! I rejoice because I have the shaggy old wolf of Wall Street, more familiarly known as John Parker, beaten at his favorite indoor sport of high and lofty finance. 'Tis sad, but true. The old boy's a gone fawn. Le roi est mort! vive le roi!"

Kaya's eyes danced. "Really, Miguel?"

"Not really or actually, Kay, but—er—morally certain."

"Oh!" There was disappointment in her voice. Her mother was looking at Don Mike sharply, shrewdly, but she said nothing, and Farrel had a feeling that his big moement had fallen rather flat.

"How soon will John be called upon to bow his head and take the blow?" Mrs. Parker finally asked. "Much as I sympathize with you, Miguel, I dislike the thought of John hanging in suspense, as it were."

"Oh, I haven't quite made up my mind," he replied. "I could do it within three days, I think, but why rush the execution? Three months hence will be ample time. You see," he confided, "I like you all so well that I plan to delay action for six months or a year, unless, of course, you are anxious for an excuse to leave the ranch sooner. If you really want to go as soon as possible, of course I'll get busy and cook Senor Parker's goose, but——"

"You're incorrigible!" the lady declared. "Procrastinate, by all means. It would be very lonely for you without us, I'm sure."

"Indeed, it would be. That portion of me which is Irish would picture my old hacienda alive at night with ghosts and banshees."

Mrs. Parker was looking at him thoughtfully; seemingly she was not listening. What she really was doing was saying to herself: "What marvelous teeth he has and what an altogether debonair, captivating young rascal he is, to be sure! I cannot understand why he doesn't melt John's business heart. Can it be that under that gay, smiling, lovable surface John sees something he doesn't quite like? I wonder."

As they entered the waiting automobile and started for home, Farrel, who occupied the front seat with the chauffeur, turned and faced the Parkers. "From this day forward," he promised them, "we are all going to devote ourselves to the serious task of enjoying life to the utmost. For my part, I am not going to talk business or Japanese immigration any more. Are you all grateful?"

"We are," they cried in unison.

He thanked them with his mirthful eyes, faced around in his seat, and, staring straight ahead, was soon lost in day dreams. John Parker and his wife exchanged glances, then both looked at their daughter, seated between them. She, too, was building castles in Spain!

When they alighted from the car before the hacienda, Mrs. Parker lingered until the patio gate had closed on her daughter and Farrel; then she drew her husband down beside her on the bench under the catalpa tree.

"John, Miguel Farrel says he has you beaten."

"I hope so, dear," he replied feelingly "I know of but one way out for that young man, and if he has discovered it so readily I'd be a poor sport indeed not to enjoy his victory."

"You never really meant to take his ranch away from him, did you, John?"

"I did, Kate. I do. If I win, my victory will prove to my entire satisfaction that Don Miguel Jose Federico Noriaga Farrel is a throwback to the Manana family, and in that event, my dear, we will not want him in ours. We ought to improve our blood-lines, not deteriorate them."

"Yet you would have sold this valley to that creature Okada."

"Farrel has convinced me of my error there. I have been anti-Jap since the day Farrel was thrown from his horse and almost killed—by a Jap."

"I'm sure Kay is in love with him, John."

ANNUAL MEETING OF GOLDEN LINKS

Methodist Mission Circle of Millbrook Elects Officers — Good Year's Work.

Millbrook, May 7. — The annual meeting of the "Golden Links" Mission Circle of the Methodist Church was held at the parsonage, the president, Marjorie Skitch, in the chair. During the opening devotional period, Psalm 67 was read for a Scripture Lesson, and Rev. Mr. Tucker led in prayer. In the absence of the Secretary, Mrs. Cecil Hubbeard, who has resigned her position, the minutes of the last meeting were read by Miss Hattie Barnard. Miss Ella Elson presided at the piano for the evening. The annual reports were called for, following the Watch Tower when a number of Heralds reported for the mission fields, the secretary reporting that a total of 9 meetings had been held throughout the year with a membership roll of 31, including three life members, Mrs. J. W. Walsh, Miss Lottie Luxon and Miss E. C. Hawken. An autograph quilt is being worked and will be sold to increase the funds; 7 new members had been gained during the year, and a box of good cheer had been sent to Miss Hawken for the Ruthenian pupils in the Kolokreeka Home and Boarding School as well as personal gifts for herself, at Christmas time.

The treasurer, Miss Stella Pethick, reported a balance on hand of $36.70 and a donation of $15 received from a warm personal friend of the circle brought the amount up to a little over the $50 required, the girls being responsible for that sum each year tawards Miss Hawken's salary. Rev. Mr. Tucker then conducted the election of officers, the following being the list for the ensuing year:

Superintendent, Mrs. J. L. Byam.
President, Miss Marjorie Skitch.
1st Vice-President, Miss Martha Lunn.
2nd Vice-President—Miss Ella Elson.
Recording-Secretary — Miss May Byam.
Corresponding Secretary — Miss H. Barnard.
Treasurer, Miss Stella Pethick.
Organist, Miss May Byam.
Superintendent Christian Stewardship, Mrs. H. Hunter.

In the absence of Mrs. Byam further arrangements for a number of business details were left over until the next meeting. The annual report schedules, which must be filled out now, and returned to the Branch Treasurer, Mrs. Dr. Irvine, of Lindsay, were attended to by Misses E. Elson and S. Pethick, and the meeting dismissed with the benediction.

Mrs. Tucker gave a treat of delicious homemade candy before the members left for home.

IMMIGRANTS SPENT DAY READING THEIR BIBLES

TORONTO, May 7 (Special to The Examiner). — Aboard the immigrant train, the Hebrideans spent Sunday reading their Bibles. The party is due in Toronto to-night.

This Morning

Millions removed the film

You know them by their whiter teeth

When you see pretty teeth, remember this.

There is now a new way of teeth cleaning. Millions of people employ it. All the world over leading dentists advise it.

It will do for you what it does for others. The results will amaze and delight you. A ten-day test to prove this will be sent you if you ask.

That dingy film

Teeth are made dingy by a film—that viscous film you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays.

Food stains, etc., discolor it, then it forms dingy coats. Tartar is based on film.

Film also holds food substance to ferment and form acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

That's why few escaped tooth troubles, and why beautiful teeth were seen less often than now. No old-time tooth paste could effectively fight film.

Now different

Now you can combat it. Dental science has found two effective ways. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods by many careful tests. Then a new-type tooth paste was created, based on modern research, and these two great film destroyers were embodied in it.

That tooth paste is called Pepsodent. Careful people of some 50 nations are employing it today.

Other needs

Research proved other things essential. So Pepsodent multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Pepsodent is bringing a new dental era through these unique effects.

New beauty comes

Pepsodent brings whiter teeth, cleaner, safer teeth, and quickly. One week will prove this to you.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

Compare your teeth then with your teeth today, and let the results decide for you. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

How a Toronto Doctor on an Investment of $25,000 Stands to Make a Million

If you knew positively that gold existed all over a wide area—that diamond drilling and other work proved the existence of this gold, what would you do?

Wouldn't you just put every possible cent you could get together to develop that gold?

Wouldn't you do as one Toronto doctor did who was convinced that Lake Shore would become a valuable mine?

To secure all the stock he could lay his hands on, he borrowed until he couldn't borrow another cent.

He sold everything which wasn't required for his daily needs until he eventually had about $25,000 invested in Lake Shore.

That was seven years ago—to-day his holdings, exclusive of dividends, are worth approximately $350,000, and within the next three to five years should be worth a million.

Extend your vision a few years hence as the Toronto doctor did, and see the gold on the property referred to above being produced and returning you in dividends alone many times what the shares cost.

When some of the best known mines were first discovered no one had any idea, or any means of knowing, what they contained.

Conditions since then have changed. Owing to the knowledge gained through the development of other mines it is possible now by means of diamond drilling to know where gold exists on a property and to a certain extent approximately in what quantities.

Over $500,000 has been spent in developing the property of the Matachewan Canadian Gold, Limited.

And the diamond drilling, in addition to 19,000 feet of other work on this property, has disclosed the existence of gold in quantities which justifies the opinion the Matachewan Canadian will develop into one of the great mines of the continent.

Can we verify this statement by actual evidence?

Yes, to your entire satisfaction.

We don't care how skeptical you may be, we can show you the proof, and convince you that the gold is there. In addition to a great amount of other work seventy diamond drill holes have been put down on this property—not in one particular section, mind you, but all along the mineral zone for more than a quarter of a mile.

In only one or two cases has commercial gold not been encountered.

The "logs" of some drillings show commercial ore bodies 25 to 30 feet in width, and anyone is privileged to examine these "logs" in our office.

From what evidence we have we are firmly convinced that the Matachewan Canadian Mines, Limited, should develop into the class of such mines as Hollinger, Dome and McIntyre.

The Matachewan Gold Area was discovered in 1916 by the late Sam Otisse, one of the best known prospectors in Canada.

It is situated in the Temiskaming District, and is reached by the Temiskaming and Ontario Railway.

As you will see by referring to the prospectus, the Company has one of the strongest boards of directors ever associated with any mining enterprise.

The purpose of the present offering of 600,000 shares of stock at $1.00 is to further develop and mine the ore that is known to exist and to build a 300 ton mill as is proposed by the managing director.

You should write for prospectus and other information regarding this unusual offering.

SEYMOUR FARMERS BELIEVE IN DRURY FOR THEIR LEADER

Meeting Held on Saturday Evening to Organize For the Coming Campaign.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 7—The farmers of Seymour township as represented in the membership of political wing of the U.F.O., have faith in the Drury Government and will work to a man to secure the return of the Premier to power. That was the spirit shown at a gathering held here Saturday night at which every man in the large audience was a representative farmer and at which the Progressives organized for the campaign by the selection of chairmen for the various sub-divisions.

The meeting was held in the committee rooms which the Progressives have rented in the Ferris block. The chair was occupied by Deputy Reeve Nelson of Seymour and H. Wood of Polling Division No. 8 acted as secretary. Ira Loucks, president of the U.F. O. Club of Seymour, is vice-president of the Progressives.

The chairmen appointed in the different wards were as follows:

No 1—P. B. Nelson.
No. 2—Charles McCoun.
No. 3 —Ernest Craighead.
No. 4—A. Milne.
No 5 —G. W. Anderson.
No 6—D. Peterick.
No. 7—P. Scott.
No. 8—H. Wood.

Each chairman was empowered to select the members of his own committee, enlisting, if possible, the active service of every supporter of the party in his district.

Faith in Drury

Following the selection of the chairmen there was an informal discussion of the situation but the unanimous sentiment of the audience showed a friendly feeling toward the present Provincial Government. Premier Drury, Attorney-General Raney, Minister of Highways Biggs and Minister of Agriculture Doherty were singled out for special commendatory mention. Some of the members present declared that not only is Premier Drury the best Prime Minister Ontario has ever had but that as a statesman he is the equal of any man in the public life of Canada today.

The road policy of Minister Biggs was approved and one of those present declared that Hon. Mr. Doherty is beyond question the most successful Minister of Education, that he has done more in the interests of the farmer than any official who has ever held that important position.

Not Extravagant

Secretary Wood called the attention to an article which appeared recently in The Farmers' Advocate, a publication which takes no sides in politics, in which it was pointed out that all of the main items of expenditure which originated with the Government, had in the end been sanctioned by the members of both branches of the opposition.

"How then," asked Mr. Wood, "can the opposition consistently charge the Government with extravagance?"

Commend Temperance Policy

Attorney-General Raney was also commended for his uncompromising attitude with regard to the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act. Reference was made to the stand taken by Hon. Howard Ferguson with regard to prohibition, one delegate asserting that the Conservative leader is resorting to the old political strategy of juggling this question.

'And that" remarked Secretary Wood, "was a policy that marked the beginning of the downfall of the Liberal party in Ontario. They had several unmistakable expressions of opinion from the people on this issue and lacked the courage to act."

"The attitude of Mr. Ferguson on prohibition," said Chairman Nelson, 'is causing the party the loss of hundreds of temperance Conservatives."

Premier Drury Coming

Premier Drury will speak in Campbellford during the campaign. The meeting will be held in the open air as it is felt that no building in town would be large enough to hold the crowd that will turn out to hear him.

R. McCracken of Colborne, is County President and S. T. Tinson of Brighton is County Secretary of the Progressive party for Northumberland East in which Wesley Montgomery M.L.A., is again the candidate.

There will be a meeting held in town at an early date to organize the followers of the party in Campbellford.

FRANCE AND BELGIUM CRITICIZED FOR ACTION

LONDON, May 7 (Canadian Press). — The Cabinet, it is understood, discussed to-day the situation created by the action of France and Belgium in replying independently to the German reparations note without consulting their Allies, to whom, as well as to themselves, the note was addressed.

This situation is regarded by the press as an extremely awkward one, and there is some rather sharp criticism of the conduct of the Ruhr.

"What passes the British comprehension is that the two Allies, in taking upon themselves the sole responsibility for the acceptance or rejection of the German offer relating to common credit and common guarantees, should imagine that they are acting in conformity with either the spirit or the letter of peace treaties or with the principle of common solidarity in their execution."

People who purchase fish from Indians do so at the risk of prosecution, Chief Newhall informed the Examiner to-day. One squaw made the rounds yesterday, but disappeared before the police received word of her merchandising.

ANNIVERSARY ST. ANDREW'S IS OBSERVED

EXCELLENT MUSIC

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church celebrated its 90th anniversary yesterday in special services, being favored with the presence of a former pastor, Rev. J. G. Potter, of Montreal. Mr. Potter, who was very well known as pastor here, left Peterborough in September, 1910, and is now in McVicker Memorial Church, Montreal, one of the largest Presbyterian Churches in that city.

Yesterday's services were well attended, every seat being comfortably filled, and very thoughtful discourses were heard. In the evening, the speaker chose as his text, Hebrews xii., 2: "Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." This clause applies to the many problems of the Christian Church in this age, he said. Christians must follow the great example that Christ has set before them. If the Church of to-day is to reach its highest pinnacle of usefulness it must cast aside every impediment, scorn the handicaps, run the race and fight the good fight of faith with its eyes constantly on the leader, the author and finisher of the faith of the Church.

Referring to the hymn which reads "One step enough for me," the speaker pointed out that this spirit does not typify the most progressive Christian. The highest type of Christian life is not that which gropes in the darkness. It is no sign of confidence in God to act as men who are up against a stone wall, and cannot see, or do not ask to see, the distant scene. "The kindly light we all need in our day," he said, "is not a dark lantern that will let us see the one step we are going to take now, but it is the sunburst of our Father's leadership." God wants us to take into account all of life; He leads and guides us to that distant scene.

St. Andrew's Church should go forward from the vantage ground of this 90th anniversary feeling the call of God to nobler life and stronger efforts for His kingdom.

In the past centuries, and even in the last 90 years, cities and empires have risen and have disintegrated, but the Church of Christ remains steadfast. The world needs the gospel the Church brings. The world needs the love the Church preaches. St. Andrew's with its experience should be in a position to seize the possibilities which lie at hand.

Parents especially need to see the distant scene, continued the speaker. They must look ahead and build for the future. It means many a year of self-denial, but it is a splendid thing to see fathers and others recognize the importance of the distant scene. It is worth while in the world to develop strong and noble manhood and womanhood.

In his concluding words the reverend speaker made an eloquent appeal for renewed effort in the new decade in St. Andrew's Church. He urged that the members of the church get the great vision that Jesus Christ had of a saved world, and that they determine to be participators in the work.'

Special Music.

The choir, under the direction of Mr. John Crane, rendered special musical selections, appropriate to the occasion. The anthem was an extract from La Gallia (Gounod), Miss Kathleen Gorrie taking the solo part. Miss Gorrie was also heard in a beautifully rendered soprano solo from "Messiah." An unaccompanied hymn by the choir was "Oh love that will not let me go."

ORGANIZED LABOR HALTING PROGRESS

Times Says Policy is Against Canadian Interests and is Anti-Imperial.

NEW YORK. May 7.—(Canadian Press).—Organized Labor in Canada is blamed by times for lack of immigration into Dominion. In referring to statements made in House of Commons recently that Canada can assimilate 400,000 immigrants a year, Times asks, "why, then does not she allow them to come in according to those judicious selective processes which she has reputation of using? Why has minister of interior proposed to Parliament plans that can result in introduction of only scanty part of assimicable number of immigrants."

Answering its own questions, it says, "because organized labor for bids. Agricultural laborers have to be admitted to conciliate the powerful farmers. To middle class is grant ed quota of domestic servants. Organized Labor orders door shut against all other labor and so hopes to maintain its monopoly. That policy is intelligible and is practiced in United States, highly developed industrial country. Canadian situation is different.

"Canada has an immense area and sparse population, is she to be content with being mainly agricultural community? That unilateral growth, that neglect or hampering of industrial growth must be act on farming which would benefit greatly from springing up of towns and cities of industry to be fed by farmers. It injures railroads which have had so great part in building up Dominion. It checks influx of foreign capital. Incidentally it is an anti-imperial policy, since immigration is one of recognized and earnestly advocated remedies for British unemployment. Canadian Organized Labor should have learned from United States that higher industrial development, greater is power of organized labor."

TORONTO, May 7. — (Canadian Press).—The action that the Ontario Government is to take upon Mr. Raney's resignation from the post of Attorney-General has not yet been determined. When spoken to late last evening at his home at Crown Hill, the Hon. Mr. Drury stated that the matter was so far purely one between the Attorney-General and himself, and that he had not yet decided upon the course which he was to follow.

"Mr. Raney," said the Premier, "placed a letter in my hands, stating his desire to retire from public life, and offered to me his resignation either now or to stay until after the election."

It is understood now that the matter has not yet come before the Cabinet, and there is yet to be learned the attitude which the colleagues of the Attorney-General will take in regard to it.

SAVED FROM A SAVAGE HORDE

LONDON, May 7.—Saved from a fate even worse than death, Mollie Ellis ,17-year-old daughter of a British major stationed in India, is back in civilization. But the smile in her voice and the twinkle in her eye are gone.

A few months ago she was a happy school girl at Plymouth, England. Then she went to visit her parents at an army post on the northwest frontier of India.

At 2 o'clock one morning, a band of marauding Afridis, a wild tribe living in the foothills of the Himalayas ,swept down on the little settlement while Major Ellis was away, killed his wife and captured his daughter. The girl, bound and gagged, was forced to witness the murder of her mother.

Then she was carried off into the wilds of the mountains practically inaccessible to white men and held as hostage in reprisal for activities of troops led by her father against the natives .Often she wished she were dead.

The whole machinery of the British government was put into action. Soldiers scoured the country. Friendly natives joined in the hunt. Kuli-Khan, a native official, got a clue from a Mujlah ,a Mohammedan religious leader. It led to the girl's rescue.

She is recuperating now among friends.

SCHOOL ISSUE

ly last week, is very opportune. This article deals with "the proper time to perform public work." I qudte parts of it as follows:

"Broadly speaking, we have as much common labor as we ever had. The trouble is that it is not productively employed. No one knows and no one can estimate with even moderate accuracy how many able-bodied men who ought to be working on the railroad, making steel, mining copper, putting up dwelling houses or raising wheat, that are tarring endless boulevard roads, grooming public golf courses, erecting showy city halls, county court houses ,schools ,etc. The most casual scrutiny of the tremendous amount of public work now underway in the country makes it obvious that productive industry's most pitiless competitor for labor is the state itself. Not the state alone, but most of its counties, towns and cities are doing their full share, and more, in snatching away from industry, manufacturing ,transportation and housing operations the labor that should be theirs by economic right. It is a commonplace of good economics that great public works, betterments and improvements should be made, as far as possible, in periods of industrial depression. At such times it is possible not only to take advantage of materially lowered costs but to lessen the hardships of widespread unemployment. This principle, everywhere accepted, appears just now to be almost universally disregarded. Though state competition begins at the bottom with unskilled labor, it by no means ends there. It withdraws from industry a proportionate amount of technical and supervisory effort. All along the line this competition is felt. The state must have materials as well as labor; and as a rule its bidding for what it wants is not nearly so restrained as that of men in charge of private operations. The state will be served, and up go the prices."

"The price of money wherewith to finance these great undertakings is even more effected by this ruinous competition than is the price of materials. Public bodies can borrow money much cheaper than private corporations. In the more thickly settled parts of the country municipal obligations are sold on a five per cent. basis, or a trifle higher or lower, depending on various circumstances. In the same regions in which this rate prevails, long-established industries and well-managed minor industries and public utilities must pay at least five and one-half to seven per cent. to provide working capital. To cap the climax, these tax-ridden corporations are required to pay increased taxes to help perpetuate the labor, capital and material competition that is ham-stringing them. The sooner the great mass of voters begins to perceive the causes that underlie unstisfactory conditions, the sooner they will call a halt. Public extravagance, especially when practiced at the most inopportune time, has graver consequences than are at first apparent. Its primary effects is to increase taxes. It secondary and less spectacular effects are to discourage private enterprise and to choke off industrial and agricultural sources of wealth. Drunken motor drivers are a smaller menace than trouble-blind optimists who think that a sunny day means that there will never be another storm. This variety of "Pollyanna" feels keenly but thinks little. The war is over and paid for, he babbles. This is the richest country in the world. Its resources are inexhaustible. Nothing can touch us. Down with the crape hangers. Full speed ahead."

In conclusion, (as Minister would say as he starts all over again), we are an easy-going people, almost any person who cultivates a fad can get enough followers to get it put over. By passive resistance we are getting soft. Once we demanded all our rights—and got part of them. Now we surrender than take the trouble to fuss over it. Courage without applause is what we need to cultivate. Let us quietly brace up and give a few years holidays to the public agitators and spendthrifts. Keep cool, rest easy, think before your leap and then think again. Get out of the automobile and walk a bit will do us all good.

Do you remember all the boosters for the bridge? Nobody wants to father it now, has not a friend. Would the public repeat the Prince of Wales school? Very doubtful. We might also have been loaded up with a costly experimental sewerage disposal plant, but our City Engineer kept his foot on the brake. We need another brake now.

LONDON.

THE gray fog chrysalis has buret into a butterfly! Or, to put it more concretely, London is just crazy about clothes.

Women's clothes. Stage clothes. Scanty clothes. Snappy clothes. Gorgeous clothes. Clothes that are only skirts of silken floss. Clothes that are nothing but puffs of swan's down. Clothes that glitter. Clothes that sparkle. Clothes that hint and reveal and lure and retreat. Clothes like whizziest Paris and jazziest New York. London loves 'em!

There's the point—that staid, solid old John Bull, who always has been a bit more conservative than anybody else in his enthusiasms, is proving himself, after all, a blood brother to Broadway and the boulevards.

He's rearing back in his stall at the revue and the musical comedy and the cabaret, and he's wearing out his hands applauding cuties in the most daring raiment. They can't make the raiment too daring for John. At least, not yet. He's out-Twisting Oliver in his shouts for "more"—brevity!

What's the answer? Reaction to the war? Envy of Paris? Ambition to emulate New York? Or just plain high spirits?

It may be any or all of these, but the fact is that this Winter has inaugurated such a clothes transformation as the London stage has never known. Listen to what's happening:

Why?

Partly because she's a beauty and a sylph, but mostly because of what she has on and what she's left off.

Miss Dickson whirls out first in her famous "Falling Leaf" cloak. It's a stunning garment of orange tissue, shot with Autumn leaves of red and gold and bronze and orange. On her head she wears a snug little Gaby Dealys turban, crowned with five enormous ostrich plumes. Her audiences gasp and cheer.

The cloak falls. Miss Dickson emerges a feather and a flame. She wears a skirt of crimson petals edged with ostrich. It stands out like a sail. Her beaded bodice clings close. It shimmers with emeralds and diamonds. London has never seen anything like this before. And London is not shocked. London dotes on the spectacle where, twelve months ago, the censors would have intervened.

The climax comes with Miss Dickson in the role of a glorified hula-hula dancer. Here is no "grass skirt." Woven of glossiest silk and flashing brilliants, it makes scarcely a pretense of hiding her twinkling legs. She shimmies—and Piccadilly is swept off its feet.

Another beauty whose exotic clothes are exciting London is Miss Heather Thatcher, a dancer. Her costumes were designed by Princess Andrew of Russia. Her interpretation of an Egyptian harem dance calls for a creation distinguished by stencil slits in waist, trouserettes and sleeves. It is advertised as the most daring costume ever shown in England.

Then there are Betty Shields, with her extravagant "screen skirt"; Dorothy Deans, whose bouffant gown appears to be modestly old fashioned until she trips partly out of it in tights; and Phyllis Garton, a vivid brunette, with a skirt of loose panels in startling colors.

Your Broadway veteran, who has watched new edition after edition of follies, frolics and revues; who has grown accustomed to producing competition that gives him effects more and more startling each season; who has learned to yawn at barefoot dancers and nod during semi-nude numbers—the sophisticated New Yorker might not find Dickson, Thatcher, Shields and company particularly quickening to his pulses.

Neither, perhaps, would Parisians. They, too, are used to extremes on the stage. Harem dances and "screen skirts" are no novelty to the city that applauded as "artistic" the appearance last Winter of Mlle. Mitzy and Mlle. Dhorlys in nothing but a few fringes of beads.

But to London, never disposed toward undue frivolity and more conservative than ever about extravagant fashions during the war; to steady-going, humdrum, quiet London the new stage styles are breath-taking.

They were new to London because, previous to 1914, all stage styles were more moderate than they are to-day. And during the five years of fighting that followed London maintained and even increased that moderation. Soldiers home on leave flung themselves desperately into Piccadilly's pleasures. Revues were the most popular form of entertainment during the war. They took the mind off the front. But they were not elaborate revues. John Bull was putting every cent he had into shells and airplanes. He frowned on dollars spent on finery.

London, emerging from the war, has been faster getting back to normal than some countries. But war censorship still held on. Censorship closed the dancing clubs early. Censorship limited the drinking hours. And censorship—both official and the censorship of public opinion—seemed to prevail over the stage, too.

He was a shrewd showman who, this year, analyzed London's Rialto and decided it was due for a change; who was willing to risk censorship in a radical departure from the usual type of British musical show; and who foresaw, furthermore, that the British theatregoing public would "fall" and "fall" hard—as the Americans say—for the change.

There is a story going the rounds of the green rooms that the change was inspired by the experience of one producer in sending to the United States a company typical of the sort that had been hailed along the Strand as something original and very snappy.

The English producer thought surely America would hail London's best with tumultuous bravos. He got the shock of his life. For New York gave his show one look—and yawned. His stuff was, he was told, so old and so conservative that it couldn't be anything but a "diver." And that is exactly what it was.

That producer took a tip from his failure. So did some others. They examined the New York revues. They saw what New York considered original and dressy—and undressy. It was something several degrees beyond anything in London. And the producers said:

"If this goes big in New York, why wouldn't it go big in London? If Broadway likes and approves these garish gowns, these wild dances, these beauties in tights and spangles, why wouldn't Piccadilly approve them? Why, in fact, shouldn't we go Broadway 'one better'?"

So that, now, is what London theatrical managers are trying to do—go Broadway "one better." And London cabarets, music halls and private clubs are following in the path blazed by the revue promoter. They are giving their patrons all the shocks they can muster in sensational tableaux, dances and spectacles. And their patrons are not shocked. They like it.

Murray's is one of the leading night clubs in London. A year ago, when Scotland Yard was waging war on bohemia, Murray's was rather decorous. It had a jazz orchestra, and it had dancing, and it had prizes spun from a roulette wheel. But it omitted any cabaret features. The manager believed his guests did not care for anything so "Parisian" or "American."

This year he has changed his policy. The bright star at Murray's is Miss Dorothy Hazel, specialty dancer, and Miss Hazel's specialty dance is performed in a costume that makes her look like nothing so much as a brilliant Bird of Paradise. Her short skirt and colonial bodice are made of maribou fur as downy as a humming bird's throat. And atop her golden curls is a little cap made of a bird's head.

Diners at Murray's forgot their dignity and craned their necks the first night Miss Hazel spun into the centre of the dance floor and pirouted for five minutes in this cute little suit. The manager probably held his breath. But he needn't have worried. She was a hit from the start—she and her costume. And now she has added to her wardrobe a number of other creations more starting than the first.

"Have you seen that pippo at Murray's?" is the question one hears everywhere in the West End these days. And along with it are, "Let's toddle down to the Winter Garden, Freddy, and get a Parisian thrill!"

SCOTS WINNERS OF THE FIRST ROUND

The Thistles defeated the Woollens in the first round of the Gordon Cup series by a score of 2 to 0. The game was played at the Oval, and owing to the other attractions there was a very poor crowd on hand.

The Woollens played with ten men, Reid, their usual right half, not showing up, while the Thistles had Anderson at back replacing Service. The Woollens won the toss, and aided by the wind and Perry's long drives, were soon making their presence felt, and Fenner was having a very busy time. The Scots now began to settle down. Richmond was plying his forwards with ground passes, which little Burgess was accepting and making tracks for Williams, but Perry came to the rescue. Chambers launched an attack, only to find Fenner and his backs equal to the occasion The Woollens were having all the play, and corner after corner was taken, but Fenner was in great form, and assisted by a good pair of backs. The Woollens could not score. The Thistles' goalkeeper never was in better form, saving his citadel in great style. The pressure was relieved by Stewart McMillan. Richmond went away and sent a nice shot across the goal, which Burgess failed to get hold of. Perry was again in the limelight by his returns, and Downes and Shaw were a source of danger. Anderson gave a corner, which Downes placed, but Chambers headed over the bar.

Upon resuming the Thistles had the wind, and Richmond soon gave Williams a sample of his shooting abilities. Backed up by a good trio of half-backs, the Thistles were having very much the best of the argument. Aided by some nice work by Hoggarth, Richmond evaded the attentions of Monkman and beat Williams with a nice shot. This put new life into the Woollens, and Chambers and Shaw were soon having a pop at Fenner, who gave a corner, which Gaskill took, and placed across the goal. Fenner again came to the rescue. Rae and Anderson were now playing in their best form, sending the ball up to the forwards, where Richmond, always on the alert, caused Williams some anxious moments. Hoggarth trapped the ball and gave it to McMillan, who scored a beautiful goal. The game now became very tame. The Thistles were in full control, and time arrived leaving them winners of the first round by 2 goals to 0. The teams:

Woollens — Williams; Perry; Cridland, Monkman, and Roberts; Gaskell, Shuttle, Chambers, Shaw, and Downes.

Referee, J. Clarke.

GUNNERS THE TEAM TO PLAY BELMONTS IN THE CLUB FINALS

Defeated the Firemen in Close Battle Saturday Evening — Final Game To-Night.

SCORE WAS 4 TO 3.

The Gunners won the undisputed right to play off with the Belmonts for club section honors when they defeated the Firemen by the score of 4 to 3 Saturday evening. The game was fast and light all the way, and a couple of times the Firemen nearly did the trick of sending across the tieing run.

The Gunners went strong at the bat in the first three innings while Dunkerly was a little off color. They chased across two in the first and one in each of the two following innings. Then the Firemen tightened up, and Dunkerly struck his stride and held the Gunners scoreless for the remainder of the game.

The Firemen got their runs in singles and scattered throughout the nine frames. One went across in the first. They nearly scored again in the second, having men on third and second. Their next run was added in the fifth. Again in that frame they were retired with men stranded on the runways. They repeated in the sixth with another run, and leaving two to die on the sacks. They missed a chance to tie the score in the eighth when again the hit needed to send a man from third to the counting square failed to loom up. The last man in the ninth was retired trying to steal home.

Dunkerly pitched well for the Firemen, with thirteen strike-outs, but he had difficulty in getting started. Piercy was in his usual form for the winners and received first-class support at all times.

The teams were:

Gunners—Ranger, c; Coursey, 1b; Kendry, ss; Wolff, 2b; Doughty, 3b; Piercy, p; Galvin, ss; Simmons, lf; Gilders r.f.

Firemen—Carr, 1b; Johnston, ss; Rose, ss; Gimblett, Sr., c; Connors, 3b. Gimblett, Jr., 2b; McBride, lf; Dunkerly, p; Mason, rf.

CARPENTIER WON BY A KNOCKOUT

PARIS, May 7. — (Canadian Press.)—Georges Carpentier knocked out Marcel Nilles in the eighth round of their scheduled 15-round bout for the French heavyweight title yesterday afternoon.

Although he won, Carpentier, according to ringside observers added nothing to his reputation. It was noticeable that the old Carpentier spirit was lacking.

Georges was in difficulty as early as the second round, and weathered the third round only through the inexperience and lack of combativity of his opponent. The experts opined that Carpentiers' attempt to stage a comeback although it ended in a victory for him, failed to demonstrate any of the fighting qualities required of a champion and that had the former French idol been facing a real battler, the fight would have ended in the second round, with Georges the loser.

In the second Nilles had the former champion groggy with body blows, but he lacked the initiative to finish his man who, with wide open mouth, looked the picture of defeat.

PETES AND OSHAWA PLAYED TIE GAME

Fast Game With Good Pitching Between the Oshawa Champs and the C.G.E. Crew.

The Williams Piano Company's softball team, winners of the Oshawa Indoor League, played a 2 to 2 tie game with the local C. G. E. nine Saturday evening. The visitors proved to be a fast outfit, although they are used to playing with an indoor ball smaller than that used by the local league. The large ball was used the first four innings, the small one the last three, so no advantage was gained or lost by either team.

Fowler, the musicians' twirler, kept the local batters baffled until near the end of the game. He had an express train delivery with lots of control. He retired fourteen via the strike-out route and allowed three scattered hits.

"Abbie" Rose was on the rubber for the locals and turned in an excellent performance against the Oshawa sluggers. He struck out nine and allowed only six hits.

There were only two minor errors made in the whole game, both being marked against the visitors.

The first four innings went scoreless, good fielding and excellent pitching keeping the sacks empty. The C. G. E. scored two in the fifth when they collected two hits. Oshawa came back strong though and chased across two also when they collected three hits, one going for a two-bagger. The homesters were struck out in order in their half of the sixth. The game was called in the sixth to give time for the Gunners-Firemen tilt.

Line-ups were:

C. G. E.—Primeau, ss; Rose, p; Dugan, 1b; Nelson, c; McElroy, 2b; Ranger, ss; Frost, 3b; McGee, lf; McCarney, rf.

Score by innings: R. H. E.

Heckman Again Master of the Situation—Held the Visitors Hitless For Five Frames—Big Crowd Out

SCORE WAS 5 TO 3.

With an appreciative crowd of 1,200 fans cheering them on, the Peterboro Central Ontario League team auspiciously opened their season on Saturday afternoon by defeating Leaside of the Western Section of the League by 5 runs to 3. In doing so the Petes showed greater strength defensively and offensively than last season's crew and revealed enough to convince the fans that Manager Solomon should have smooth working machine with which to battle with the teams of the Big Four section.

They both outfielded and outhit the Leaside gang, having two errors against four misplays chalked up against the visitors and seven hits to four, and considering the earliness of the season their performance was satisfactory in the extreme. Leaside are no weak opposition and the game afforded a good opportunity to size up the 1923 Petes, who should show consistent improvement as they round into shape.

Al Heckman pitching the first five innings for the Petes, started off like the sterling box artist he is, and without throwing a curve ball but depending altogether on splendid control set the Durant crew down without a hit or run during the five frames he occupied the hill top. Only three of the enemy reached the runways and but one got as far as third. "Sandy" Summerfeldt, the youngster who pitched for Cannington in the Tri-County League last year, took up the pitching burden in the sixth and ran into trouble right off the reel through his inability to locate the plate. He walked the first batters to face him but the crowd rooted vigorously for the recruit twirler to be given a chance and after Dillon had driven in two runs by a sharp single, Summerfeldt struck out the last two batters with the bases filled. Again in the ninth a walk and a couple of singles filled the bases and a pass sent in another run, but a fine catch by Legon saved the day. Summerfeldt causing the next batter to roll a weak grounder to Harrison to wind up the game. When he gets into shape and starts using a hook the Cannington boy should give a good account of himself.

It was a light day for the Peterboro infield. Collins and Helson who each played half the game at third had but three chances between them. Ansaldo's only fielding opportunity at short was a high fly which he grabbed with one hand in sensational style, while Johnston at second accepted his three chances nicely. Comolli and Harrison both handled themselves in good style at the initial sack, while the outfield grabbed off five of their six chances Legon breaking into senior company with two pretty catches, the second coming in the ninth with the bases loaded averted a lot of trouble.

Leaside used three pitchers, "Snakes" Hamilton last year with the Toronto Beavers being their opening selection. Hamilton seemed to be in mid season form, for he started curving them right off the reel and the benders looked queer to the Petes for a while, as it was their first game of the season at a hook. However, they got to the right hander for three runs in the four innings he worked. Lefty Maguire who did not look to be in condition yielded two runs in two innings and then gave way to Jim Breckenbridge another right hander who blanked the Petes in the last two innings.

Leaside with a strengthened pitching staff, their last year's infield intact and Norm Curzon added to the outfield, should give the Section A clubs a merry chase. Pat Mahoney the veteran second baseman has not yet struck his stride either in fielding or hitting but the rest of the inner guard worked very smoothly. Micky Murray handling seven chances in fine style and figuring in three double plays. Joe Dillon was the pivot in two of these, making two nice throws across the diamond to get the second man.

It was a fine workout for both teams and in addition provided the fans with a very good exhibition of ball, especially in view of the fact that the teams had not rounded into shape.

Although Jones, first up for Leaside in the first, got a life on Colling's fumble, Heckman fanned Murray, Curzon and Mahoney, leaving the lead off man stranded.

The Petes were more lucky. Ansaldo and Johnston whiffed, but Swanston got the first hit of the season a solid single to centre. Comolli walked and when Hoose threw into right field in an attempt to nip him off first, Swanston scored from second and Comolli reached third. Heckman walked and stole second, but Collins rolled to Mahoney.

Both teams went out in order in the second and Leaside were not dangerous in the third. The Petes however, got two in their half. Ansaldo singled past Murray to start with and when Johnston bunted for a sacrifice, Hamilton's throw to first hit the runner on the head and bounced into right field, Ansaldo scored from first and Johnston stopped at third. Swanston bunted to Hamilton and was out, Johnston being held at third. Comolli's long double to centre field score Johnston. Heckman was thrown out by Murray and Collins rolled to Lennon.

Hoose led off in the fourth for Leaside by walking and stealing second. Lennon fanned. Stevenson was tossed out by Johnston, Hoose going to third. Collins made a fast play on Hamilton's tap to retire the side.

Summerfeldt went to the rubber for the Petes in the sixth, while Helson took third base and Comolli and Harrison changed places. The ex-Tri-County League twirler was nervous on the go in and could not locate the plate. He at once filled the bases by walking Jones, Murray and Curzon. He averted trouble for a moment by fanning Mahoney but Dillon cracked a single to left centre, scoring Jones and Murray and going to second on the throw to third. Summerfeldt again filled the bases by hitting Hoose but got out of the hole by whiffing Smith and Stevenson.

The Petes went right out in their half and go tthe two runs back with Lefty Maguire pitching for Leaside. Mahoney started the fire works by making a two base wild throw on Comolli's roller. Summerfeldt walked and Helson caught the Leaside infield could with a safe bunt filling the bases. Wolfe's hot single over second scored Comolli and Summerfeldt, but Helson was snuffed out when he tried to score, while Murray was arguing about the play at third and Wolfe was double up trying to reach third.

Leaside did nothing in the seventh and eighth and the Petes were also held scoreless, although they had a great chance in their last turn at bat. With one out Comolli was hit and Summerfeldt's hot single handcuffed Smith. Helson hit to Smith but Mahoney dropped the short-stops toss for a force at second and everybody was safe. Wolfe's tap along the third base line was fielded by Hoose who tagged Comolli. With the bases loaded and the count 3 and 2, Harrison fanned for the third out.

Leaside made a strong bid to pull the game out of the fire in the ninth. With one down Cullerton walked and Breckenbridge singled to left. The bases were filled when Jones slashed a single past Harrison. When Murray drew a walk Cullerton strolled in with a run. Curzon's long high fly to left was neatly captured by Legon, Breckenbridge not attempting to score from third, and Mahoney grounded to Harrison for the final out of the game.

BIG BOXING BILL THURSDAY, MAY 10

Fans Requested to Reserve This Date For Lacrosse Club Smoker

With very kind co-operation from many sources the Peterboro Lacrosse Club are arranging for an evening of music and boxing in Victoria Hall on Thursday May 10th. Verne Morphet readily consented to look after a first part of minstrelsy, and Charlie Curtis is managing the entire "olio" or second part with the assistance of the boxing section of the Peterboro Amateur Athletic Association.

The boxing bill will include several surprises, and will be advertised in detail on Monday, but the fans are asked to keep Thursday night clear for this event. And just a brief word as to the objects of this musical-athletic smoker. The Lacrosse Club has been struggling along for two years thanks to the generous assistance of the Peterboro Amateur Athletic Association, the Central League Baseball team and other good friends. Under the presidency of Jim Skinner and "Doc" Sutton quite a string of young players have broken into the game and are making good progress. Naturally certain finances are required, but instead of asking for subscriptions this year President Vic Hamilton decided to put on a smoker. The P.A.A.A., Jake Solomon and the Baseball Club, Mr. Morphet and others have all volunteered their assistance more in fact than could be accepted, and it is hoped that the sporting fans will turn out a big crowd next Thursday night.

Toronto Lacrosse League Will Allow Five Substitutes in Junior Series

TORONTO, May 7.—Fred Wagborne, the evergreen lacrosse enthusiast and daddy of the Toronto & Suburban Lacrosse League, and one who in the past has endeavored to have the O.A.L.A. delegate pass favorably upon his motion to permit subs being inserted into the game at any time that the match is in progress, intends to show the experts of the older league that his ideas in this connection will improve the game in more ways than one. The announcement was made during the past week that the T.S. League would allow five substitutes in all series below that of the senior, while the latter will carry the three extra players. It has been argued by such men as Fred Whittemore, Fred Waghorne and others who have given unstintingly of their time in teaching the youth of the country the rudiments of lacrosse, that lads of the teen age are liable to do themselves injury when forced to play at top speed for a full twenty minute period. To get away from this objectionable feature from the standpoint of certain parents who have thus expressed themselves, the innovation will be tried out amongst the youngsters and if carried through without hitch will more than likely be brought up at the next Good Friday convention. The idea was tried out in the Desboro Cup game last season between Torontos and St. Simons and worked splendidly, but if the two teams facing each other are not too harmonious there is liable to be trouble in sending men into the play before the lad to be substituted has reached the penalty bench. The proposal to allow five subs in the youngster's series will also encourage lads to take up the game who under ordinary circumstances would be classed with the rooters.

Among the many famous figures of song and story who stand out in the record of mediaeval England, none is so luminous in the qualities of romance as that of Robin Hood. Looking down the dim centuries, the heroic and mysterious forest chieftain and his lovely sweetheart, Maid Marian, still live in the imagination of to-day. Time and the vagrant ways of fiction have surrounded them with perfect halo of thrilling adventure, lent them innumerable dignities, and made them the centure of a dozen lost causes. What more appealing, therefore, than Robin Hood and his gallant band of Sherwood Forest as the subject for a romance of the silver screen?

Douglas Fairbanks chose his subject well. The story told upon the screen, moreover, is an ingenious and unceasingly attractive combination of various romantic incidents which have been associated with the name of Robin Hood. It accepts the legend which held him to be the Earl of Huntingdon, returned from the Crusade and assuming the disguise of a forest bandit in order to checkmate the schemes of the usurper, Prince John, brother of Richard Coeur de Lion. Maid Marian is the Lady Marian of King Richard's Court. Guy of Gisbourne is the villain behind whom stands the sinister figure of the covetous and evil. John King himself, a great, bluff, hearty figure, holds Huntingdon close to his heart, but is led through Gisbourne's treachery to believe him unfaithful, when he seeks leave to return to England. Prince John pursues his wicked ways, and plans the death of Lady Marian, but Robin Hood and his merrie men, with whom is the mysterious knight later revealed as Richard comes home to rescue her. Summary justice is meted out to the evildoers, and the story ends on a note of pure romance — Robin and Marian in the great bridal chamber of Nottingham Castle, with the moonlight flooding in through the open casement, and a jocularly irate monarch knocking in vain at their door.

Fairbanks himself in the role of the redoubtable Robin succeeds in conveying a sharp sense of a high-spirited, indomitable personality, whose mettle nothing can crush, whose luck is unfailing, and whose daring and heroism meet infallible rich reward. His actual physical action throughout the picture is in itself something to astound, and when he accomplishes such feats as compel one's sober judgment to stamp as incredible, the illusion is so wonderful that judgment and the evidence of the eye are utterly at variance again and again. His acting is by far the best he has ever accomplished for the screen. He literally lives the part from beginning to end.

DE LAVAL JUNIORS WON FROM C. G. E.

Winners Netted Once in Each Period and Won on Their Merits.

The De Laval defeated the C.G.E. Juniors by a score of 2 to 0 in a fast Junior football game played at King Edward Park on Saturday afternoon. With Ward playing a good game in his old position at back, the De Laval team is presenting a strong combination this season. The C.G.E. had a narrow escape from the kick-off, when Evans almost booted one through.

The C.G.E. were playing a defensive game with the Feeley brothers having plenty to do The De Laval forwards bombarded Jenkins' citadel, which eventually fell to a splendid drive from Elliot, and half-time arrived with the champions leading 1 to 0.

After the recess, Ward, by some nice returns, was giving his forwards every opportunity to score, but luck seemed against them. Eddie Williams was doing his best to get his forwards going, but they could make no headway against the defence of the champions, who were masters of the situation, and kept pegging away. Smith eventually beat Jenkins. This was all the scoring, and the De Laval won on their merits by 2 goals to 0. The teams:

PACKERS-UNITED PLAY TO A DRAW

Fast Junior Football Game Ended With Neither Team Able to Score.

The C.P.C. Juniors and Peterborough United got an even break in the first league fixture of the Junior Football Association. The game proved a fast and exciting battle, in which neither side was able to score. The Peterborough United team was at full strength, while Curtis, of the Packers, was on the absentee list.

The C.P.C. players appeared in their new uniforms, which are a smart outfit. They won the toss, and Mitchell was soon in evidence, calling upon Tom Montgomery to save. Connors then took up the running, and sent in a beauty, which Edgar safely turned aside Dundas took the corner, and sent wide. Tommy Ball got hold of the leather, and by nice control got within shooting range, but Montgomery was able to turn his final effort over the bar. Mitchell took the corner, but Billingsley headed over. Half-time arrived with no score.

From the centre kick the United forwards went away with a rush, and Downer and company had all their work cut out to keep them at bay. Jimmy Edwards came to the rescue with one of his timely rushes, and ended up with a beautiful centre, which went begging Connors and H. Bradley were playing a great game for the United. Both teams were trying hard to score, but the defence seemed to be too good for the forwards. After a spell of mid-field play, Mitchell broke away, and passed back to Tommy Ball, but Montgomery saved in brilliant fashion. Dundas got away on the left, and sent across to Vinette. Edgar was called upon to save. Time was called, with the game ending in a goalless draw. The teams;

Peterborough United — Montgomery; Slaughter and H. Bradley; Connors, Cooper, and Sweeting; Dundas, Cordroy, Smith, Busby, and Vinette.

RANGERS' BAND WILL CELEBRATE "HOME, SWEET HOME" CENTENARY

Promenade Concert at the Armoury Tuesday Evening as Local Tribute in World-Wide Honor to John Howard Payne—First Sung in Convent Garden.

SENTIMENT IS UNIVERSAL

By kind permission of Lieut-Colonel Frank Bradburn and officers, the band of the Peterborough Rangers will give a promenade concert in the Armoury on Tuesday evening, May 8th, to celebrate locally the hundredth anniversary of the first singing in public of "Home, Sweet Home."

This will be the band's first concert under the direction of Lieut. W. H. Peryer, and for the occasion they will wear their new uniforms for the first time. The band has practiced faithfully on a special programme for this centenary which will be honored on Tuesday wherever the English language is spoken. A feature number will be a fantasia on "Home Sweet Home," and the old folk song itself will be sung by Mr. Arnold Everet.t

Sung at Convent Garden.

"Home, Sweet Home" was first sung on May 8th, 1823 in Covent Garden, London, where the melody was heard in the second act of John Howard Payne's libretto of the opera "Clari, a Maid of Milan." It was an immediate success and the test of a century has fixed its place immortally in the music of English-speaking peoples.

John Howard Payne was born in New York city at 33 Pearl street on June 9th, 1791. His father was the principal of a school, Clinton Academy, in East Hampton, Long Island ,and his mother was the daughter of a Jewish resident of East Hampton named Isaacs. Animated with a desire for the stage John Howard Payne was sent to a counting house when about 13 with his family's hopes that he would lose his proclivity for the theatre. Later he was sent to Union College, Schenectady, and while there both his parents died. He took part in student theatricals and also published a paper of his own. At 18 he appeared in the Old Park theatre as Young Norval in "Douglas" in February, 1809. The play was a success and was repeated in Boston, Baltimore and elsewhere. His popularity created enemies and following a quarrel with his manager he decided to go abroad.

Leaving for London in January, 1813 he made friends of Coleridge, Kemble, Southey and Thomas Moore, and other men of taste and learning. He soon arranged for appearances and his work was again successful, He played in more than twenty-two parts, including Hamlet, Romeo and Lothair, but believing that his art fell short of that of Kemble and Edmund Kean he quit the stage and took up playwriting.

Scored New Success.

Again success came to him, and his play, "Brutus," upon which his fame as a dramatist chiefly rests, won the favour of the great actors of his day and later, and was one of Edward Forrest's best parts. Early in 1823 he wrote "Home, Sweet Home." Payne first intended it as a play, but thought he could make an ope.a of it and introduced several songs, His old friend, Sir Henry Bishop, who had written the music for all Payne's pieces, agreed to produce the music. The opera proved a success and the song, "Home, Sweet Home" captured the town—the world .More than 100,000 copies of it were sold the first year at a profit to the publishers of $10,000, but Payne received nothing except except the sum for which he sold the opera outright, probably £250.

How Song Was Written.

In Gabriel Harrison's biography of Payne, written in 1885 the following story of the inspiration of the song is quoted as having been related to a friend, James Rees: "I first heard the air in Italy. One beautiful morning as I was strolling alone amid some delightful scenery, my attention was arrested by the sweet voice of a peasant girl who was carrying a basket laden with flowers and vegetables. This plaintive air she trilled with so much sweetness and simplicity that the melody at once caught my fancy. I accosted her, and, after a few moments' conversation, I asked for the name of the song, which she could not give me, but having some slight knowledge of music myself, barely enough for the purpose, I requested her to repeat the air, which she did ,while I jotted down the notes as best I could. It was this air that suggested the words of "Home, Sweet Home" both of which I sent to Bishop at the time I was preparing the opera. Bishop happened to know the air well, and adapted the music to the words."

Lost All His Money.

Afterwards Payne turned producer and manager, lost all his money and returned penniless to America in 1832. A benefit performance of "Brutus," in which Forrest and Fannie Kemble appeared, yielded him $7,000, and benefits followed in other cities with dinners, receptions, addresses of welcome, poems and odes. Payne was literally in "Home, Sweet Home." On April 9th, 1853 he died in Tunis, Africa, to which place he had been sent by the United States as the American Consul.

Payne never married. An early love affair with an accomplished lady in Boston was broken off by parental interference. An attachment with the widow of the poet Shelley is known to have existed, but although wifeless it may be assumed that his life was not loveless.

A World Wide Tribute.

Musicians all over the world are said to have planned celebrations for the centenary of "Home, Sweet Home." No other song ever written, it is believed, can be sung by so many persons without the aid of printed words or music. It expresses a universal sentiment that haunts hearts the world over. It has become a folk-song, passed on by word of mouth, even varied, according to the whim or natural inaccuracy of the singer. Fashions in music change, but "Home, Sweet Home" holds its place; and Galli-Curci sings it after a programme of modern music, just as Patti sang it after the tuneful arias of her day. And the heart touched audiences applaud it now as they did then, and as they did that first night in old Covent Garden. Even without the aid of an anniversary, it is hard to realise that there ever was a time when nobody had heard "Home, Sweet Home."

BASEBALL NEWS

Saturday's game will do much to round the Petes into shape. With battles with Bowmanville and Lindsay on the cards for the next two Saturdays, Manager Solomon's crew should be on edge for the opening game of the League at Cobourg on May 24th.

The Petes will practise on Monday Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings this week and every player is expected out at these workouts.

There will be a practice of the Raybestos City League team at Riverside Park to-night at 6.15 o'clock.

Smith, Stevenson, Hamilton and Curzon were new players on Leaside's line-up Saturday. The Durant crew are well fortified in every position and they will hard to head off in their own section.

Micky Murray got the best of his old boss in two battles of wits Saturday. Jake nearly pulled the old stunt of asking the Leaside pitcher for a look at the ball and then jumping to one side to let the ball go by and the baserunners score. The heaver tossed the ball over, but Murray intercepted the throw and saved a run. Micky also won on another occasion. While the Leaside third sacker, holding the ball in his hands, started across the diamond to argue about a play at third, Manager Solomon tried to put one over by sending Helson home. Murray woke up, however, in time to head Helson off at the plate and when Wolfe tried to reach third he too was nailed.

Comolli had the only extra base hit of the game, a long drive over Curzon's head. On a faster field the ball would have bounded away for a triple or homer, but it stuck in the mud in centre field and Comolli was held at second.

Of the five pitchers who worked on Saturday, Hamilton was the only one to use a hook to any extent. Neither Heckman nor Summerfeldt attempted to curve a ball all afternoon.

All the new members of the Petes got into the hit column, Ausaldo, Legon, Helson, Summerfeldt and Comolli each having a safety. Joe Dillon, the Leaside first baseman, was the only player of the two dozen in the game who got more than one hit.

Swanston had the first put-out of the season and also the first hit and the first run. Comolli drew the first pass and made the first extra base hit, and Collins the first error.

COBOURG, May 7.—The Langslow Ltd. and Rice Lake Canoe Company has organized a ball team, and as a result of this a meeting of the Town League was held, when it was decided to revise the schedule, in order to admit of the Langslow Ltd. team. This has been done and the season will open with double headers on May 12 and 19. The schedule consists of 12 games and after a winner has been declared the schedule will be repeated, and the winners in the two series will play off at close of the season.

May 12—Matting and Felt Co. vs Langslow, 2 p.m.; Dying Co. vs C. N.R., 4 p.m.

THE FAIRY CANTATA TEA WAS ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

A pretty little fairy cantata, "Five O'Clock Tea", was presented in St. John's parish hall on Saturday afternoon by the Junior W. A. of the Church, under the direction of Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, to a fair-sized audience of friends and relatives of the small performers. The cast, composed entirely of children, with the exception of Miss Lillian Farthing, acquitted itself in a manner very creditable to the careful training and painstaking attention to detail evidenced in the charming little production.

Preluded by a few words of explanation from Mrs. Bingham, the cantata opened with a prologue, sung by Mitterva (Miss Lillian Farthing), explaining the action of the little play, which centers around an afternoon tea table, with its slaves.

Miss Farthing, in flowing white robes, with tinsel crown and gilded trident, was attended by a chorus of small maidens, in white, holding pink floral wreaths.

Queen I-Love-You (Grace Simpson), with flowing locks, white gown golden crown and star-tipped wand summons in turn the little slaves of the tea table, who advance and sing about their varied duties, with a chiming chorus after each solo. The two little tea-leaves, (Alfred Pooley and Freddy Ford), were Japanesque small creatures in purple suits, with slanting brows and black skull caps; Wheat Kar (Hilda Evans) was resplendent in Dolly Varden costume of white, with flowered pink panniers, large straw hat and huge fan of real wheat ears; and the chief Milk Maid (Beatrice Pooley) with her small dancing attendants (Dorothy Perks, Mary Evans and Dorothy Pitchford) wore white aprons over their softly-tinted little dresses sunbonnets and carried shining tin pails.

Leslie Dyer and Donald Hood were sugar-cane slaves, small black amoors with ebony faces, white coats and full trousers, broad red sashes and yellow turbans, carrying real sugar cane in their hands.

Two of the quaintest of the small men and women taking part were little Dresdina, the dainty chinawar lady, (Constance Ivison) in shepherdess gown of gleaming pale pink and white silk, and her attendant gallant, Douglas Blagrave, as Silver Mine, whose white ruffled cavalier suit was adorned with glistening silver spoons and whose cunning bows to his lady faire in their charming little interlude were received with much applause.

Woven Flax (Marjorie Perks) with her spinning-wheel, wore a yellow skirt and blouse with fluted collar, with black overjacket and peasant cap with large flaps. The woodcutter representing the table itself was Scott Medd, seated on real wooden logs. His costume was a woodsy affair of green and grey with red flannel jacket and large soft hat, and his voice was particularly pleasing in the solo which described his activities.

Fairies and flower girl attendants, who danced and sang very prettily, were Marjorie Lang, Dorothy Paterson, Eulah Simpson, Geraldine Long, Louise Hall, Kathleen Ford, Phyllis Pitchford, Florence Lemons, Betty Preston, Doris Giles, and Winifred Eggleton.

Dr. Blagrave voiced the appreciation of the audience at the close of the performance, thanking Mrs. Bingham, the ladies who superintended the production; Mesdames Cubitt, Murray, Simpson, Morris and the musicians who played throughout, Mrs. P. Hooper, violinist and Miss Aloha Horn pianiste.

MORRISON BELIEVES IN CLASS CONSCIOUSNESS

WINDSOR, May 7. — (Canadian Press).—Addressing a large gathering of U.F.O. sympathizers of Essex Saturday afternoon, J. J. Morrison, secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario, urged his followers to arm themselves for the approaching Provincial contest by thoroughly organizing rural constituencies. He did not deal directly with the record of the Drury administration, nor did he attempt to speculate upon what status the agrarian party would enjoy after the elections. He reviewed the development, touched upon its entrance into the political life of the Province, and answered some of the criticisms which have been levelled at the U.F.O. by an unfriendly press.

Mr. Morrison believes in class consciousness so far as farmers are concerned, and said he did not feel impelled to apologize for his views in this connection.

Do you know Baseball?

Questions.

ONE—If a batted ball first strikes foul, rolls a considerable distance in foul territory, and then settles on fair ground between home and third, is it fair or foul?

TWO—What happens when a base runner is hit by a batted ball?

THREE—If a fielder or catcher block a base runner without having the ball in his possession, and then touches the runner out before he can reach the base, what happens?

FOUR—With a runner on first, batsman hits a fly to the outfield which falls safe without being touched. The runner on first, fearing it will be caught, plays it safe, and is thrown out at second. Does the batsman receive credit for a hit?

Answers.

ONE—It is a fair ball if it finally settles on fair territory between home and third, despite the fact that it first hit foul.

TWO—When a base runner is hit by a batted ball he is out. The batsman is entitled to first base. No other runners can advance unless forced to make room for the batsman.

THREE—The runner is entitled to the base, which he was prevented from reaching by the obstruction of the fielder.

FOUR—The batsman does not receive credit for a hit. In no case shall a base hit be scored when a base runner is forced out by the play.

FIVE—A base runner can turn to the right or left without liability to be put out after over-running first base, provided he make no effort to advance toward second.

LATE SPRING

The motor tourist season is opening up slowly this year as a result of the backward spring. Only two enquiries have been registered so far at the Motor League headquarters, one tourist coming from Detroit and one from Buffalo. These may be taken as the advance guard of a large tourist traffic, probably the biggest factor in which is the enthusiastic commendation of the scenic beauties of this part of Ontario by those who have made the trip once. Many applications are being handled at the Chamber of Commerce for cottages at the lakeside summer resorts.

CAREER OF WOMAN OF 100 LOVES ENDS.

Activities of French Siren Brough Up With a Round Turn By Police.

By JOHN O'BRIEN

PARIS (By mail to United Press).—When Jeanne Hortense Waudigny was arrested recently at Lille, the police of twenty cities of France and Belgium breathed easier. The "Woman of a Hundred Loves" was safe behind the bars. Her specialty was posing as a member of an aristocratic family, obtaining huge sums of money from wealthy admirers, for the most part fraudulently, and lavishing it on handsome "lounge lizards" in Paris.

All the "flying squads" of the non-uniformed French police had been on her trail for three years. As the "Baroness de Moranval" she was heard of in Havre, Cherbourg, Nancy, Marseilles, Bordeaux and Riviera resorts. Her beauty and clothes attracted attention everywhere. She had scores of men at her feet. Always it was the same story. A complaint to the local police a day or so after the fascinating woman had vanished and fresh diligence on the part of the sleuths. One of the latter finally landed her by posing as a retired general and pretending to fall into her snares. She met him by appointment in Lille, where he revealed his true character.

Daughter of Miller

Jeanne is the daughter of a miller, and began her career as a worker in a textile plant in Roubaix. She captivated the owner of the plant, M. Moranval, who married her. He was killed in the war and the "merry widow" grabbed the fortune and took the first train for Paris. She lived at the best hotels and passed her nights in the dance halls of Montmartre, spending lavishly and paying the debts of every dancer who happened to strike her fancy. In a year she was penniless. Then she launched out on her career of professional enchantress. A big business man of Rheims was her first victim. His little folly cost him a million. That was at the rate of two hundred thousand francs a day. They had been in Paris five days when she disappeared.

Grocer Entranced

A wholesale grocer of Avignon, in the south of France, contributed a hundred thousand to the siren a couple of months later, when indulgence in her passion for gowns, jewelry and dancing men forced her to take the road again. For weeks thereafter the pockets of the young Argentinians and Spaniards, who filled the dancing parlors were packed with hundred franc notes and champagne flowed in bubbling streams. And so it went on until the "handsome general," as she referred to him, crossed her path. He was sure of her identity, but wanted proof. Ostentatious display of a well-padded bankroll in a Lille hotel proved her downfall. She laid plans to annex it and as soon as she had done so the stranger informed her he was Commissioner Droton of the Brigade Mobile.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

New York, May 7. (Special.) — Bear pressure and spurious checks gave the New York stock exchange another heavy jolt today dropping many issues to new lows for the movement. Brokers in New York and many other cities of the east were flooded with bad cheques accompanied by buying orders. The buying thus generated made for rather a firm opening but when the brokers discovered the cheques were worthless they cast the stocks overboard. This gave impetus to the decline. In the face of news that the Lafolette group had called conference on revaluation of the railroads, carriers showed a strong tone. Substantial gains were scored by the New York Central, Union Pacific and other rails. Corn products led the ndustrial group, jumping 2½ points to 131 on a single transaction of 1600 shares; other active industrials were irregular. The bad cheque development appeared to heighten the uncertainty prevailing in the speculative community, and another wave of selling carried the whole market to new low levels on the decline. Steel common broke to a further new low for the year at 100½ and new lows on the reaction were reached by Baldwin, Studebaker and other pivotal stocks. Stewart Warner continued its downward plunge breaking to 85 off 35 points from the recent high. Stock sales up to 12 o'clock totalled 511,200 shares, showing activity to be far under the best days of last week. Heavy trading featured Studebaker which reached a high of 116 3-4 and fell to 114 5-8 later coming back to 115¼. Steel common dropped to 100½ after a high of 101 7-8. Baldwin reached 128 only to drop back to 125¼. Bakers believed that interest rates are likely to continue at the present levels for the next few months. Out of town banks will make call money available whenever the rate is 5 per cent or better. Under present conditions time money at 5¼ per cent. must be considered reasonable. Business money rates are comfortable and are expected to hold steady at 6 per cent. for best single name paper.

DETROIT GIRL FOUND IN DYING CONDITION

DETROIT, May 7. — (Canadian Press.)—The body of a pretty young girl lies unidentified in the morgue here to-day and two young men, Edward Pryzybylski, seventeen, and Max Novak, nineteen, who claimed that they found her unconscious on a vacant lot late last night, are held by the police. She had been strangled.

Examination showed that her clothing had been torn to shreds and finger nail marks on her neck indicated a struggle. Police are seeking a third man whom two men already held mentioned as having said he was going to take a girl friend for an auto ride.

GAVE ADDRESS TO THE WOMEN LOCAL LEAGUE

BUSINESS SESSION

Right Rev. Monsignor McColl addressed the Catholic Women's League at their meeting yesterday afternoon in St Alphonsus' Lyceum, on the duties and responsibilities of membership in their society. The reverend speaker alluded to the part played by women of all times in the moral, social, and educational advancement of the race, and the opportunities awaiting women in this age for service in many ways. He declared that the idea of bringing women to the front was a modern one was decidedly erroneous. Long before the time of Christ, women had played an important part in the moulding of the destinies of mankind. It was the duty of members of the C.W.L. to live up to the aims and objects of their society; which strove to advance the cause of religion, of patriotism, and of education. Practical suggestions for increase of membership were given, and the Monsignor adjured his hearers to be doers and builders, instead of criticisers, "for it is not the workers in any society who are the critics," to be considerate of the feelings of others in everything they did, and to allow no particular arbitrary person or persons to dictate to the majority of the members.

The business session of the meeting was occupied with the reading of minutes by Mrs. C. Snyder, and reports by Mrs. F. J. McFadden and Mrs. T. McNamara. Mrs. B. Law, who occupied the chair in the absence of the president, Mrs. D. O. Legendre, spoke briefly on the responsibility of members and the desirability of increasing membership in the society.

It was decided to hold regular meetings at three o'clock on the first Sunday of each month, and to extend the sympathy of the organization to the family of the late H. Carveth.

Following on a resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the executive, it was decided to leave the relief work in the three parishes to the Ladies' Aid and Sewing Circles which have carried on this work in the past, the C.W.L. to co-operate in such work in any way at any time when called upon.

Mrs. P. J. Doris reported that proceeds turned in to the Health Association from the booth at the recent Motor Show were $60.20 The balance in the treasury at present is $95.37.

A vote of thanks to Monsignor McColl was moved by Mrs. F. Hodgson, and seconded by Mrs. P. J. Doris.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

February 15, 1923.

Dear Mr. Mayor,—

May I be permitted to lay the following matter before you for your worthy consideration?

The Peterborough Conservatory of Music, under the capable and enthusiastic direction of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Gliddon, has been doing yoeman service in the noble cause of musical education in Peterborough and the surrounding district for many years.

The result has been the means of discovering and developing local talent, which would otherwise have been neglected, and of reflecting much credit on your flourishing city as a center of artistic endeavour.

As I understand it the Peterborough Conservatory at present receives no financial support from any out side source, official or otherwise.

I would like therefore strongly to urge the Municipal Authorities of Peterborough to grant the institution a reduction of their taxes, on the ground of their being an important educatiol factior in the life of the community, a fortiori as this same privilege is accorded many of the leading establishments in the principal cities of the Dominion.

I have the honour to be, dear Mr. Mayor,

Faithfully yours,
BORIS HAMBOURG.
Director of the Hambourg Conservatory of Music, Toronto;
Founder of The Hambourg Trio and of The Hambourg String Quartette.
To His Worship The Mayor of Peterborough.

To the Editor, of The Examiner, Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly give space to the enclosed open letter addressed to the Mayor.

Now that a tardy recognition by the public of the educational advantages of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music and of the services of Professor Rupert Gliddon as evidenced by your reference to the Ontario Musical Association Festival at Massey Hall, Toronto, on Thursday last, it seems to me to be an appropriate time to publish Professor Boris Hambourg's letter.

For reasons I do not care to express, this should have been done before.

In alluding to the magnificent work and success of the Musicians mentioned namely Mis. Agnes Logand, Miss Mathilde Masson and the Trinity Church Orchestra, too little credit has been given to Mr. Rupert Gliddon the leader of the Orchestra to whom the success of the Artists locally, is solely due, and I feel that everyone taking part in the competition from this city will agree with me.

Mr. Gliddon's artistic training and the love, I might say worship for his calling, his life long arduous experience has stamped him as one of Ontario's first Musical Masters and Teachers.

The Citizens could not do less than show an appreciation to him and his family for the many gratuitous favours received for many years.

If the letter meets with the approval of some of our leading and thinking citizens, th ey might endorse Professor Boris Hambourg's suggestions.

PLOT TO CROWN A BAVARIAN AS GERMAN KAISER

Famous German Genaral Discloses the Hope of Monarchial Party to Overthrow Government

ESTABLISH EMPIRE

BY BOB DORMAN.

NEW YORK, May 8.—German censorship prevented this story from being sent out while I was still in Germany.

I had luncheon with a famous general of the German army at his home, and on condition that his name be withheld he gave me an interview heretofore unpublished.

This general, occupying a powerful and commanding position during the World War, made these predictions for Germany's future:

Crowning as the next kaiser of ex-Crown Prince Rupprecht, of Bavaria, or his son, Prince Albrecht.

The former general received me in the garden of his villa. He spoke, hesitatingly, in English. His tall figure was clothed in a gray civilian suit.

"Officially," he said, "I do not give interviews."

I asked him about monarchial plans of the Nationalist party.

"Yes," he said, "Germany will be a monarchy again—soon. An overwhelming majority of the German people want a kaiser, not a president.

Monarchists Waiting.

"Leaders of the Nationalist party know that they can seize the reins of government now with little or no bloodshed. But they prefer to wait.

"We realize that a permanent settlement of the allied claims must be reached, and it is obvious that the party arranging and signing such a settlement as the allies can and will force them to sign, will be condemned and hated by all Germany.

"Let the republicans now in power in Berlin perform this nasty job. That will be our opportunity. On the rising of anger we—and a monarchy!—will be swept into the saddle.

"No, we will not repudiate the terms of settlement made by the republicans. That would be suicide, for the allies would overthrow us. We will faithfully carry out whatever reparation terms are made, providing it is humanely possible. The blame will rest with the republicans, not with us. After the first rage has spent itself, the German people will be satisfied in this vindication of Germany's honor."

Favored For Kaiser.

I asked the general about former Kaiser Wilhelm.

"Not Wilhelm," he said, decisively. "There is no denying that a certain number of Nationalists wish for the return of the former kaiser, and a greater number favor Frederick Wilhelm, the former Crown Prince. But the majority of the German people cannot forgive them for fleeing at the time of the revolution, in Germany's hour of need. No member of the Hohenzollern family will be acceptable.

"Rupprecht of Bavaria is the choice of the majority. Rupprecht, the former Crown Prince, is now rightful king of Bavaria. Failing him, the next choice would be his eldest son, young Prince Albrecht.

"We believe we can reconcile the north of Germany to a Bavarian kaiser. Such a solution would unite the German people as never before. It would forever render hopeless the French aim to sparate the south of Germany from the north."

The famous general's tone carried no hint of question or uncertainty. He spoke as if a monarchy was inevitable, and he and his Nationalist partisans were merely waiting for the republican rulers of Germany to hang themselves in the noose of compulsorsy reparations.

355 NEWCOMERS ARRIVED TODAY

Scotch Lads and Lassies Warmly Welcomed in Toronto and at Other Centres.

TORONTO, May 8.—(Canadian Press).—After travelling since April 21 on their way from their homes in the Hebrides to Canada, three hundred and fifty-five Scotch lads and lassies arrived here early today. With a few exceptions, they were all brought out here with the assistance of the Ontario Government to work on Ontario farms for a year, and then to carve homes for themselves on a special township site set apart for a Hebridean colony in Northern Ontario, in the North Bay district.

By noon to-day most of the newcomers had separated for their new homes throughout the province. From the time they set foot on Canadian soil, the party has been photographed by movie men for the Ontario Government. At Brampton this morning movie men filmed the welcome of the newcomer as he reached the farm he is to be on. These films will be shown throughout Canada and all over the world, but particularly in the Hebrides and the Old Country.

The newcomers did not say much about what they think of Ontario and Canada. Their thoughts were of the future and of their new homes, Canada's climate and the customs of its people. Some do not intend to remain on farms, although their contract with the Government specifies that they must stay on farms in Ontario for one year. They or their parents in the Hebrides are also bound to repay their passage money to the Government. The great majority, however, intend to hew their homes from timberland and undeveloped soil of Northern Ontario.

ALD. FIFE IS NEW FUEL CONTROLLER

Succeeds Ald. Holloway as Chairman of Fuel Committee.

Peterborough has a new fuel controller.

The title which Mayor Taylor himself once bore in his humbler aldermanic experience, and which more recently set Ald. Holloway apart from his fellows was last night bestowed upon Ald. Fife.

Ald. Crowe's query as to whether any steps were to be taken to ascertain whether Alberta coal, which has been seriously considered by eastern authorities since the rigors of last winter lifted, could be laid down in Peterborough with any element of cheapness that would make the venture attractive to the public.

The question was directed to Ald. Holloway, who replied that his term had expired since the appointment of Ald. Fife as a chairman of the fuel committee. In other words, it was realized that the city was actually without a fuel controller, duly appointed by the new council. The oversight was quickly corrected by Ald. Maher's motion, seconded by Ald. Morrison, investing Ald. Fife with all the power and sanction of the office.

THE TROUBLES AND TRAGEDIES OF HUNDREDS

Woes of People Packed Away in Fyling Cases of the Local Patriotic Association.

MANY HEARTBREAKS

Thirty-eight fyling cases stand in a row on the floor of the office of the Peterboro branch of the Canadian Patriotic Association. Ordinary enough looking, just the usual sort of fyling convenience that one pulls out of a case and flips back a paste board cover to find two steel contriv ances ready to receive the papers, they are not ordinary in any other way.

"Packed full of the troubles and tragedies and woes of hundreds of people," is the way their custodian describes them as he looks at the bulging cases, lettered from A to Z in glaring black ink, wherein are doc uments recording the wishes and desires, the heart-burnings and heartbreaks of the women who have come and gone to the small upstair office on Simcoe street, to unburden themselves of their trials and cares to the man who has dispensed the funds of the Patriotic Association with charity and patience and wisdom, with a broad mind and a quaint, whimsical humour to the advice that he gave gratis along with the money, that must have gone a long way at times in assisting the grief-ridden women who came here in the early days, the times when as many as nine hundred and twenty women reported monthly for grants, when the small room was packed so full "that their fees were sticking out of the window", when the women crowded around the imperturbable dispenser of cash, when, as Mr. F. H. Dobbin remarks, with a twinkle, "some of the women wouldn't come into the room because certain other women they didn't like were in here."

But Little Friction

The actual dispensing of the funds formed only a small part of the work Probably only a man like the secretary of the fund F. H. Dobbin, experienced in human nature and its ways, could have got through the years with as little friction, considering the elements which form a moving background of human impulses for any of the stories woven around the applications for Patriotic Fund assistance.

Guarded from publicity by consideration of those involved, glimpses of some of the stories filter through Just a peek at a large envelope is vouchsafed, an envelope that contains love letters to a soldier at the Front from his sweetheart in England, discovered in a peculiar way by the soldier's Canadian wife; a hasty glance at the application of another woman whose lawful spouse has departed for other climes with another partner, the mirth-provoking hearing of a letter from a very wroth lady, whose seven lengthy paragraphs of vituperation contain only seven sentences, and whose fury was evoked by the statement of an unknown gentleman that she was not eligible for a Patriotic grant. The letter contains several stinging references to the brand of "British courage" possessed by the writer, as compared with the habits of dwellers in the Dominion, whose government, she asserts, is in the habit of issuing "liars' licenses" to its inhabitants.

Functioned Nine Years

In the nine years of the existence of the Peterboro branch of the Patriotic Funds, which makes its final emergent payments during May, from now on continuing to pay only certain stated claims against the fund, some 43,200 cheques were issued. Of that number, between four and five hundred never were cashed. They were lost or mislaid. The ways in which women can lose cheques and their utter irresponsibility where cheques are concerned, was a matter of audible wonder to Mr. Dobbin. There was the woman who demanded another cheque to be issued as she had lost the original which turned up later in the lining of a muff sent to the furriers for repairs. There was the farm woman engaged in milking her cow whose small daughter raided the mail box and brought her the Patriotic Fund cheque. Laying it down on a stool within reach of the cow she was milking, this woman turned in time to see the envelope disappearing down the ruminative creature's capacious throat. She salvaged enough of the last corner to make good her claim for another cheque. In the meantime, that cow received a good

BANKBOOK BEATS FAMILY WHO TRIED TO INTERFERE

A Bride of 12 and a Husband of 19 Earn $200 a Month Together—Bride's Mother Butted in and Court Saved Situation.

MACON Mo., May 8.— When a bride of 12 and a husband of 19, who earn $200 a month together, can save half of it to buy a home, there is no good reason for parting them merely because of their youth.

Judge J. D. Walker of the Macon County Circuit Court believes so, and so Mrs. Thelma Spurling's parents are prevented from interfering with the couple's married life.

One of the ways Mrs. Spurling, formerly Thelma Ess, proved to the court she ought to be permitted to remain with her hubby, Henry Spurling, was to exhibit a bank book showing a saving on the part of the two of $100 a month since their marriage.

A few months after their marriage the bride's mother sought to annul the tie on the ground that the Missouri laws had been violated in the issuance of a license. But Thelma returned to the scene of the conflict and in addition to discoursing on the love that exists between the two, got down to more material things and showed the bank book. That settled it.

HAD EVENTFUL JOURNEY HERE

A New Arrival From the Land of Oat Cakes and Bonnie Briar Bushes.

A breath from Loch Lomond touched Knox Church on Sunday night when William MacDonald sang two solos at the evening service. Mr. MacDonald arrived in Peterborough on Saturday, having come direct from Loch Lomond side, and will make his home in this city. He will be an acquisition to Peterborough's musical talent, having an excellent bass voice, which his numbers on Sunday brought out in full volume, and also showed his splendid technique. The solos were "My Prayer" (W. H. Squire) and "Though Faithless Man" (Halevy).

Mr. MacDonald crossed the Atlantic on the Metagama, and had an eventful journey from the sea coast, passing through the flooded part of the Maritime Provinces. At one point, he says, the engineer walked ahead to examine the track, which was covered with water, and decided that a passage might be made. At the next station the passengers were informed that after they had passed the doubtful point a wash-out occurred, and the line was swept away.

Mr. MacDonald is a nephew to Mr. A. J. McLeish, 304 Margaret Avenue.

GRAIN IS NOW MOVING ON THE GREAT LAKES

Grain is now moving on the great lakes, and the first boat, the "Glenshee," is due at Midland to-day. Increased activity on the already busy railways will result within the week, this grain making its way to the mills and to the sea ports. Many million bushels of various grains have been stored in the western elevators during the winter, and these must be cleared out to make storage space for the crop just sown.

Local freight business in the Canadian National continues good.

SAYS BUSINEES OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Speech From Throne at Prorogation of Legislature This Afternoon is Exceedingly Optimistic

TORONTO, May 8.— (Canadian Press.)— "It is satisfactory to observe a general improvement in business and industrial conditions throughout the province," said the speech from the Throne, read this afternoon by Lieutenant-Governor Harry Cockshutt at the formal prorogation of the Ontario Legislature.

"Notwithstanding that the opening of spring is somewhat later than usual," the speech continued, "seeding operations are well advanced and prospects are excellent for a large agricultural production during the coming season."

"A new impetus has been given to the live stock industry through the removal of the cattle embargo by Great Britain. Reports indicate that shipments of cattle offered fully tax all available transportation facilities and that the opening of the British market to our live stock is proving very helpful to the farming community."

The speech outlined legislation passed during the session, including the decision to extend the T. and N. O. rilway. "It is a matter of pride," the speech said, "to our people that the genius of Canadians has achieved in the laboratories of our Provincial University one of the most important medical discoveries of recent years. In recognizing the service to humanity you have not only paid well-merited tribute to the discoverers (Dr. F. G. Banting and Dr. Best), but you have made provision for medical research which will no doubt prove of great value in the future."

Prorogation ceremonies were attended by the Premier and most of his Ministers, but by very few of the other members of the Legislature. It is not necessary to have a quorum at closing. After the speech from the Throne, prorogation was announced by Provincial Secretary Nixon.

A QUICK TURNOVER OF CITY PROPERTY

Mr. E. Pemberton, who is leaving for California, shortly decided to turn his Peterborough property into cash and within the past two weeks three parcels have been sold, two houses on Rubidge street and one on Reid street. H. J. McCannon sold the three, closing the last of them on Saturday last.

KIWANIS CLUB HEAR ARTISTS TO ADVANTAGE

Miss Agnes Logan and Miss Mathilde Masson Were Each Presented With a Bouquet of Roses

SPEAKER ABSENT

The feature items on a varied and interesting programme at today's Kiwanis Club luncheon was the presence of two Peterborough artists, Miss Agnes Logan and Miss Mathilde Masson, who a few days ago brought honor to themselves and Peterborough as a result of their success at the Ontario Musical Festival competition, in which Miss Logan won five first prizes and Miss Masson captured a first prize for soprano solo work. Miss Logan was heard to advantage in two piano numbers, including the piece that reminded Mr. Granville Bantock of the days many years ago when he heard Rubenstein play a similar selection.

Miss Masson contributed a solo number and responded to an encore in French. Both artists were loudly applauded, and were each presented with a bouquet of roses and a congratulatory speech by Kiwanian Jack Marshall.

Col. H. C. Boyden, who was to have been the speaker of the day, sent a telegram to say that he had missed a train connection and would not be able to get through on time.

The average attendance to-day was seventy-five per cent., divided as follows: Team No. 1, seventy-three per cent., team No. 2 eighty-two per cent., team No. 3 sixty-nine per cent.

President Jack McKone announced that on May 16 the Peterboro Club will visit Belleville and participate with Kingston in the initiation of a club in the Bay of Quinte town. All those who are able to get away on that date are invited to be present.

Mention was made of the fact that Kiwanians Ed. Raynor and Jack McNab are leaving the city. Kiwanian Raynor is going to Brantford to take charge of a store, and Kiwanian McNab is going to Ottawa on a similar mission. Regret was expressed at the departure of these two members, and a resolution to that effect was passed by the club.

Kiwanian Dr. M. Yelland and Kiwanian Dr. Gray Macdougall received the congratulations of the club for their recent appointment to the office of president and vice-president, respectively, of the Peterborough Medical Society.

The visitors to-day were: Dr. Norval, of Toronto; Mr. Dan. Mathewson, New York; Mr. Harold Jeffries, of this city; Mr. J. Chadwick, of New York; Kiwanian Arthur Farmer, of the Toronto Club, and family; Mr. H. O. Fiske, Mr. W. A. Logan, also Miss Logan and Miss Masson.

The booster to-day was Kiwanian Walter Kidd, and the prize-winners were Kiwanians Hugh Nevin, Douglas Grant and F. Dawson.

Ladies night will be observed one week from next Friday, and Kiwanian Jack Craig assured the members to-day that it would be an eye-opener.

TWO PETERBORO HOMES HAVE FURNACES WITH FUEL OIL ATTACHMENT

C. N. R. RUMOUR IS DENIED

"We do not anticipate any change in the location of our shops," wrote Sir Henry W. Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, in a letter read at last night's council meeting that emphatically negatived the recent rumor that the C. N. R. shops were to be removed from Lindsay to Peterborough.

In the face of that announcement there was nothing to do but receive the letter in a spirit of renunciation that had been prepared by the vagueness and doubts which accompanied the rumor in its local circulation.

President is Busy

A communication from G. N. Gordon intimated among other matters, that have already been made public, the intention of Sir Henry Thornton to visit Peterborough upon the first opportunity. So many projects and other responsibilities of prime importance are pressing upon his time that he is unable to fix a date just now for his trip to Peterborough.

Referring to the propose d electrification of the local C. N. R. lines out of Peterborough, Mr. Gordon expressed the belief that gasoline-electric cars would be added to the local system as soon as the suggested plans for this district can be considered.

Oil-burning Furnaces

City Engineer Parsons called the council's attention to a problem arising out of the use of fuel oil for heating houses. Two of these patented oil burners have been installed in furnaces of Peterborough homes. The apparatus which throws off the oil in a fine s pray is operated by a water motor which uses from 400 to 1,000 gallons of water every twenty-four hours it works.

Mr. Parsons said that this invention was doubtless an economy in heating applied to hot water boilers, but the problem it presented to the city was the capacity of the sewers to carry off the water that drives the little motor. If many of these machines were installed the sewers, already taxed nearly to their limit, would be choked. Mr. C. H. Ackerman was the lastest to propose the installation of a fuel oil burner, but he realized that the sewer on Charlotte Street was overtaxed now, especially at some season. The city engineer asked the council whether they would determine any policy which he should follow when new applications were made for the approval of these installations.

Electrify Motors

Ald. Turner informed the counc il that two companies manufacturing domestic fuel oil burners were now working on improvements by which the motivation would be by electricity instead of by water from the house mains. He recommended that those citizens who have water motors in use now be permitted to retain them, but that new applications be refused in view of the electric motors that would be available.

Ald. Turner's motion to that effect was seconded by Ald. Stocker and carried unanimously.

CUNO HAS RETURNED

BERLIN, May 8—(United Press)—Chancellor Cuno returned from his vacation to-day and immediately began studying the French reparations reply. Cabinet Chiefs will confer with him and an official session is expected later.

$1000 PAYMENT ON ARMOUR HILL

And J. J. McBain Offers City Park Frontage on Munroe Avenue.

John J. McBain's offer for the nominal cost of the deed of strip of property sixteen inches wide on the south side of Munroe Avenue, giving access to the proposed Armour Hill park, was gratefully accepted by the council last night.

Ald. Holloway reported that Mr. McBain was willing to give this strip which had been reserved, providing Armour Hill was secured and used as a public park. Any doubt about that condition was cleared away by City Engineer Parsons' statement that the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham, had already paid $1,000 to Mr. E. A. Peck, representing the Armour estate, and it was understood that there would be no difficulty about the balance.

Alex. Dick's Building

Permission was granted to Alex. Dick to erect a metal-sheeted building at the corner of Bethune and McDonnel Streets in which, Ald. Stocker reported, it was expected that twenty-five or thirty men would be employed in the manufacture of doors, sashes and kindred lumber products.

City Engineer Parsons explained that the first proposal was for a wooden-sheeted building. "I told him that a wooden-sheeted building would be entirely against the building by-law. They said that a brick building would cost so much that they couldn't stand the overhead. I suggested that it might be possible to put a building with a slow-burning roof, with sheet iron sides run up to meet the roof, and that it would be practically as good as brick. If a fire broke out in the inside it would burn through the roof of a brick building just the same. It was a matter, anyway, for the council to decide."

Mr. Parrott's Gratitude

In appreciation of the council's action in giving him free a license for six months to sell cigarettes, Joseph Parrots, who keep the notions stand in the entrance of the Bank of Toronto lane on Hunter Street, wrote the following acknowledgment:

"Will you please convey my heartfelt thanks to the members of the city council for their more than generous response to my request, and accept them also for your own kindness in the matter. It's deeds like this make life worth living. I can never forget the interest shown by every one I approached in the matter. Joe Parrott."

WOMEN WERE BEATEN AND SPAT UPON WHEN PRISONERS OF BANDITS

HELD UP TRAIN.

SHANGHAI, May 8 (Canadian Press). — Lloyd Lehrbas, reporter on the China Press of Shanghai, formerly of Pocatello, Idaho, and of the Chicago Tribune, who escaped from the bandits who held up the Pekin Express on the Shantung border, arrived yesterday with the first eyewitness story of the affair.

Women, beaten, shoved ahead as they lagged behind, spat upon by the bandits, and some of them eventually left where they dropped in their tracks as the marauders set a terrific pace over the hilly country, was one of the pictures drawn by the newspaperman, who himself escaped clad only in his pyjamas.

Lehrbas said he was in the hands of the brigands for three hours, with the others captured on the train, men and women, most of them clad only in their nightclothes, as they were routed from their berths, he was driven from the scene of the hold-up and menaced with revolvers and rifles.

The captives were driven forward at high speed over rough country. Women whose pace was slower than that of the men, were shoved ahead as they fell behind, beaten when they could travel no faster, and spat upon as they fell alongside the trail, worn out.

Husbands of the helpless women were forced to leave their wives where they had fallen, or were driven on ahead as the women dropped to the rear unable to keep up with the main party despite the beatings administered by their guards.

The bandit who was guarding Lehrbas, the newspaperman said, was laden with loot wrapped in a sheet snatched from a berth in the train. He dropped some of his booty and as he stooped to recover that, Lehrbas said he crawled away into the darkness and hid in the tall grass.

Lehrbas gave the names of the following as being in the party of which he was a member as the bandits drove them to the hills:

Major Robert Allen, U.S.A. Medical Corps; Major Roland Pinger, U.S.A. Ordnance Department; their wives, and Roland Pinger, aged 8, who still is a cantive with his father, and Edward Pinger, 4, who later was released with his mother; Robert Allen, son of Major Allen, still held captive; J. A. Hinley and C. Jacobson.

Lehrbas said he saw a white man, who had been travelling in a third-class carriage of the train, shot dead by the brigands

All the passengers lost everything they had with them except the night clothes in which they slept when the bandits raided the train.

Miss Lucy G. Aldrich, sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., of New York, who was carried off by the Chinese bandits, who held up the Pekin Express at Suohow on Sunday morning, is free and unharmed, according to a message received this evening from Linching, confirming the earlier reports of her release.

Governor Magai, of the Japanese Settlement, on Sakhalien, and the president of the Chamber of Commerce of Hakodate, Japan, who were reported aboard the train, are safe in Pekin, according to advices received here last night. They reached the capital by another route, and escaped the hold-up.

BERKELEY, Cal., May 8 (Canadian Press). — The following cablegram was received yesterday by Mrs. George H Blacker from her daughter, Mrs. Roland W. Pinger, wife of Major Pinger, who is being held by Chinese bandits:

Edward is the Pingers' three-year-old son. Another son, Roland, Jr, aged nine, is being held by the bandits, so far as is known.

PEKIN, May 8 (Canadian Press). —Unconfirmed reports have been received here that the Suchow train bandits have killed one or two of their prisoners.

Fire at Lindsay of Incendiary Origin.

LINDSAY, May 8.—As a result of the destruction of the boathouse and launch, the property of Thomas Massaw, about a fortnight ago, the Provincial Police made a thorough investigation. It was established that the blaze was of incendiary origin, and was the result of spite work owing to recent litigation on the question of trappers' rights. A public fire inquiry will therefore be held to-day, conducted by Chief Fire Marshal Heaton assisted by Deputy Fire Marshal Poyuton. Some twenty witnesses have been summoned and interesting revelations are looked for.

NEWS OF CAVAN AND THE DISTRICT

Fourteen New Members For Methodist Church—Spring Work Well Advanced—Personals.

CAVAN, May 8. — Spring work is well advanced in this locality A great deal of seeding has been done during the last week. Fall wheat and clover are looking well.

Miss Lila Staples has returned from an extended visit with friends in Bobcaygeon and vicinity.

Miss Helen and Kenneth Syer spent the week-end at home here

It was with great regret that the people of Cavan heard of the passing away of Mabel, eldest daughter of Mr. nd Mrs. Moses Sutton, and wife of Rev. Mr. Edmison, of Orono, on Friday, 4th May. The deceased had been in ill-health for some time, but her friends and the doctors who attended her, hoped that ultimately she would regain her health. A short time ago, however, it became apparent that she was gradually growing weaker. As a girl on the home farm in Cavan she had been greatly loved, and her friends, husband and two children have the sincere sympathy of the community.

Rev. G. S. Rorke was not feeling so well last week, and had to call in Dr. A. H. Turner. Mr. Rorke has never fully recovered from the severe cold he contracted a few weeks ago. Rev. J. Craw, of Springville, took the Cavan service on Sunday evening, when Rev. Mr. Rorke assisted. Fourteen new members were received in the church, and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper observed. It was a beautiful service, and Mr. Craw delivered a fine sermon. The people of Cavan always enjoy and appreciate his discourses.

Dr. A. H. Turner and Nurse Finnimore put Mr. F. M. Staples' foot and ankle into a plaster of paris cast on Wednesday, and he can now get around on crutches.

Mrs. Staples and sons Charles and Offa, Lifford, visited her son, F. M. Staples, on Sunday.

Mr. John Thompson has gone to Owen Sound for the summer.

TORONTO, May 8.— (Canadian Press.)—One young woman was instantly killed, another slightly injured, and two young men received injuries which may prove fatal, when their motor car, with four passengers in it, crashed into a telegraph pole at the south end of the village of Pickering shortly before midnight last night.

Kathleen Carpentier, aged 19, of Sutton, is dead and F. A. Brown of Toronto, is suffering from serious internal injuries. Thelma Hulbert escaped with very slight injuries. None of the party was able to furnish detailed information, and the name of the other man is unknown.

BOUT CALLED OFF.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 8.—(Canadian Press.)— The scheduled 10-round bout between Harry Greb, of Pittsburg and Jimmy Darcy, of California, set for last night, was called off when physicians declared that Greb was not in condition to enter the ring because of an infected arm.

WALL STREET VICTIMIZED BY BOGUS CHEQUES

Fake Cheques Sent to Cover Buying Orders in Such Quantities as to Cause Big Change in Prices.

WELL PLANNED.

NEW YORK, May 8.—(Canadian Press).—Postoffice inspectors, police and private detectives joined hands to-day to run down the authors of a widespread plot to upset the stock market by dumping on it hundreds of orders to buy, backed by worthless checks running into the millions.

Wall Street generally attributed the scheme to unscrupulous traders seeking to influence prices for their own ends, although the possibility was not lost sight of that a fanatic or some disgruntled person might have thrown the monkey wrench in to the gears of the New York Stock Exchange.

It was obvious, however, that the person or persons who worked out the plot had a wide knowledge of Wall Street and its ways and although not a single one of the checks was cashed, their dumping on brokers had a marked effect on to-day's market. Several brokers, rushing into the Exchange with what they thought were bonafide buying orders "at the market" for New York Central, Corn Products and Chile Copper shares, with a sprinkling of other stocks, sent prices sharply up.

In the meantime, however, New York banks which were named as correspondents for banks on which the forged checks were drawn, began to turn the worthless paper down. The brokers who had bought, promptly began to unload and the market slumped. Already uneasy under the recent attacks of bear traders, and further depressed by acute weakness that developed in the grain and cotton markets, the entire list took the toboggan, and most of the shares listed by the big board made new low records for the year before they quit sliding. The decline did not end until a few minutes before the closing, when a covering movement by bear traders checked the drop. Some shares reacted one to two points, but practically the entire list closed below Saturday's high, the losses ranging from one to 10 1-3 points.

The operators of the swindle, if they took full advantage of their opporsunity, made a killing both on the rise and the fall, selling short on the brief peak reached before the forgeries were disclosed and then covering and buying for the rise on the down ward movement.

The scheme, in which it was sought to involve brokers in Philadelphia, Boston, and Chicago, as well as in New York, was worked out with meticulous detail, although the forged names attached to the cheques were crude. They apparently had been written all by the same hand. But the conspirators evidently counted on a quick turn, before the forgeries were discovered.

Boston, Mass., May 8.—(Canadian Press).—Those who were behind the fraudulent check scheme to stimulate the stock market through buying orders from New York, Philadelphia and Boston at the opening to-day succeeded in causing the purchase of 2,500 shares of stock by five brokerage houses in this city.

A net loss of about $3,750 was sustained by these houses in the succeeding sales by which they goth rid of the stock after the scheme was exposed. Ten other local stock brokerage firms—which, like the five that exechted the orders, were among the oldest in the city — either detected the frauds or were warned in time to prevent purchases.

GEN TUNNEY SCORED

DETROIT, May 8.—(Canadian Press).— Gen. Tunney, American light heavy weight champion, last nights cored the knock-out over our Jack Clifford, St. Paul, when the latter was forced to stop after eighth rounds because of a bad cut over the left eye.

To Inspect Lindsay's System of Sewerage.

LINDSAY, May 8.—Four officials of the Provincial Board of Health visited Lindsay yesterday in connection with the epidemic of typhoid fever. It is understood that at least two of the officials will remain here for a couple of days and that a thorough survey of the entire sewerage system, including a house-to-house inspection will be carried out.

Dr. Sutton of Peterboro, District Medical Officer, was here on Saturday in connection with the matter.

The epidemic is centred in the northern portion of the town and the local authorities have not been able to stamp it out. It is not caused by the town water as tests have shown that is free from infection.

OMEMEE DWELLING DAMAGED BY FIRE

OMEMEE, May 8.— At noon on Monday the residence of Mr. James Bushnell on Stergeon street, caught fire. The alarm was given by the next door neighbour who saw the smoke issuing from the roof, and immediately the church bell was rung and the fire engine rushed to the scene where a large crowd had gathered and a bucket brigade was quickly at work, who soon had it under control.

The cause of the fire is unknown as there had been no fire in the house all day. Some think a spark from a passing train or a spark from the kitchen stove lodged from another day, was fanned into a flame by the gentle breeze.

The roof and attic are badly disfigured but luckily the damage was confined to such a small space as there were many buildings close by which might have suffered had there been a strong wind blowing.

FOREIGN SETTLERS ARRIVE AT QUEBEC

QUEBEC, May 8.—The S. S. Minnedosa from Antwerp, with 1,156 passengers, mail and cargo arrived at Quebec yesterday afternoon and docked at the breakwater to land third-class passengers, and then left for Montreal at six-thirty. The Minnedosa, on account of ice conditions in the Straits of Cabot, was two days late in arriving. Nevertheless she passed throught her difficult ordeal without the least scratching of the vessel's paint or discomfort of passengers. The Minnedosa had among her complement of 830 third-class passengers, a number of Armenians, Finns, Swedes and Czecho-Slovakins, the whole of whom are a splendid farming class of good and healthy physique, and possessed of ample means to carry them through until they are comfortably settled in Canada.

These settlers were all booked for the prairie provinces. The other part of the immigrants were British, who embarked at Southampton, also a very desirable aggregtaion booked for the west.

STOCKS AND BONDS

At the present time there is a great boom in the mining industry. I have had many years experience in practical mining, both in Cobalt and Porcupine, and have a wide connection there. I am therefore in a position to get early and reliable information in both camps. I have made a profit for every one of my clients up to date, and shall be pleased to advise any one interested. There will be a strong market this summer and now is the time to get in.

KING AND QUEEN FEASTED WITH ROYAL DINNER

Banquet in the Quirinal Palace in Rome Was the Occasion For Splendor and Rejoicing.

MANY PRESENT.

ROME, May 8 (Canadian Press). —The official gala dinner last evening at the Quirinal Palace in honour of King George and Queen Mary was a scene of splendour.

The dinner was held in the banqueting hall of the palace. The fine old tapestries on the walls, the bright reflections in the immense Venetian glass chandeliers, the many uniforms and the wonderful toilets of beautiful women made a vivid impression.

King Victor Emmanuel, in offering a toast to his royal guests, said that Queen Helena and himself regarded the visit of the British sovereigns as an occasion for rejoicing on the part of the whole Italian people and new testimony of old friendship, consecrated at a decisive moment in history.

His Majesty then alluded to the trials of arms borne together in the war as creating a new strengthening of old bonds.

"I feel sure I am interpreting the feelings of my country" he exclaimed, "when I pay sincere tribute to the British people and express the hope that the two people will work together in the tasks that lie before them."

King George, in replying, said:

"I rejoice that it was possible to pay a visit to your historic city and to express there the feelings of friendship and respect with which the Italian people are regarded in all parts of my dominions. Memories of long years, founded on a common conception of liberty and justice, as well as a more recent comradeship in arms, bind the two nations by a tie that no shock can dissolve. I feel well assured that no clouds can efface the glories of these memories."

Besides the British and Italian sovereigns and their suites and the Italian royal princes, the guests included the British Ambassador, Premier Mussolini, Senator Tittoni, President of the Senate, Signor De Nicola, President of the Chamber, Gen. Diaz, Admiral Thaon De Revel, and all the highest officials of the court, state, navy and army.

After the dinner the sovereigns held a circle and conversed cordially with the guests.

Everywhere throughout Rome the royal visitors were received with tremendous cheering, and the visit of Premier Mussolini to the Quirinal for an audience with King George was the occasion of much enthusiasm on the part of the populace.

Rome was illuminated last night, and presented a carnival appearance.

Conference to Be Held in September.

OTTAWA, May 8. Canadian Press —Aconference between Federal and Provincial authorities to be held next September has been determined upon in order to decide what if any action should be taken in regard to matters which have been the subject of recommendation on the part of the International labor conference of the League of Nations.

The agenda of the proposed conference and other details will be arranged by Hon. James Murdock, the Federal Minister of Labor.

ENTIRE VILLAGE AT AILSA CRAIG DANGER FIRE

Aid is Sent From London as Well as From Neighboring Villages — Gasoline Tank Exploded.

VILLAGE DOOMED.

LONDON, Ont., May 8.—(Canadian Press.)— The entire village of Ailsa Craig, 26 miles from here, with a population of 700 people, is being dstroyed by fire. Latest reports from Parkhill, six miles distant, was that the village was doomed.

The fire started at 3.30 yesterday afternoon with an explosion of a gasoline tank near the store of White and May, on the main street. The flames spread immediately to the White and May store and soon every store in the block was doomed.

The operator of the Bell Telephone exchange, which was in a store near the origin of the fire, notified surrounding towns of the catastrophe. Help was immediately sent from Lucan and Parkhill. A later call was received in London by Mayor Wenige from Reeve Morgan and he responded by sending the local department's motor pump and a picked crew of firemen under Chief Aitken.

In response to the appeal of Reeve Morgan, of Ailsa Craig, Fire Chief Aitken and six firemen with the motor pumper were dispatched to that town at 4.18 yesterday afternoon in the hopes of saving some part, at least, of the threatened community. Mayor Wenige received the call from Reeve Morgan and immediately dispatched some of the local departments' best men, under the veteran Chief's command. Mayor Wenige did not secure any details as to the cause of the fire or its extent beyond the urgent statement "that the whole town was menaced."

At five o'clock the telegrapher at the C.N.R. station at Ailsa Craig wired to London asking that Hydro trunk lines be shut off, as lives were being endangered by falling live cables.

RALPH MYLES NOT GUILTY

HALIFAX, N.S., May 8. Canadian Press. — Ralph Myles was declared "not guilty" of the murder last June of his former sweetheart, Florence Miles, by the jury which heard the evidence in the third trial of the case here yesterday. The verdict was brought in at 9.30 last night. Myles was set free.

Canadian Cattle Were Very Healthy

LONDON, May 7. — (Canadian Press).—Replying to a question in the House of Commons yesterday with regard to the report of the medical officer of health of Manchester, Dr. Dearden, that the first shipment of Canadian store cattle to the port of Manchester included animals affected with pulmonary tuberculosis, and asking what steps had been taken or would be taken to protect the public against the dangers arising therefrom, Sir Robert Sanders, Minister of Agriculture, said the section in Dr. Dearden's report referred to was not intended to suggest that Canadian cattle were affected with tuberculosis in any exceptional degree. Indeed, he said, the report in question described this consignment of cattle as "very healthy."

Machinery already existed by which the inspectors of local health or sanitary authorities examined carcasses, the Minister added, and they had power to reject any which they considered unfit for human food.

CONTRADICTORY REPORTS RECEIVED

Col. Buckly Told House of Commons That Immigrants to Australia Were Very Well Treated.

LONDON, May 8. Canadian Press Cable. — Dr. Salter, the Labor member for Bermondsey West, alleged in the House of Commons yesterday that boys 17 or 18 years of age, who had emigrated to Australia under the government assisted scheme, in writing home complained that though their farmer employers had contracted to pay them from 15 to 20 shillings a week, they were receiving no money, and some of the lads were penniless, without proper clothes or boots, were ill-treated, and worked from six o'clock in th morning until ten o'clock at night, like slaves.

Lt.-Colonel Buckley, Secretary of the Department of Overseas Trade, replying to Dr. Salter's allegation, said the boys who had been assisted to go to Australia in the past two years, were placed with farmers to gain experience of work on the land, and only 12 complaints from them had reached the authorities here in that period. These referred to the loneliness of the boys and their complaints of food and other things. Upon investigation their complaints were shown to have been mostly of a frivolous character; on the other hand a letter had reached the office of the overseas settlement expressing satisfaction at the conditions under which the immigrant boys in Australia were working and living.

The Pensions Board Will Await Instructions From Parliament Regarding Certain Cases.

SHOULD ACT NOW.

OTTAWA, May 8. Canadian Press —The patrol by representatives of the Great War Veterans' Association before the offices of the Pension Commissioners, is over. Early last evening a reply to the demand for action on the report of the Royal Commission on Pensions was received by C. G. MacNeil, Dominion Secretary of the G.W.V.A. With regard to the pension rights which the Royal Commission had declared had been withheld by the Board from certain dependent and disability cases, the Pension Board stated that they would await the instructions of Parliament. Cases coming under the recommendations concerning returned soldiers' insurance would be referred to the Minister of Finance.

"Copies of the report of the Royal Commission," the letter says further, "were handed to the Board on Thursday afternoon, the third instant, and it has not had an opportunity of discussing and considering the recommendations at an earlier date."

Commenting on the pension board's letter, Mr. MacNeil said:— "The vital matters which the board are leaving to the decision of Parliament, could be and should be made immediately effective by the board."

United Shippers' Stock Will Not Be Sold.

WINNIPEG, May 8. Canadian Press. — The stock of the United Shippers Limited of Rainy River, District County Court, has reversed the decision of the Magistrate in regard to the seizure of the stock, but the conviction of the company holds and the fine of $2000 imposed for having in its possession alcoholic liquor for illegal sale, having bogus labels, and contravening an act providing against the use of highways for the transport of alcoholic liquor, must be paid by the company.

The case caused much interest locally by reason of the fact that the United Shippers Limited was financed by the defunct Dominion Ticket and Financial Corporation.

TUESDAY, MAY 8TH, 1923.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

Today is the one hundredth anniversay of "Home Sweet Home"—which was first produced at Covent Garden, London, on May 8th, 1823.

The song is as well known today as it was in the first years after its premiere.

The words written by John Howard Payne and the music composed by Henry Rowley Bishop, are familar the world over and it is safe to say that one hundred years from now "Home, Sweet Home" will still continue to bring a suspicious moisture to the eyes when some famous singer in 2023 includes it in his program.

In the interim hundreds of thousands of songs will have been written, had their brief vogue and dropped into oblivion, forgotten, as have the majority of such songs composed in the last century.

Why should "Home, Sweet Home" remain so popular?

The words too are not remarkable in any way.

Yet it continues as a classic when more ambitious attempts have long since faded from memory.

The Examiner believes that the correct answer is supplied by the London Advertiser. The song lives, because every man or woman has had a home; there is something wonderful about childhood; it clings with a tenacity that lasts and tugs at the heart strings in a way that it pleases us best not to resist.

It has lived a century—and will probably live many more.

THE DRUG EVIL.

That the Dominion Government was, as the Examiner pointed out at the time, justified in tightening the regulations against the narcotic traffic, is shown by the recent remarks of Dr. Hastings, the medical officer of Health in Toronto, who declares that the drug menace is one of the most serious evils which Canada must combat, a product of "our present so-called civilization with its tendency to transfer the burden of the bread-winner from the muscle to the nerves."

As Dr. Hastings points out, it is not the phlegmatic that becomes the addict but rather the plethoric, the possessor of a highly sensitive and excitable nervous temperament.

The worst feature is that the traffic is attacking the young.

Whereas in India and China the use of opium is confined for the most part to those of middle or old age, the users of heroin, morphine and cocaine in Canada and the United States range in the majority of cases from 10 to 12 to 30 or 35 years of age."

The annual per capita consumption of morphine in the United States is estimated at from 30 to 40 grains and there is reason to fear that conditions in Canada are rapidly approaching the same level.

The Government cannot be too drastic in its treatment of this curse. Half way measures are only playing with danger and the evil must be stamped out by the state.

PLAYING WITH MATCHES.

A six-year-old Toronto girl died in the hospital on Sunday as a result of burns received when her clothing caught fire from a match with which she was playing.

In Peterborough at least three fires during the past week were caused in a similar manner.

These incidents should carry their warning to parents generally.

Every effort should be made to impress upon children who are old enough to understand the fact, that matches are a very dangerous article to fool with and every precaution should be taken to keep matches out of the hands of smaller children.

Canada's fire loss, much higher per capita than in any of the European countries, is due to the most part, to preventable causes.

Experts declare that at least 75 per cent of the fires could be eliminated if ordinary care were exercised.

No one cause is more responsible for these preventable fires than carelessness in allowing children of tender years to have matches as play things.

The tragedy in Toronto and the starting of three fires in this city in one week from this cause should cause people to be on their guard against this practice which is based chiefly upon the lack of thought of those who should be keenest in their desire to protect their children and property from danger.

Keep matches away from children and many fires will be prevented is the advice of those who are in the best position to know.

MISS LOGAN'S TRIUMPH.

A band played, flowers were presented, there was an address of welcome by the Mayor and a triumphal procession in which prominent citizens were glad to take part followed—all in honour of a young girl not yet out of school who had faced the competition of the country in five different classes of pianoforte tests and emerged triumphant in every section.

The reception to Miss Agnes Logan yesterday, must have been a proud moment for the yonng pianist, for it showed her that her exploit had not passed unnoticed and unhonoured in her home city.

And it was a tribute most creditably earned.

The Toronto triumph it must be remembered was only the final achievement.

To reach that pinnacle of success, Miss Logan has had to make sacrifices that few children nowadays would consent to make.

Her artistry is not due alone to natural talent but also to long hours of consistent practice, day after day in nice weather as well as in bad, hours when other young people were enjoying themselves.

Her success is a fitting climax to her long period of preparation and should be an object lesson to every citizen in the spirit of determination and tenacity it reveals.

Mr. Gliddon declared to the Rotary Club yesterday that Miss Logan will soon belong to the world at large and not to Peterborough, and her splendid accomplishment in Toronto indicates that the prediction is correct.

But Peterborough can continue to be proud of her not only for her talent, but for the lesson she has given us all.

DEAR SUGAR.

Nine men are said to control sugar—nine men well known to each other whose mills dominate 70 per cent. of the Cuban crop, says the Star Weekly. Moreover of the eigthy-five American mills in Cuba, forty-nine are owned by or affiliated with the American seaboard refineries. And the group of affiliated or combined interests owns 3,000,000 tons of sugar, not on paper, but in the hogshead

There is no shortage of sugar. There is an estimated surplus of 476,000 tons, about five-eighths the average surplus for the ten years prior to the war. There is no shortage, but the price has risen phenomenally since the first of February. It is not a case of supply and demand. Tariff increases do not adequately account for it. Speculation in sugar is commonly blamed. At any rate, the rise in prices has been so serious that the public is said to have paid an unnecessary $115,000,000. Six agencies of the United States are in consequence investigating. The Department of Justice threatens to invoke criminal as well as civil law. Investigations are also in progress through the Federal Trade Commission, Tariff Commission, Department of Agriculture, Department of Commerce and Treasury Department.

Until it is proven otherwise, the public will inevitably conclude that the fact of a sugar combine has something to do with the fact of an unnecessary increase in the price of sugar. Monopolies and high prices have a habit of sitting at the same table. On this side of the border, the prosecution of combines has not been markedly successful. The progress of the six United States investigations will therefore be watched with interest, but not too much hope.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

The Dominion parliament yesterday passed Hon. Charles Stewart's bill abolishing the head tax on Chinese immigrants and restricting the classes to be admitted from that country in future to merchants and students. The poll tax is held to be an institution unworthy of a Christian nation. These Orientals are brought in and permitted to live in a way which would not to be tolerated in the case of native Canadian workers. They are thus able to underbid the whites in the labor market, and there is the ever-present fear that their presence may lead to a general lowering of industrial standards. The laboring class of Chinese immigrant is, therefore, to be excluded henceforward, and only the "intellectuals" and traders admitted. The merchants, it is expected, will help to promote international trade, and so be o service to Canada. They must have substantial business connections in both countries to be qualified for entry.

When Mr. King wrote his famous book on Industry and Humanity, he could have but little idea that he would be called upon as premier to deal with the problems discussed. This particular question of Oriental immigration is one which made a special appeal to Mr. King as a student of industrial conditions, for he had been appointed on more than one occasion to investigate troubles in the western provinces arisng from that cause. He went personally to China, among other places, to confer with the authorities regarding the relations of the eastern people with this continent. From these experiences he came to the conclusion that the problem of Oriental immigration could be solved, to the satisfaction of all parties, only if it was dealt with as an economic problem—"not as a problem of race, or color or creed." "It is a question of competing labor standards," he writes, "and its solution, alike for the Orient and America, lies, not in permitting the highest standards to be brought to the level of the lowest, but in seeking to raise the lowest to the level of the highest." In this, he thinks both the Occident and the Orient have much to learn from each other. The West must raise the Oriental conception of what is due to the dignity of labor, while the Orient in its turn "may teach something of thrift and frugality, of the happiness which comes from plain living and high thinking and of obligation in family and social relations."

The Chinese laborer will not be given any further chances of exemplifying the virtues of thrift and frugality. The presence of Chinese students will not have any immediate effect on the "law of competing standards," but its ultimate effect is likely to be significant. Mr. Woodsworth, the Labor member for Winnipeg, appealed to the house to place every facility in the way of these Chinese students remarking that the problem of the "rising tide of color" would have to be faced some day, whether we liked it or not. The argument is apparently, to make friends while the opportunity lasts. There will be every disposition to adopt Mr. Woodsworth's advice; but what is to happen when China, like Japan, has learnt all it can of us and trained up its millions along western lines? Then, indeed, the problem will assume much larger proportions than it does at present. The exclusion measures now prescribed are merely temporary expedients to meet local conditions which were becoming more and more aggravated.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

With the Legislature through and the Gregory Commission sitting in camera, the campaigners will have to do a lot of talking to make Ontario seem normal.

A French woman doctor decares there is too much fuss and feathers about weddings. And tired men everywhere will applaud the statement.

Not the least interesting feature of the election campaign is the journalistic battle between the Farmers' Sun and the Toronto Star. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor continues to make Government House a meeting place for the various interests in Ontario. The dinner to prominent Labour leaders on Saturday night is another proof of His Honour's desire to establish harmonious relations in the province.

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, May 8.—A pleasant social gathering was held in the Congregational Church Sunday school room in honor of Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Carson, the former pastor and his wife who were leaving for this new pastorate in Quebec. Sincere good wishes were extended to Mr. and Mrs. Carson in their new home. At an opportune moment Mr. Harry Field, on behalf of the congregation, presented Mr. and Mrs. Carson with a handsome electric lamp and Master Billie, the little son of the parsonage, with a pretty set of silverware for a child. Mr. Carson spoke at some length in replying and gave expression to the pleasure, which he had taken in his work here. There was a musical programme also and dainty refreshments were served before the gathering broke up.

The choir of the Cobourg Congregational church, The Tuxis Boys and the Coldsprings Congregational church also remembered Rev. and Mrs. Carson with pretty parting gifts.

URGE THAT RANEY CONTEST ELECTION

Announcement That Attorney-General Will Resign Comes as a Surprise

TORONTO, May 8.—(Canadian Press)—Hon. W. E. Raney will be urged by members of the United Farmers Party in Ontario to reconsider his decision to resign from the post of Attorney-General and consent to run in the coming Provincial elections.

The announcement of the Attorney-General's decision not to be a candidate came as a great surprise to the Government supporters in Legislature, most of whom received their first intimation of it in the newspapers.

Many of the members of the Legislature were interviewed this morning over long-distance telephone and were unanimous in expressing regret over Mr. Raney's decision, and hoped he would reconsider it.

Mr. and Mrs. Raney are in Atlantic City today and up till noon few ministers had returned to their offices at Queens Park, so that no announcement was available from administration to supplement published interviews with Premier Drury which held out hopes that Mr. Raney would be prevailed upon to remain in public life.

Ministers Regret.

The Toronto Methodist Ministerial Association today adopted a resolution expressing its keen regret at the pending resignation of Attorney-General Hon. W. E. Raney.

"We believe" said the resolution, that Mr. Raney during the past four years has discharged the duties of his office with competence and energy and fearlessness which have won unstated approval and admiration of all people of Ontario, whatever their party who have highest interest of the province at heart—his retirement from public life would be calamity we sincerely hope that private reasons which have seemed to demand it may yet be found not to demand it.

A small dose at bedtime brings relief and laughter by morning

HOSPITAL and doctor's records prove that 75 per cent of human ills has its origin in the intestinal canal, complicated with what is commonly called constipation. Realizing what that figure means, mothers should contrive methods of handling their children while they still control them that will prevent these future dangers. Teach children regularity of bowel movement, and be especially watchful of young girls. Insist on two passages a day until the age of 18, when one is usually sufficient. Give plenty of oranges and apples, plenty of butter because it lubricates the intestines, and encourage the drinking of water.

If you detect restlessness, belching, gas or wind on the stomach, sleeplessness, or lack of appetite, examine the tongue and you will find it coated, accompanied by unpleasant breath. The child is bilious, constipated. According to age, give from one-half to a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin, which children never object to taking as they like the taste. By morning the youngster will be well again. Likewise if the nostrils are stuffed up or there is persistent sneezing, a dose of Laxative Syrup Pepsin will break up the fever and cold.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try my Laxative Syrup Pepsin. will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. THE CAMPBELLFORD FAIR BD. AROUSED

CAMPBELLFORD, May 8.—The action of the directors of the Peterboro Exhibition in voting to charge owners of trottings horses for the privilege of racing on the track have aroused some of the members of the Fair Board here who regard the move as a blow to this form of sport that is already carried on under many handicaps and discouragements. One prominent director of the Fair here spoke to the Examiner as follows:

"Campbellford is looking forwad to one of the biggest days they have had for years on the 24th of May. Prospects are particularly bright for one of the best afternoons of light harness horse racing that the town has ever had.

"One of the members of the committee has interviewed horse men of Belleville, Peterboro and the surrounding towns. They all show a good word for the busy town by the Trent and say they will be on hand when the bell rings with their studs. Their only regret is that they have not some local horsese to share the liberal purses that are being offered.

"The good half mile track here is free for the use of trainers that wish to fit their horses. We cordially invite them to use it, for the season if they wish. The lovers of the light harness horse, that spends their money to develop the breed and help the harness horse for use in this northen clime is entitled to all the favors he can get. We would be sorry to see any of our sister towns, do anything to discouraging them in their efforts, and cause us to lose interest in one of the greatest servants of man."

AMERICANS IN BANDITS' HANDS

Chinese Brigands Wrecked Express Train and Carried Into Captivity 300 Passengers.

PEKING, May 7, 4.30 p.m. —(Special).—Twenty-eight foreigners, including Americans, are held as Hostages by Chinese bandits, who wrecked China's finest express train in the Southern Shantung Province and carried off 300 men and women passengers.

The names of thirteen Americans who were aboard the train have been compiled by the American Legation here.

Despatches received here up to this hour apparently confirmed the earlier reports of the capture of Robert P. Scripps, director of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, and Miss Lucy Aldrich, sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr. A foreigner who was killed has been identified as an Englishman by the name of Rothman. A thousand bandits attacked the train near Lincheng, in the south-western section of Shantung, between Pukow and Tien Tsin. A portion of the track was rooted up and the engine plunged into the ditch, leaving the passengers an easy prey for the bandits.

The names of thirteen American passengers as listed by the Legation are: Miss Lucy Aldrich, sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; Lee Solomon, Leo Friedman, Miss Macfadyen, Major R. N. Pinger, his wife and two children; Capt. Allen and M. J. Powell, of the Chicago Tribune, and J. A. Henley. Other Americans whose capture was apparently confirmed were: Capt. Roland Allen, of Manilla, his wife and two children, and Miss MacFadyen. (Mrs. Allen in a later despatch was said to have escaped).

Release the Women.

Reports trickling in here from the Shantung border at Linehang, where early yesterday one thousand bandits seized the Shanghai-Peking express train on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and took captive 150 passengers, indicate that the British subject named Rothman was killed and a number of United States citizens, probably all men, stood in peril at the mercy of the brigands this afternoon. Troops are believed to be pursuing the bandits.

All the women captives, including Lucy Aldrich, Miss MacFadyen, and Miss Coralli, have been released.

IN LAKEFIELD AND DISTRICT

Fire Brigade Extolled For Good Work—Arbor Day Observed—Political Conventions Slated.

LAKEFIELD, May 8.—The necessity for the fire brigade was demonstrated conclusively at the fire on Thursday afternoon when the government house, occupied by lockmaster, J. J. McFadden was badly damaged. Under ordinary conditions the house would have been totally destroyed and probably some of the neighboring dwellings also, but the promptness and efficiency shown by the brigade saved the building from utter destruction. Mr. McFadden, who was on the spot, gives the greatest credit to the brigade and emphatically states that the splendid way that they handled the fire saved hundreds of dollars worth of property. An out of town visitor expressed gratified surprise at the work of the fire engine and the firemen. Very few villages are as well equipped in this particular as Lakefield.

Arbor Day Observed.

Friday was observed as Arbor day in the school and the young people went to work like beavers to clean up the grounds. To say that there was a great improvement afterwards is far too mild statement. It was a real "clean up."

CAMPBELLFORD BOARD APPEAL FOR A GRANT TO TOWNSHIP COUNCIL

President Alex. Hume Has No Desire to See the Seymour Fair Pass Out of Existence.

A COUNCIL MEETING.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 8. —A deputation from the Board of Directors of the Seymour Agricultural Society waited on the township council yesterday and asked for a grant of $250, an increase of $100 over the amount voted last year. It was finally agreed to make a grant equal to that of last year, Deputy-reeve Nelson and Councillor Milne dissenting on the ground that the fair should be financed by private contributions.

The deputation consisted of President Alex. Hume, Secretary J. Nelson Stone and Directors T. J. Horkins and Joseph Hoey, every one of whom addressed the Council. President Hume said the directors were striving to make the fair better every year. The time will come when the small fairs will be done away with, and the Board's object was to save the local exhibition from such a fate. It was hoped to make improvements every year so that eventually the directors would be in a position to ask a grant from the Dominion government.

Mr. Hume said that last year the town council had given the Board the sum of $250 and it had been decided to ask the township for a like amount. A number of improvements in the buildings have been projected and the most important of these is a rest room for women.

Fair Shows Growth.

Secretary Stone submitted figures to show the growth of the fair year by year. The directors had always tried to make it the best fair in this part of Ontario and were getting it into that position, The amount given in prizes last year was nearly double that paid out in 1920. Last year's fair was ahead of those given by Picton, Peterborough and Belleville. A three days' fair is now spoken of and such an exhibition is likely to be held in the near future.

After Director Hoey had endorsed what had been said by the previous speakers, Director Horkins made a plea for the increased grant. The Board is carrying a mortgage of $1,700 incurred by putting up one of the finest poultry houses in Central Ontario, a building the estimated cost of which was $3,000, but which, by good management, had been erected for $2,300. The fair, he said, is one of the best means for educating farmers and their families. The new High school which the town is going to build is for the training chiefly, of teachers, lawyers and doctors.

Opposed Grant.

Deputy-reeve Nelson, seconded by Councillors Milne, moved that no grant be made. Both wanted it understood that they were not opposed to the fair but held that it should be financed by private contributions or that the voting of a grant by the council should be authorized by the majority of ratepayers, a public meeting to be called for the purpose.

Reeve Von Volkenburg and Councillor Peake submitted an amendment providing that a grant of $150, the same as last year, be made. This carried by a majority of one, Councillor McKelvie voting with the Reeve and Councillor Peake.

Trent Bridge Memorial.

Ex-Reeve A. H. McKeel, of Campbellford, is behind a movement to erect a monument at Trent Bridge in memory of the resident of that place killed in the Great War, Oliver Richard Cowain, who fell at Vimy Ridge on 9th April, 1917. The late Mr .Cowain was a prominent guide for hunters and fishermen and the memorial is to be paid for by contributions from his friends It will be erected on government land, for which a rental of $1 a year will be charged, the township of Seymour to be the tenant.

Mr. McKeel appeared before Council to ask for the appointment of trustees to sign the lease on behalf of the township and it was decided to name Reeve Van Volkenburg and H. Wood of Trent Bridge, for these positions.

Work on Roads.

A number of applications were received for repairs to highways. Robert MacAlpine asked that part of the road north of the 14th concession be graded as it was unfit for traffic at certain seasons and that the rural mail man had threatened to throw up his job unless some action is taken. One one half no work has been in 27 years. The council agreed to look over this highway with a view to directing any needed repairs.

James Forrestall and Robert Burton asked that the big hill on the road to Meyersburg be repaired, and after adjournment the members of the council autoed to the place for an investigation.

Granted a Lease.

H. B. Wood was granted a lease of a road allowance through his property, at a nominal rental of $1 a year, to enable him to keep the fences in repair as he uses the road as a pasture for his cattle. People using the road often throw down the fences to reach it and Mr. Wood's stock wander away. He has, however, no intention of closing the allowance as a thoroughfare.

School Attendance Officer.

The report of School Attendance Officer Arnold was submitted and accepted. It showed that a number of children had been temporarily kept out of school to assist in the spring work, but conditions are not at all serious in the matter of attendance.

Council on Hydro.

Reeve Van Volkenburg went to Toronto recently as a delegate from the Council to appear as a witness before the Gregory Hydro Commission .He was armed with a resolution, unanimously adopted by his colleagues, which recommended that the control of the Hydro remain in the hands of the government.

While he was before the Commission the Reeve filed an objection to the system in use by the Hydro officials by which transmission lines are built through private property without the formality of asking permission, the question of damage to be settled by the Board of Arbitration, This practice, the Reeve said, was contrary to British justice and fair play and he maintained that terms should be agreed upon before the work was started on any private land.

A Hydro official, who was at the hearing, on being questioned, admitted that there was a law to that effect, but it had not been strictly followed.

R. B. Roger of Peterborough, was in town yesterday.

ODDFELLOWS OBSERVE FOUNDING OF ORDER

CAMPBELLFORD, May 7.—The Campbellford Lodge of Oddfellows celebrated the 104th anniversary of the founding of the Order by holding their annual church parade on Sunday night to the Methodist Church, where Rev. Capt. H. B. Kenny, who is himself a member of the lodge, and who marched with the brethren, preached a most inspiring sermon, in which he extolled the high purposes of the organization.

There were 62 Oddfellows in the procession, which started from the lodge-rooms in the Ferris block, Bro. Sergt. George T. Salter, Junior N.G., acting as marshal, a position which he has filled on like occasions for years. Among the marchers were 15 visiting brethren from Brighton, two from Frankford, and two from Springbrook. Seats were reserved for the Oddfellows, all of whom wore the regalias of the Order, in the centre pews of the church, and the edifice was filled to the doors with other worshippers.

Capt. Kenny's discourse was based on the beautiful story told in the tenth chapter of Second Samuel. David, who had succeeded Saul as King of Israel, resolved to help any member of the family of the former monarch, who were in need, for the sake of his dead friend Jonathan.

Mephibosheth was the son of Jonathon, and his destitute case was brought to the notice of the King by one of the latter's servants, for Mephibosheth was a child of five when his father, Jonathon, and his grandfather, Saul, lost their lives in that disastrous historic battle with the Philistines. After that combat a horseman came galloping to the home of Jonathon and warned the boy's nurse to flee with him from the conquerors. In the flight the nurse dropped the child, who, as a result of the fall, became a helpless cripple for life,

An accident such as that, the preacher said, was a serious matter at any time, but in the age in which it occurred, it practically meant the extinction of the victim. Physical deformity barred him from the priesthood and from the throne of Israel. When David found Mephibosheth he was a helpless pauper, but for the sake of his dead friend Jonathon, the King made his unfortunate son a member of the royal household, and for the rest of his days Mephibosheth ate at the King's table.

Captain Kenny likened this act of David to the work that is being carried on by the Oddfellows in saving people from becoming the objects of public charity, a condition which all should strive to avoid. That work, Captain Kenny said, is one reason why he prizes the order and esteems so highly his own membership in it.

The act of David was vicarious, It was done for the sake of someone else, and that is the essence of all charity. Just as David showed kindness to Mephibosheth for Jonathan's sake, so the Oddfellows help the needy and unfortunate for the sake of Christ.

Captain Kenny does not believe in excessive humility. He criticised the attitude assumed by Mephibosheth when he learned what David planned to do for him, and humbly asked him why he should interest himself in such a dead dog as he. The speaker does not like to hear a man refer to himself as a worm of the dust. Every being whom God has created should hold himself in higher regard than that, and realise that he was a cog in the great plan of creation.

The whole tenor of te discourse denoted a high opinion of the good that is in every man, even if it be dormant. The song that is in the average human heart, said the speaker, is better than that which the lips are able to utter.

Antiquity of the Order.

In welcoming the visitors to the service, the speaker referred to the Egyptian records made 2,000 years before the line of Abraham, records which told of the feeding of the hungry and the clothing of the naked, work similar to that which the Oddfellows are carrying on today. There was love on earth twenty centuries before Abraham's day and long before that period—the love of good.

Fine Musical Service.

A fine musical service was rendered under the direction of R. T. Cowell, organist and leader, the choir rendering two anthems as special offerings. The regular hymns, chosen were, "Onward Christian Soldiers," "O God Our Help in Ages Past," and "Unto the Hills Around Do I Lift Up My Longing Eyes."

After the Service.

After the service the Oddfellows marched back to their lodge room where a short session was held. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Capt. Henry for his discourse and to the choir for their excellent musical programme. Brief addresses were made by Bros. McCooke and Alexander of Brighton Smith of Frankfort and by Rev. H. B. Kenny, G. A. Kingston, J. A. Irwin, J. Marquard and Sergt. George T. Salter of the local lodge.

At Brighton Sunday.

The annual church service of the Brighton Lodge will be held in the Presbyterian church in that town at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon. About forty members of the Campbellford lodge expect to attend.

The Officers.

The officers of the Campbellford lodge are: Harry Anderson, Noble Grand; T. Craighead, Vice Grand; J. F. McGregor, Recording Secretary; C. C. Massie, Financial Secretary, and S. A. Maguire, Treasurer.

HARRY ANDERSON.

Noble Grand of the Campbellford Oddfellows' Lodge. Mr. Anderson is only 21 years old and is said to be the youngest member ever elected to that high office in America.

SAY PREM. DRURY WAS EXTRAVAGANT

Also Failed Utterly to Give Ontario Responsible Government—Liberals Meet.

OTTAWA May 8. — (Canadian Press). —Declaring that Druryism has failed utterly to give Ontario responsible government and to conduct affairs of the Province on a sound business basis, Major J. C. Tolmi, of Windsor, and H. H. Dewart of Toronto, delivered telling speeche, here last night in St. Anne's Hall in the interests of the Liberals of East Ottawa, the member for which has been J. A. Pinard.

"The Drury Government has raised more money and has spent more money than any other Government in the history of the Province," said Major Tolmie, "and it has failed completely to maintain the position of responsibility to people."

Referring to Temperance question Major Tolmie argued that there should be no dictation to the people as to what kind of legislation they should have, but they should be given full and frequent opportunity to express their will on this vital issue

Mr. Dewart scored the Drury Government for its extravagance. Mr. Drury, too, had exemplified an autocratic form of Government on the question of control of Hydro-Electric ower, as for four years he had refused to carry out the requests of Liberals that the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission be reformed from within by including on its directorate a representative of municpalites "who own that Commission's property and bear its financial burden.,'

CAMPBELLFORD, May 8—The long drawn out controversy over the raising of money for the new High School has been settled at last. By a vote of five to three the Council in regular session last night, authorized the issue of debentures for $68,000 as requested by the Board of Education. The vote was as follows, the motion to raise the money having been made by Councillor Allan and seconded by Councillor Carter.

Yeas—Allan, Carter, Burke, Meiklejohn and Mayor Meyers.

Nays—Reeve Anderson, Deputy Reeve Wilkinson, Councillor Dorie Councillor Cole who was present at the opening of the session had been called out of the meeting by telephone before the vote was taken.

Before this division on motion of Councillors Carter and Burke, it was decided to rescind the resolution adopted at the special session last week to refer the question for further legal advice to Hon. N. W. Rowell of Toronto. All of the Councillors supported this action with the exception of Councillor Dorie who stood to his guns.

When the debenture issue was disposed of Mayor Meyers said that the majority had acted on the advice of the town solicitor, that the legal aspect of the question alone had been considered and that no other course appeared to them possible.

Reeve Anderson in explaining his position said that he had acted from principle and he felt that an injustice had been done the taxpayers. The Council, however, had placed the responsibility for the expenditure upon the Board of Education, where it belonged. The Board in his opinion had missed an opportunity and in the future the people would elect councils and school boards that would not expend $75,000 of the taxpayers' money without taking a vote of those who would pay the bill. He referred to the council's conference last winter with the Minister of Education. He hoped that the controversy would not be dropped but regretted that the Board did not wait until they had money enough to put up a High School as originally planned.

Mayor Meyers said that the attitude of Reeve Anderson was not fair to his colleagues.

Councillor Allan intimated that at the special meeting the Councillors had agreed to be bound by the decision of Mr. Rowell. He offered to second a motion to raise another $20,000, to put up a complete building if Reeve Anderson would move it.

Deputy-Reeve Wilkinson also explained his vote at considerable length and the matter was finally allowed to drop.

Routine Business

A long budget or routine business was disposed of. D. E. James of Toronto submitted estimates for a new plan of the town the most elaborate type of which would cost $5,000. This matter, together with an offer from Fraser Aylesworth, a surveyor of Madoc, was referred to the Inquiry Committee.

The Ogilvie Building

A communication was received from the Department of Public Works at Ottawa with regard to repairs to the Ogilvie property which the government has leased as an Armouries, new roof will be put on on the interior overhauled. The town must heat and light the building the Department to furnish the stoves The lease runs three years from March 6th last with the option of renewal for another three years. The rent is $120 a year to be paid quarterly in advance.

Grant to Fair Board.

President Alexander Hume, Secretary J. N. Stone and Director T. J. Horkins, of the Fair Board, asked for the usual grant of $250, repeating the arguments which they used at the meeting of the Seymour Council in the afternoon. Director Horkins suggested that the council grant $500 for a Merchants and Manufacturers Building on condition that the Board spend an equal amount on such a structure.

Councillors Allans and Carters motion that the $250 grant be made was carried by a vote of seven to one.

Reeve Anderson, who voted in the negative, moved that the garnt be $100 or that the grounds be rented for that amount for a town playground but this amendment was not seconded.

May Build Bridge.

D. A. McCook, of McCook & McKelvie, sawmill owners, asked that Simpson street be opened and that a bridge be built across Trout Creek to give the firm a short road over which to haul their lumber to the railway siding. Their output this season will amount to over half a million feet.

The Council will look over the ground on Wednesday morning with a view to granting the request, as the opinion seemed to be general that this firm, which now employs a number of men, is entitled to the improvement. Reeve Anderson and Councillor Cole will be a committe to ascertain the probable cost of the proposed bridge.

At the same time on Wednesday the council will look into the question of making some improvements on Ranney stret that have been asked by J. C. Birmingham and J. I. Adams. They will also consider the fitting up of the vacant lot at the corner of Rear and Bridge streets as a parking place for cars.

Wants Free Light.

Councillor Allan asked Mayor Meyers to use his influence to have the Water and Light Commission light the town free of charge, the annual bill for this being $3500, money which could be expended otherwise by the council.

The Mayor said there was little chance of securing such a concession this year.

Auto Speeding.

Councillor Carter called attention to the high speed at which some autos pass through the town, and it was decided to put up signs notifying motorists that the limit within the municipality was 15 miles an hour.

The Light that failed.

Deputy Reeve Wilkinson voiced a complaint on behalf of residents on Saskatoon avenue that the lighting on that thoroughfare is not satisfactory, and the attention of the commission will be called to this matter.

Clerk McGregor was instructed to write the National Railyway Company asking that a higher retaining wall be built over Saskatoon Avenue to prevent the soil from dropping down upon the sidewalk.

Financial Statement.

Councillor Meiklejohn, chairman of the Finance Committee, submitted a financial statement showing that the expenditure so far this year was over $17,000. A special session to be held next week on the call of the Mayor, will strike the rate for the year.

Wants Industrial Committee.

Councillor Burke advocated the appointment of an industrial committee of two or more members to secure the location of factories here, and so make Campbellford a real live town. He would have the powers of such a committee defined by the council, and authority given to send one or more representatives to manufacturers looking for locations. They could also advertise in the newspapers setting forth the advantages of the town. As it was late in the evening when the matter was brought up it was decided on motion of Reeve Anderson and Councillor Dorie to defer its consideration until a special meeting. Mayor Meyers thought that it would be a good idea to have such a committee cooperate with the Industrial Committee of the Board of Commerce.

Work on Sewers.

Bylaws were drawn up proving for the construction of the four sewers already arranged for, on Inkerman, Garry, Rear and Second streets. The session lasted until near midnight.

SHARP DEBATE ON THE COMBINE BILL

Dr. Manion Declares Canada is Suffering From Too Many Laws.

OTTAWA, May 8 (Canadian Press). — The second reading of the Combines Bill brought some sharp debating in the House yesterday. "The legislation," explained Premier King, "does not seek in any way to restrict just combines or agreements between business and industrial houses and firms, but it does seek to protect the public against the possible ill effects of these combines." It was directed against the combine that operated to the detriment of the public.

Conservatives warmly criticise the Bill.

Right Hon .Arthur Meighen, the Opposition leader, described the Bill as a measure not to get concrete results, but one for avoiding them.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, of Vancouver Centre, opposed it because it was "inquisitorial." It would "harrass business without serving any useful purpose," he said.

Hon. Dr. Manion thought Canada had too many laws being enacted by the Federal, Provincial, and municipal authorities to a point that the statute books were cluttered up with regulations, of which the average person had no knowledge.

Some criticism of the Bill also came from the Liberal ranks.

H. Marler, of Montreal, doubted if the Bill, as worded, would carry out the purpose intended.

P. F. Casgrain, of Charlevoix-Montmorency, suggested a number of amendments Unless amended, he thought the Bill would fail in its objects.

W. F. Carroll, of Cape Breton, on the other hand declared that "when capital combines to get the last cent from the consumer, it should be declared criminal."

RUSSIA HAS STOPPED EXPORTS TO BRITAIN

MOSCOW, May 8. — (Canadian Press.)—According to reports from Petrograd, all exports to Great Britain have been stopped. Apparently this step has been taken by the government because of the British note reported to be on its way which might result in breaking off relations.

HOPES OF GERMANY CENTER IN BRITAIN

Believes British Note Will Offer Means of Effecting Settlement.

BERLIN, May 8.— (Special.) — The German Cabinet will be called into session to discuss the French reply on reparations as soon as Chancellor Cuno returns to Berlin, when the new proposals will be discussed.

There will, however, be no decision on the French rejection of Germany's thirty billion gold mark offer until the expected note from England is received.

German officials are looking forward with hope to the communication from Great Britain, believing that it will contain some loophole through which she may be able to seek a settlement. Germany by no means believes negotiations closed.

RETURNED VOLUNTARILY TO FACE COURT-MARTIAL

WERDEN, Germany, May 8. — (Canadian Press.) — Baron Krupp Von Boslem, on trial with others by court martial in connection with recent rioting at the Krupp plant, admitted yesterday that he had been told in Berlin that he would be arrested immediately upon his return to the Ruhr. "Knowing I would be arrested," he said, "I came back to the my place on this bench. I could not desert my colleagues. I felt in duty bound to face court martial."

His testimony was given in a high-pitched voice and his declaration was cheered by the crowded court. A verdict may be reached to-night.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Musical Attraction in the Methodist Church Struck Responsive Cord--W.M.S. Had Successful Year.

MILLBROOK, May 8th. — The entertainment given by the Peerless Concert Company, successors to the Jubilee Singers, in the Methodist church on Friday evening, was well attended, considering the number of counter attractions the same evening and gave great satisfaction to the audience assembled. From the opening chorus to the concluding number the interest in the programme never waned and repeated demands for encores were generously responded to.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. S. T. Tucker, Mr. P. Stinson made a brief opening address, introducing the company in a few well chosen remarks, explaining that each was a member of the church in good standing, and that the plantation garb, worn in the first half of the programme is most suitable to the old-time melodies and plantation songs which were sung with excellent effect.

Miss Regina Briscoe made an accomplished accompanist showing rare ability and technique, her piano solo bringing forth warm applause. Perhaps in their chorus singing and quartette work, the company was most appreciated, though the rich, sweet contralto of Miss Grace Thompson made her solos very pleasing, and Madame A. J. Price has a strong clear soprano that charmed her audience.

The humorist of the company is Mr. Jerry C. Anderson, and probably a better basso singer has seldom been heard here. Throughout the programme the entertainers gave evidence of refinement and education and deserve the success which they are meeting with, having engagements booked for a month or more ahead. They were in Lindsay for Saturday and Sunday following their concert in Millbrook.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Mrs. Eldred will be glad to answer all questions pertaining to babies and children. A stamped and self-addressed envelope, forwarded to this office, will bring a personal reply.

TOILET ARTICLES FOR THE BABY.

In addition to the actual layet which the mother prepares for the baby there are the necessary toilet articles which she must have in readiness for his daily bath.

A fray may be used to hold the articles or a small open basket which may be painted and enamelled to match the bed basket. Here is a list of the necessary supplies.

Absorbent cotton and toothpicks.

Normal salt solution —1 level teaspoon of salt to one pint of water (this to be used to wash the eyes each morning).

Castile soap.

Small scissors (for cutting baby's nails).

Orange wood stock, for cleaning them.

Soft wash cloths and towels.

Assorted sizes of safety pins.

Bath thermometer.

If all of these are in one place the daily bath is a simple enough matter. There may be, for convenience, the small water bottle and clean nipples in a clean jar with which the baby is given his daily two ounces of drinking water. The water may be boiled fresh every day and kept in a tightly covered bottle. A small bag may be hung to the side of the basket in which waste bits of cotton used when bathing the baby may be thrown and later burnt. These are merely added comforts.

GAME OVERSEER CAUGHT FISHERMEN ON THE JOB

Two men ran away from the banks of the Otonabee below Peterborough yesterday when a fish and game overseer approached. A guilty conscience and the fear of being caught actuated them.

On his arrival at the spot vacated by them the overseer found two good-sized lunge and the spear with which they had been slain. On weighing the fish for shipment to Toronto it was found that they turned the scale at 28 pounds and 14 pounds respectively. The men escaped but may yet be apprehended.

The Fish and Game Inspector believes the fish are sent to hospitals in Toronto.

BROKE A BANK BY THE THEFT OF LARGE SUM

Two Men Who Are Now in Gaol as a Result Declare it Does Not Pay to Steal.

ON MAIN STREET

YORK, Pa., May 7. — Two men who have confessed to getting a million dollars "easy money" out of the same bank at the same time, now say it doesn't pay.

They are in jail and the City Bank of York which has nearly 10,000 depositors, has been forced to close its doors.

Thomas B. Baird was a school teacher in this little Pennsylvania Dutch county. The pay wasn't very attractive; nor was the work very thrilling. And Baird wanted to marry.

So he got a job in the local bank.

Money passed through his hands in quantities that he had only dreamed about. It set him thinking.

He wanted to rise above the life in the small town. He wanted to do big things.

The thought worked on him, and worked on him, and finally, he succumbed.

According to his confession, he began his manipulations in 1900.

He was caught only last month.

During the 23 years of his activities, he says he stole more than $800,000!

Alongside Baird, who was the cashier of the bank, worked William H. Boll, as assistant. He, too, had lived in the little town for many years, and was tired of it.

He began travelling with a fast set. It was hard keeping up, until he, too, started to find an easy way out.

It consisted of sprinkling forged notes among the bank's papers, and pocketing the money, bank officials say.

Baird's technique was different. The investigators say he took cash from the saving deposits and put false charge slips through the ledger.

Neither knew of the other's operations. It went on for years.

In 1915 Boll went on a vacation. Baird looked over the books. He discovered defalcations, but said nothing.

Boll learned only recently that there were other irregularities.

But the State authorities didn't discover anything wrong until last week, State Bank Examiner R. P. Ferguson was the first inspector in 23 years who saw through the cashier's manipulations.

"Just as soon as he stepped up to the bookkeeper," says Baird, "I wrote on a slip of paper 'It's all up' and showed it to Boll."

But that night both men came back to the bank.

"Baird took $1,000, and Boll $500 as their last loot, to hire lawyers," says the District Attorney.

"There's no use trying to beat the game," said Baird when he was arrested and jailed after failure to raise $200,000 bail.

He said he had lost the money in wildcat speculations.

In 1915, according to Baird, he was short in his accounts between $200,000 and $300,000, all of which he claims, was lost in bucket shops.

He backed many oil and mining companies with half a million dollars, officials say, in an attempt to make big money and get out of the small-town banker class. He wanted to show the world that he could be a big financier.

But Boll went into the game for a different reason. He wanted to step up out of small-town society.

"Remember two things," he told me, the first newspaper man to interview him in the county jail, "it may be easy to get into fast company, but it's mighty hard to keep up with it. I know. I tried it.

Boll's salary was $3,500 a year. For many years it had been $2,000.

Both men are over 50, married, and have large families.

Wives of the arrested men are determined to stand behind them. This in spite of State Banking Commissioner Cameron's statement that he has letters involving other women.

"No matter what happens," says Mrs. Baird, "no matter what people say, my faith in my husband can't be shattered."

The townsfolk are sorry for her and Mrs. Boll. But they feel none too kindly toward the husbands.

There were many school teachers and small depositors among the thousands affected by the closing of the bank.

"They will probably get back about 50 per cent. of their money," says C. H. Graff, deputy of the State Bank Examiner's Department.

ITALIANS HAVE WAR ON HANDS

Clash With Natives in Desert of North Africa Entails Loss of Life.

TRIPOLI, North Africa, May 8.—(United Press).—Two hundred natives have been killed in fighting with Italian troops in the desert, dispatches received here to-day stated.

Nineteen Italian soldiers also are dead. Fierce fighting began when a column under Col. Ruggeri on May Day occupied Telorgas in an oasis forty kilometers south of Misurata, and remained there for three days as the Italian troopers moved further into native strongholds.

On May 4, the Italian attacked Biragemut, twenty kilometers South of Tauorga. Native Arabian forces resisted strongly and only withdrew to permit occupation of the place after a large portion of their resisting force had been slain. Among the wounded in the engagement included the Native Chief Saidun Scheteui.

PICTON TO HEAR BLUEBIRD NEXT

Mr. Asa Huycke Has Begun Rehearsals and Will Present Light Opera Soon.

Rehearsals of "The Message of the Bluebird" have been begun in Picton where Mr. Asa Huycke will present his tuneful light opera within three weeks. Apart from its Peterboro performances Mr. Huycke's work has already had a fairly extended run "on the road." He has presented it ten times with unvarying financial and artistic success that promise well for his contemplated productions in western Ontario next season. The town in which the Bluebird has sung its melodies are Bowmanville where it played six times to crowded houses, Lindsay twice, Oshawa once and Orono once. Press notices of the Huycke show have been highly congratulatory, and it is altogether likely that the reception in Picton will be just as cordial. Bowmanville turned out capacity audiences for every one of the six performances, and the local company there was one of the best Mr. Huycke has assembled. He has thought of selecting an all-star caste choosing the best of the talent in those places named above together with some of his Peterboro songbirds. The idea has been suggested to him by prominent men in Oshawa and Lindsay who were delighted with "The Message of the Bluebird" and it present an idea that may be carried out next Fall. Mr. Huycke's friends will be glad to know that his first musical production has proved so acceptable everywhere it has been presented and likewise that in its financial aspect it has also been a fine success.

GOOD PRICE FOR CANADIAN CATTLE

Dundee Welcomed First Shipment of Canadian Cattle to Land There in Thirty-One Years.

OTTAWA, May 8. — (Canadian Press).—Dundee, Scotland, gave a warm welcome to the first lot of Canadian stocker cattle reaching that port, according to information received yesterday by the Department of Agriculture. Many of the large number present at the sale had attended the last sale at that port 31 years ago, when the alleged disease which ultimately caused the placing of the embargo against Canadian cattle was discovered.

At last week's sale 593 cattle were sold, the average price being 32 pounds 5 shillings each. The first lot of nine was bought by the Lord Provost of Dundee at 40 pounds each, while one steer sold singly and weighing 1,850 pounds, was bought for 55 pounds 10 shillings. The average price of the whole lot was 65 shillings and nine pence per British cwt., which at the present rate of exchange is equivalent to $13.80 per hundred. The cattle were a very fine lot and were shipped from Fort William, Ont., all being sold to farmers for feeding purposes.

TO ANNOUNCE JUDGMENT COURT MARTIAL TO-DAY

WERDEN, Germany, May 8. — (Canadian Press).—Counsel for the prosecution at the Krupp court-martial proceedings, summing up his case this morning, demanded a prison sentence of fifteen years in addition to a fine of one hundred million marks for Baron Krupp Von Bohlen, president of the Krupp works.

The prosecution also asked that a sentence of ten years' imprisonment and a fine of one hundred million marks be imposed on each of the three directors present at the trial. For the two absent directors he demanded a prison sentence of twenty years and the same fine.

A severe penalty was asked for Herr Muller, factory council-man, who, it was contended, was the organizer of the attack on the French troops. It is expected that the judgment of the court-martial will be announced late this afternoon.

Employment under the age of 14 has practically ceased in London.

One Thousand Head of Cattle For Shipment.

WINNIPEG, May 8.—(Canadian Press).—One thousand head of cattle for Glasgow, Dundee and Manchester, gathered here and ready for shipment under the United Grain Growers, Limited, co-operative system, were inspected yesterday by the Premiers of the three prairie provinces.

Hon. Charles A. Dunning, Premier of Saskatchewan; Hon. Herbert Greenfield, Premier of Alberta, and Hon. John Bracken, Premier of Manitoba, visited the Union Stock Yards yesterday morning, and their hearty approval was voiced in the comment of Hon. Mr. Greenfield.

"This is the largest and finest shipment of cattle ever gathered from the West, under the co-operative system," the Alberta Premier declared, "and it will work an immense benefit to the cattle producer of the West. It will do for him what the commission brokers and live-stock shippers have been doing for themselves, and he will be able to get the profit due him on his investment and labor."

Cattle from Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta are included in the shipment.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Now Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Washington, D.C.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation which a physician said I would have to have for a very bad case of female trouble. My system was all run-down for two years after my little girl was born. Then I read of your wonderful medicine and decided to try it. I could hardly drag one foot after the other, and after taking six bottles of the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I now do all my housework, also washing and ironing, and do not know what real trouble is. My health is fine, and I weigh 140 pounds. When I started taking it I weighed 97 pounds. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any one who is suffering from female trouble or is run down. You may use this testimonial for I am only too glad to let suffering women know what the Vegetable Compound did for me."—Mrs. IDA HEWITT, 1529 Penna. Ave. S.E., Washington, D.C.

Such letters from women in every section of this country prove beyond question the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

"Propinquity," he grunted.

"Fiddlesticks! The man is perfectly charming."

"Perhaps. We'll decide that point later. Do you think Farrel is interested in Kay?"

"I do not know, John," his better half declared hopelessly. "If he is, he possesses the ability to conceal it admirably."

"I'll bet he's a good poker-player. He has you guessing, old girl, and the man who does that is a rara avis. However, Katie dear, if I were you I wouldn't worry about this—er—affair."

"John, I can't help it. Naturally, I'm curious to know the thoughts in the back of that boy's head, but when he turns that smiling innocent face toward me, all I can see is old-fashioned deference and amiability and courtesy. I watch him when he's talking to Kay—when he cannot possibly know I am snooping, and still, except for that frank friendliness, his face is as communicative as this old adobe wall. A few days ago he rode in from the range with a great cluster of wild tiger-lilies—and he presented them to me. Any other young man would have presented them to my daughter."

"I give it up, Kate, and suggest that we turn this mystery over to Father Time. He'll solve it."

"But I don's want Kay to fall in love with Don Mike if he isn't going to fall in love with her," she protested, in her earnestness raising her voice, as was frequently her habit.

"Senora," he said gravely, "Ef I am you I doin' worry very much about those boy. Before hee's pretty parteecular. All those haghtone' senorita in El Toro she give eet the sweet look to Don Miguel, jus' the same like thees——" Here Pablo relaxed his old body, permitted his head to loll sideways and his lower jaw to hang slackly, the while his bloodshot eyes gazed amorously into the branches of the catalpa tree. "But those boy he don't pay any attention. Hee's give beeg smile to thees senorita, beeg smile to thees one, beeg smile to that one, beeg smile for all the mama, but for the querida I tell to you Don Miguel hee's pretty parteecular. I theenk to myself—Carolina, too—'Look here, Pablo What he ees the matter weeth those boy? I theenk mebbeso those boy she's goin' be old bach. What's the matter here? When I am twenty-eight anos my oldes' boy already hee's bust one bronco'." Here Pablo paused to scratch his head. "But now," he resumed, "by the blood of those devil I know sometheeng!"

"What do you know, you squiddy-nosed old idol, you?" Parker demanded, with difficulty repressing his laughter.

"I am ol' man," Pablo answered with just the correct shade of depreca tion, "but long time ago I have fee like my corazon—my heart—goin' make barbecue in my belly. I am in love, I know. Nobody can fool me. An' those boy, Don Miguel, I tell you, senor, hee's crazy for love weeth the Senorita Kay."

Parker crooked his finger, and in obedience to the summons Pablo approached the bench.

"How do you know all this, Pablo?"

Let us here pause and consider. In the summer of 1769 a dashing, care-free Catalonian soldier in the company of Don Gaspar de Portola, while swashbuckling his way around the lonely shores of San Diego Bay, had encountered a comely young squaw. Mira, senores! Of the blood that flowed in the veins of Pablo Artelan, thirty-one-thirty-seconds was Indian, but the other one-thirty-second was composed of equal parts of Latin romance and conceit.

Pablo's great moment had arrived. Lowly peon that he was, he knew himself at this moment to be a most important personage; death would have been preferable to the weakness of having failed to take advantage of it.

"Why, I know, Senor Parker?" Pablo laughed briefly, lightly, mirthlessly, his cacchination carefully designed to convey the impression that he considered the question extremely superfluous. With exasperating deliberation he drew forth his little bag of tobacco and a brown cigarette paper; he smiled as he dusted into the cigarette paper the requisite amount of tobacco. With one hand he rolled the cigarette; while wetting the flap with his garrulous tongue, he gazed out upon the San Gregorio as one who looks beyond a lifted veil.

He answered his own question. "Well, senor—and you, senora! I tell you. Por nada—forgeeve; please, I speak the Spanish—for notheeng, those boy he pole weeth hee's thumb the rib of me."

"No?" cried John Parker, feigning profound amazement.

"Es verdad. Eet ees true, senor. Those boy hee's happy, no? Eh?"

"Apparently."

"You bet you my life. Well, las' night those boy hee's peench weeth his thumb an' theese fingair—what you suppose?"

"I give it up, Pablo."

Pablo wiped away with a saddle-colored paw a benignant and paternal smile. He wagged his head and scuffed his heel in the dirt. He feasted his soul on the sensation that was his.

"Those boy hee's peench—" a dramatic pause. Then: "Eef you tell to Don Miguel those things I tol' you —Santa Marias—Hees cut my throat."

"We will respect your confidence, Pablo," Mrs. Parker hastened to assure the traitor.

"All right. Then I tol' to you what those boy peench—weeth hees thumb an' thees fingair. Mira. Like thees."

"Cut out the pantomine and disgorge the information, for the love of heaven," Parker pleaded.

"Hee peench"—Pablo's voice rose to a pseudo-feminine screech—"the cheek of'—he whirled upon Mrs. Parker and transfixed her with a tobacco-stained index finger—"Senorita Parker, so help me, by Jimmy, eef I tell you some lies I hope I die pretty queeck."

"He peench—queeck—like that. He don' know hee's goin' for peench—hees all time queeck like that—he don' theenk. But after those boy hee's peench the cheen of those girl, hee's got red in the face like blackbird's weeng. 'Oh,' he say, 'I am sky-blue eedete-ot,' an' he run away queeck before he forget heemself an' peench those girl some more."

Suffered From Pimples and Blotches For Fifteen Years

When the blood becomes impure it is only natural that pimples, blotches boils or some other blood trouble will manifest itself by breaking out of the system.

There is only one way to get rid of these obnoxious skin troubles and that is by giving the impure blood a thorough cleansing by the use of a good blood purifier, such as

Burdock Blood Bitters

This remarkable remedy has been on the market for over forty years; is the best obtainable, and will do all we claim for it as a blood cleanser.

Mr. Albert R. De Witte, Lake Valley, Sask., writes: "I have suffered very much from pimples and unsightly blotches for the past fifteen years, and was so bad that I hated to go out anywhere. I tried many different medicines, but none seemed to help. A friend told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters. I have used three and a half bottles, and now I have a clear, rosy complexion."

ROCHESTER TO BOOST THE TRENT WATERWAY

The Rochester Yacht Club has applied to the Trent Waterways Development Association for films to be shown at a special smoker to be given on May 17 to boost the Trent Waterway with the members. The club asks that a representative of the association be sent to explain the route and give information to the yacht owners who propose taking the trip this summer.

The secretary is taking the matter up with the provincial authorities through T. Tooms, M.P.P., recommending that the Trent Waterway Association cooperate with them in this opportunity to further the tourist traffic in the province.

THE TROUBLES

whaling from impassioned fists, the lady later forgetting to relate whether the quality of the milk received derived any access of "richness" from the cheque consumed.

One woman received her cheque on a certain snowy morning returning presently 'very glum,' to say she must have dropped it in the office. Remaining for some time in a state of suppressed irritation, she discovered the missing slip of paper eventually sticking to the sole of her shoe and departed comforted. Still another two hundred and fifty pound lady came one crowded day, and chose a sufficiently weak spot on the floor for her standing place. The floor caved in at a convenient angle to allow the surprised large lady to drop her cheque through the opening, where it was subsequently fished for and recovered.

The Mislaid Cheque

The longest trip of all for a mislaid cheque was the one that was placed as a marker in a copy of Gerrard's "My Four Years in Germany." A visiting relative chose this book as a source of amusement on the train, and "of course, never opened it. Women never read the books they take on the train anyway." Sixteen months later, during which time the original possessor had made several trips to the office, the relative in her Rochester home read in the papers of the boys at Chateau Thierry and decided to find out just where the Rochester brigade would be. Examination of Gerrard's book revealed the long-missing cheque.

Covered with endorsements sufficient to leave no space to write "max", the cheques came back from all over Canada. "There was hardly a month that seventy or eighty of them didn't come back from Eaton's."

A Matter of Dress

A certain gentleman complained once to Mr. Dobbin that a soldier's wife in the same block was "dressed better than my wife." "But is your wife dressed well enough?" was the characteristic answer of the man who could see farther than the mere benefits in money accruing from the self-respect engendered in a woman by an adequate living allowance. "Why, man, that woman would go through her daily duties with the memory and the perfume and the halo of that nice dress and that pretty hat and that decent pair of shoes clinging to her. She would wash the dishes and sweep the parlor much better for the thought of those things hanging in the closet waiting to be put on. How do you know how much good that outfit did that woman?"

The lying cases will be sent to the Archives office in Toronto, where they will remain for the next quarter of a century.

Here is a home treatment for removing hairs that is quick, painless and inexpensive; With some powdered delatone and water make enough paste to thickly cover the objectionable hairs, apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left soft, clear and hairless. This treatment will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be careful to get real delatone. Mix fresh as wanted.

RATIONING THE SOW.

Rationing the sow is the surest way to forestall trouble. Overfeeding at farrowing time makes her feverish and nervous; more likely to trample her offspring and less able, often, to secrete milk properly.

Don't feed the sow at all during the twenty-four hours before farrowing, and during the week prior to that keep corn out of the ration. Corn is an especially heating feed. Instead, feed ground oats, barley or bran, any one or two of these, or all three if you like.

And don't feed the sow at all for from twelve to eighteen hours after farrowing. After that, even, go slow taking from a week to ten days to get the animal back on full feed.

Scours in young pigs is one of the troublesome conditions which arise from faulty feeding of the mother. Next in importance to rationing comes condition of the pen. Clean, dry pens do much to prevent digestive disorders and rheumatism in both the sow and the pigs.

Noticed Change In Wife

Mrs. Johnson was in badly run down condition—two bottles of Dreco have produced a big change, says Mr. Johnson.

There is nothing more debilitating to the whole system than faulty action of the digestive organs—a lazy stomach, or sluggish liver may cause years of endless misery. Such was the case with Mrs. Johnson, of Smith Ave., Hamilton, Ont., until she heard about Dreco and decided to try its effects on her long standing ailments. The result was typical of this splendid herbal remedy, as Mr. Johnson will tell you:

"My wife suffered stomach and liver trouble. Things she ate would not agree with her and would sour in her stomach, causing much distress after meals, in belching and bloating. In fact, she hardly knew what it was to eat a good meal without suffering afterwards. She was billious, spots floated before her eyes and at time she had terrible dizzy spells, especially when stooping over. She always had to be taking something for her bowels. We tried almost everything without result, until we heard of Dreco. She has taken only two bottles and feels much better I can see a big change in her. Her bowels are regular, she eats better and is growing stronger. We praise Dreco highly."

The symptons from which Mrs. Johnson suffered are common to men and women of all ages and in every station of life. They come from the gasses and poisonous acids that poorly functioning organs throw off—until restored to their proper action by Dreco. This wonderful health builder tones and regulates these organs as Nature intended. It contains corrective juices of Nature's own herbs, roots, barks and leaves, compounded with scientific exactness. If your digestive system is right, Dreco will keep it right. If it is ailing, Dreco will quickly restore it.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, and by a good druggist everywhere.

BICYCLE PUTS MONEY IN POCKET.

One cycling enthusiast recently gave figures which showed how his bicycle actually meant money in pocket for him after five years of riding. This rider kept accurate record of all expenses and also of the actual saving he was able to effect in carfraes. The initial investment for the bicycle was $45.00, and he bought special accessories which brought the outlay up to $52.65. His total mileage during the five years was 8,790 miles, and his rear tires averaged 2,930. The front tires averaged 4,895. The average cost per mile, including all expenses, was less than half a cent, being .0046. The amount which he saved in car fares during the five seasons was $114.86.

It must also be taken into consideration that the cyclist in question still had the bicycle at the end of five years, and that it was running as well as ever. He also had enjoyed the pleasure, exercise, convenience, and general utility of the riding during the period. Not only had it saved him many dollars in car fare, but he had also secured many personal advantages.

WHERE LITTLE PIGS GO

How Bill Smith Overcame the Trouble—Give the Sow a Balanced Ration—Just Practice Intelligent Feeding—Rationing the Sow.

Tom was "blue." Having just returned from the swine-pen, where he had gone to inspect a new litter of pigs, he found that five had disappeared. The unnatural mother had eaten them. "The pig must be a strange animal," he reflected, "It must have been pure 'cussedness' that caused her to eat her offspring. She was well fed, too, on corn and wheat shorts; hunger could not be at the bottom of this infanticidal case."

Tom went about his work mumbling to himself as to what could be the matter. Nearly fifty little pigs had been lost by such cannibalism during the two preceding years.

Find Out the Weak Spot

"Where is the weak spot in my system of feeding swine, anyway," he questioned himself. "I will go over and see Bill Smith, the most successful pig man in the district, and see if he can clear up this pig-eating business that is causing me so much loss."

"Good morning, Tom. What makes your face look so long and your nose so blue this morning," quoth Smith, as he looked at his visitor's glum countenance.

"I have had another experience with a pig-eating sow," said Tom. "Five more pigs gone this morning, and I can't make it out. The sow was liberally fed on corn and shorts. I want to get at the bottom of this trouble, so I have come over to ask you your experience, as I suppose you have had losses the same as I have."

How Smith Overcame the Trouble

"Well, Tom, I would be glad to give you my experience in this some tough luck. I used to lose a lot of pigs in this same way up to about two years ago, when I suddenly tumbled to what the cause of it all was, and applied a remedy that had proven a success in stopping the sows eating their young pigs."

Tom brightened up and became very much interested. "What's the secret?" he asked.

"Well, you see, it's like this: Pigs in the wild state or running in the woods usually get what their systems demand, in the variety of food supplied by the great range of living things on which the pigs feed naturally. Pigs penned up have to take what we give them, and if we neglect to supply a sufficient variety of food containing all the essentials necessary to satisfy the demands of the pig, trouble will follow. And that trouble is usually manifested in the eating of the young pigs to satisfy the craving for meat or protein food."

"That all seems reasonable enough," said Tom. "But tell me, how do you satisfy the pig's demand for meat or protein foods?"

Give the Sow a Balanced Feed

"Simply this. Balance up the sow's feed from the start, using alfalfa hay, meat meal or digester tankage as the source of protein and phosphates. Feed alfalfa hay whatever the pigs will take. Feed tankage or meat meal, using one pound to each ten pounds of grain feed, either mixed with the grain or fed ad lib. from a self-feeder. If the sow eats her babies, Tom, it's your fault. Do as I have told you. Supply the demands of her body in the food you give her, and then she will be normal and the pigs safe."

Just Practice Intelligent Feeding

"Thousands of young pigs are lost every spring through the neglect to feed intelligently. Nobody ever saw a slaughter-house fed sow destroy her young. Meat or protein in some form must be fed to mother pigs or there will be trouble."

"I see it, Bill, and I'll do it, too, from now on, and save the youngsters for bacon," said the new thoroughly enlightened and delighted Tom. — L. Stevenson, Secy. Onttrio Department of Agriculture.

COL. H.C. BOYDEN TO ADDRESS ENGINEERS

Talk on Important Features of Highway Construction To-Night.

Important features of highway construction, brought out in numerous tests being conducted in various parts of the country, will be the basis of an address by Col. H. C. Boyden of the Portland Cement Association at the Chamber of Commerce tonight at 8.15. Information of interest, not only to contractors and engineers, but to the ordinary tax payer, will be produced and Col. Boyden promises to point out a number of matters that the average person knows but very little about.

"There is no branch of construction in which the engineering profession is so dependent upon experience and judgment as in road building," said Col. Boyden. "Highway construction today is an art rather than a science, but there is a constant endeavor being made to evolve scientific methods of design, especially in the construction of hard-surfaced pavements.

"The National Research Council has appointed an Advisory Board on Highway Research to direct all highway investigations in an advisory capacity only. A census made during 1922 by this board shows that 430 investigations are under way in the United States. Sixty-five per cent. of these investigations are devoted to a study of materials, 19% to the design of the road, 9% to economics, 5% to construction and 2% to operation. Much has already been accomplished and in my lecture I will tell of what has been done."

Col. Boyden states that prior to 1922 there were 25,000 miles of concrete surface in the United States, practically all of which was built in the last 13 years. "Enormous sums are being invested in highway work," said Col. Boyden, "and the safe-guarding of public money is both a duty and a problem that confronts the engineering profession. It is my purpose to bring out many interesting facts that will be of value to engineers and to the taxpayers who pay for highway construction."

Among the first signs of spring are the seed catalogues.

Mrs. L. Whiting, 202 King St. West, Brockville, Ont., writes:—

"I took very sick with my nerves and stomach, and seemed to be all run down. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate so and I would take such weak spells in the pit of my stomach that I sometimes thought I would never get better. I had almost given up hope when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve-Food. I did not stop until I had taken twenty-five boxes. It has done wonders for me and I want to recommend it to everyone."

ST. ANDREW'S CHOIR CONCERT

(By Jeannette.)

St. Andrew's church choir gave their usual excellent account of themselves in their annual anniversary concert, which took place last evening. Between four and five hundred people formed an appreciative audience of church members and friends, who accorded every well-rendered number its meed of hearty applause. The programme was run through in good time, was well balanced and offered a pleasing variety with its choir and male quartette numbers, its instrumental and vocal solos and readings.

The choir, which amply justified the reputation it has achieved for sound musicianship, under the direction of Mr. John Crane, was accorded much applause for its rendition of the Motet, "Gallia," by Gounod, with solo work by Miss Kathleen Gorrie. The sombre note of this "Miserere" of the golden city of Jerusalem progresses to a full-throated, sonorous burst of sound in the finale; "Jerusalem, Jerusalem, O Turn Ye to the Lord Thy God." "Gallia" was an excellent example of the powers of this well-trained group of singers in phrasing and interpretation. Precision of attack and release was another good quality manifested in the ever-popular "By Babylon's Wave," an unaccompanied number, with a fine volume of harmonious sound in accelerated tempo and rhythm rising from a soft ,well-shaded opening.

A second softly-shaded, unaccompanied selection was "Sullivan's "Yea! Tho' I Walk," preceded by the bright opening number, "Hail, Gladdening Light." One of the most appreciated offerings by the choir was the majestic final number, the "Inflammatus" from the "Stabat Mater."

Miss Kathleen Gorrie, who took the soprano solos in the choir's music, was heard to good advantage in a trio, "Praise Ye," with Messrs. E. Humpage and J. Smith, in a duet with Mrs. Ford Turner, a reverential rendition of "Peace, I Leave With You," and in a group of vocal solos. Miss Gorrie's fesh, sweet voice, has a soft, vibrant quality in the middle register that makes her well-sung selections very pleasing. Her powers of sympathetic interpretation were particularly noticeable in the minor muffled cadences of "Danny Boy," while there was a bright, bird-like note to the high-toned "Joy of Spring," and a sleepy undertone in the lullaby, "Mammy's Song." Miss Gorrie was presented with a large bouquet of roses on conclusion of her song group.

Mrs. Ford Turner's charming contralto was very pleasingly displayed in two songs, "I Send My Heart to Thee," and "Passing By."

Mrs. G. D. McClelland scored her usual success with her fine elocutionary ability, and was compelled to respond to encores after both appearances. "The High Cost of Living" was a humorous account of the deliberations on that subject by a Ladies' Aid Society, and Jas. Whitcomb Riley's fantastical story of the little boy and the two bears was told in Mrs. McClelland's own inimitable "kiddie" style.

The Imperial Male Quartette, Messrs. M. H. Park, E. Humpage, J. Smith and D. D. Brown, also were compelled to respond to the applause which greeted their efforts, which included a skit on a church choir; the well rendered "Po' Little Lamb" sleepy-time number, and "The Owl and the Passy Cut," with bass solo by D. D. Brown.

Mr. Douglas Carlisle sang in splendid voice, "The Horn," with "Kerry Dance" as an encore number.

One of the most pleasing items on the varied programme was the instrumetnal duet of Messrs. Jno. Crane and Leslie Unitt, the organ and piano blending beautifully in the vibrant music of Mendelssohn's Second Movement Concerto in G. Minor.

Mr. Leslie Unitt, at the piano, played Liszt's "Liebestraume" and Weber's "Invitation to the Dance." Mr. Unitt's attributes of a smooth, unhesitating, melodious tone and clear, brilliant touch had excellent scope in the soft, legato finish of the "love song" and the rippling cascades of clear, light music in the second selection.

Mr. Crane and Mr. Unitt acted as accompanists at piano and organ for the entire performance.

WARTS ON HORSES

Warts are very difficult to eradicate, especially situated near the mouth or eyes. The exact cause of such growths is unknown, but no doubt indicates abnormal nutrition of the affected skin. Irritation of the skin may be a contributory cause. The warts with small necks can be twisted off or haulked with a silk thread, when they will drop off. Masses of small warts will disappear in time if smothered daily with a thick paste of equal quantities of cold-pressed castor oil, salt and flowers of sulphur.

WILL STOP TRAFFIC IN BROKEN HORSES

Humane Society Seized Aged Team and Ended Their Aches and Pains

The activities of the Peterborough Humane Society since the end of February last include the investigation of some twenty cases by Inspector Charles S. Stapleton, practically all being instances of minor cruelty to or neglect of horses. The outstanding case was that of Percy Nicholson, of Indian River, who had in his possession two old, lame and used up horses, recently purchased from J. D. McIntosh, Brownton, Peterboro'. Inspector Stapleton took these poor animals away from the owner, had them examined by Thomas Johnston, V.S. both horses have since been destroyed.

The society aim to stop the traffic in old horses, which have obviously reached their limit of usefulness, and where upon competent investigation, the animal is pronounced unfit for further ordinary work. Its intention is to prosecute the seller or purchaser of aged horses, in such cases. In appealing for members to join, the society feel they are accomplishing good work, with the limited means at their disposal, as at present there are only thirty-seven senior and junior members all told. A membership card costing $1.00 for the year can be had from G. A. Smith, 734 Water Street; C. S. Stapleton, 529 Homewood Avenue; E. S. Martin, 130 Simcoe Street, Peterborough, or J. E. A. Fitzgerald, 254 Brock Street.

The society request the public to please report cases of cruelty to animals to Inspector Stapleton. In order to secure a conviction, witnesses are required who must be willing to give evidence in court.

Inspector Stapleton has legal power to take immediate custody of any animal which, in his opinion, is being treated cruelly, neglected, or in the case of a horse apparently unfit for work.

Mr. Stapleton's report includes the following notes of instances in which examination was made of animals: No shoes on horse and a load of green wood on sleigh; six livery horses said to be fed well, but are worked hard; horses left on market five hours in rain without blanket in March; horse on delivery waggon lame; blinker on bridle broken and bits horse in eye; black mare blind and lame, owner promised to leave it on farm and not use it. Other cases were of horses left without covering, exposed to the March weather for long periods; others with cuts aggravated by harness rubbing.

REPAIR CENTRAL PARK FOUNTAIN

And Set Up Drinking Fountain at its Base in Victoria Park.

Since taking over the Parks Committee, Ald. Turner has discovered what his recent predecessor learned, that the water and drainage connexions to the fountain in Central Park were not registered on any known blue print. The outlet pipe has not been located, and no one seems to have the plans. Ald. Turner told the Council last night. The search will be continued, and a drinking fountain costing about $70 will be set up at the base of the spray fountain's rockery. It is also intended that the big fountain shall be put in working order.

NEW CHAPTER IN PAVING PARLEY

Council Decides to Call For Tenders For Two of Long Proposed Parcels.

Peterboro's paving programme, now entering upon its third or fourth annual discussion, went through another rehearsal last night, the substance of which was the instructing of City Engineer Parsons to advertise for tenders for paving George Street south from the C.P.R. to Romaine Street, and Hunter Street east from Burnham Street to a point 350 feet east of Armour Road.

An amendment to Ald. McIntyre's motion proposed to call for prices on the separate parcels of work, Ald. Turner, advocating it, said that by this means tenderers could be asked what reduction in price they would allow if they secured a contract for two or more parcels; and Ald. Fife, who seconded the amendment, urged that there should be no objection to obtaining the prices, after which the Council could leave out any parcels they did not wish to construct.

The discussion ranged back to the question of rescinding the motion passed at a former meeting, including the Simcoe-Queen Street block and Hunter Street, from Queen to Sheridan, and from Sheridan over the bridge.

Several obstacles were raised against the smaller sections. It was stated that the roadway over the bridge has not completely settled down, and that a pavement should not be begun until the filling of earth had thoroughly packed into permanent place. The stretch from Queen to Sheridan Street would have to be laid over the present pavement which would have to be torn up, but the chief objection was as to how the cost would be assessed in view of the fact that the present pavement is in good condition. Besides the Hydro-Electric Commission are demanding satisfactory access to their property on the south side of Hunter Street.

Out of the tangle of suggestion and argument, Ald. McIntyre's motion, seconded by Ald. Crowe, emerged with a majority approval.

Paving estimates submitted by City Engineer Parsons were as follows: George Street South, $31,023.90; Hunter Street, from Queen to Sheridan Street, $5,378; Simcoe, from Water Street to Queen Street, $5,570; Queen Street, $6,172.70; Olive Avenue, $1,829.48.

Belmonts Won Club Title--Baltimore Defeated--Toronto Won

BELMONTS ARE WINNERS OVER GUNNERS TEAM

SCORE WAS 11 TO 10.

The Belmonts trimmed the Gunners by the score of 11 to 10 in a game that teemed with thrills. The Belmonts, winners of the club section because of last evenipg's victory, now bank up against the Woollens team, undefeated champions of the Mercantile group. This game will be played Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Last night's game had it easily over the previous ones for excitement. The game was not any ace of diamons as far as the ball dished up went, for at times the game was really 'sloppy,' with lots of crabbing and bad feeling.

The score was close all the way. The teams were never separated by more than one run for any length of time.

The pitching was not of the best brand, both pitchers feeling plainly the strained conditions under which they were twirling. Holyman had a little better of the argument, having eight strike-outs and allowing three walks. He had a world of steam, but lacked control at times. Piercy was not nearly in his usual form. He retired six on strikes and issued four complimentaries. His fielding was often poor.

Herb Wolff was easily the best man for the Gunners. He had a perfect batting average, getting two doubles and being wisely passed three times. He was a whale around second and covered half the field.

"Si" Haskill was the Belmont's batting star, his hits sending in many runs. Stan Lowe covered the initial sack in 'Stuffy' McInnes style. Batten smothered everything that happened his way.

Neither teams scored in the first innings, the first three batters on both sides being retired in order. The Gunners chased across two in the second innings, and a bonehead play pulled by the base runners was all that kept them from getting more. The Belmonts scored three in this half of the second. The Gunners failed to count in the third. The Belmonts went strong and were not retired until four had set foot on the home plate. Then the Gunners let loose, collecting four hits and sending across six runs. The Belmonts went scoreless, leaving the ledger 8 to 7 for the Gunners at the end of the fifth.

The Belmonts made it to to 8 at the end of the sixth. The Gunners got two more in their half of the seventh, making it ten all, but the Belmonts sent across what proved to be the winning run in their half of the same frame. Neither team scored in any of the following frames, although the Gunners did everything to pull through and win. The teams were:

Score by innings:

Gunners .. ..020 600 200—10
Belmonts .. ..034 003 10x—11

U. S. GOLFER AFTER THE BRITISH TITLE

Battle For the Amateur Championship Will Open at Deal To-Day.

SANDWICH, England, May 7.—(Canadian Press).— The battle for the British amateur golf championship will begin to-morrow at Deal in a field where the warriors with wood and iron clubs will aggregate almost two hundred of the most skillful players in the United Kingdom and the United States.

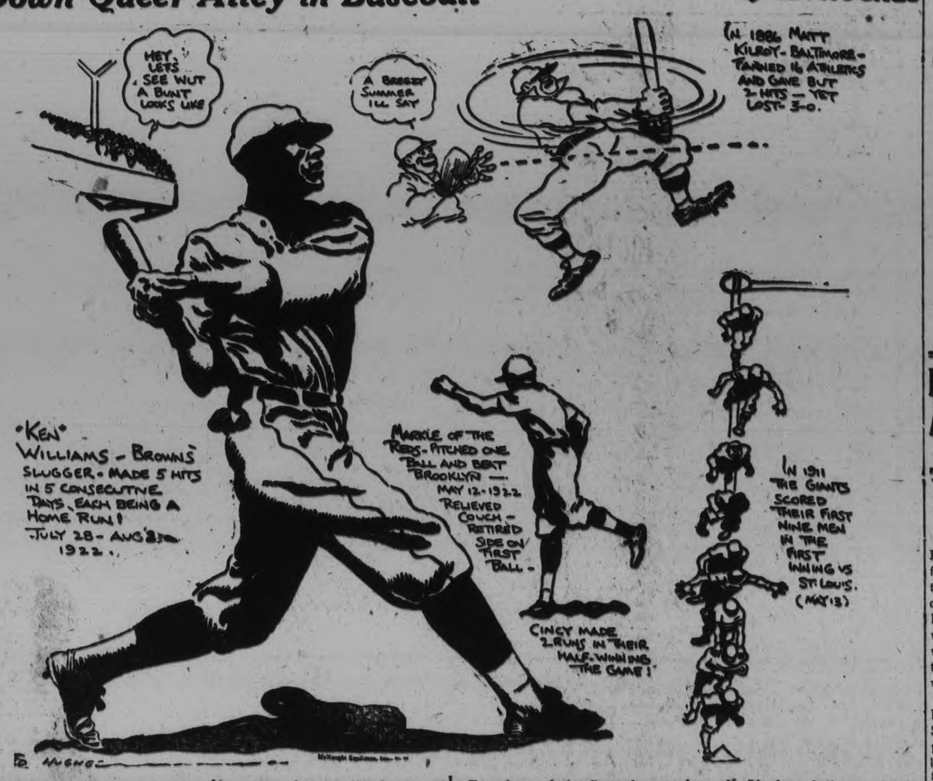
There is a general feeling that the threat to take the title across the Atlantic to the United States had a good chance of success. The United States team is regarded as the strongest set of invaders that has ever contested for the British amateur crown.

Among the strong English players in the upper half are Roger Wethered, Cyril Tolley, Bernard Darwin, C. C. Aylmer, Mr. Tweedale, Holderness, the British title-holder; Dr. H. G. Gillies and Mackenie. The Scott brothers and Torrance brothers are bunched in the upper half.

Among the stars from the United States who will compete for the title are Francis Quimet, Boston; Dr. O. F. Willing, Portland, Oregon; Robert Gardner, Jesse Sweetser, Robert Hunter, and H. S. Lake.

Down Queer Alley in Baseball

By ED. HUGHES



Five hits in five successive days doesn't sound particularly awe-inspiring does it? But when you consider that each of these hits was a home run that puts a different complexion on the story. Ken Williams, the lanky home run artist of the St. Louis Brown, performed this feat last year. He started this odd business on July 28, the last homer being delivered on August 1.

Ever hear of a hurler pitching one ball and getting credit for winning a game? Well it was done in a game between Cincinnati and Brooklyn last year. Couch for Cincinnati, retired the first two batters in the ninth, and then was walloped for long singles by Johnston, Griffith and Wheat, the former scoring. Couch was relieved by Markle, who went into the box with the Dodgers leading 6 to 5. Markle's first pitch was to Hy Myers. He rolled to Cavney, whose throw to daubert retired the side. The Reds won in their half. And there you are.

Ever hear of the first nine men up in an inning each scoring a run? The New York Giants playing in St. Louis May 13, 1911, made 13 runs. The first nine men from Josh Devore to Christy Mathewson stamped the rubber. Oddly enough another record was made in this same inning when Fred Merkle made his mark of batting in six runs.

Evere hear of a twirler fanning sixteen batters and still losing his game? Hard to believe yet its so.

At Philadelphia, Aug. 24, 1886, Matt Kilroy of Baltimore in the old American Association struck out sixteen of the Athletics, yet lost. The odd part of it was that Matt allowed but two hits, still, the Athletics shut his team out 3 to 0. Wilbert Robinson, now manager of Brooklyn, was the lead-off man for the winners. Kilroy fanned your Uncle Wilbert no less than three times.

BRITISH GOLFERS ARE NOW HOPEFUL

The U. S. Champion Was Defeated By Noel Layton in the First Day's Play.

DEAL, England, May 8 (Canadian Press). — At the conclusion of the first day's play in the British Amateur Golf Tournament over the links of the Royal Cinque Ports Golf Club here yesterday, British sportsmen who had been fearful that the title would go to one of the members of the team from the United States, were more optimistic.

Noel Layton, of the Royal Cinque Ports Club, by defeating Jesse Sweetser, the United States champion yesterday, 5 up and 3 to play, became one of the favourites for the final round.

G. D. Forrester, Woking, was another British player to win a notable victory. He defeated Robert Gardner, Chicago, captain of the team from the United States, and rated as one of the strongest of the team, 2 up and 1 to play.

Layton took the lead from Sweetser at the sixth hole, and retained it from then on. Layton plugged along the entire match satisfied with scratch scores and par scores, while Sweetser was finishing in a solid block of fives. The United States champion never seemed to steady down, and appeared to be bothered by the breeze. He was exceedingly weak on the greens.

Forrester had a hard tussle to eliminate Gardner, who had a chance until the last. Gardner during the play could not make his irons behave and was poor at putting. He was two down at the fourth but evened the match, and at the turn was one up.

Do you know Baseball?

by Billy Evans

QUESTIONS:

ONE—What is construed as a wild pitch?

TWO—If the pitcher strikes out the batter, but he reaches first base because of a wild pitch or failure on the part of the catcher to hold the ball, is he credited with a strike-out?

THREE—Is a player credited with a stolen base if he is allowed to advance without any effort being made to stop him?

FOUR—Can a player who has hit safely, and believes there is a chance that he may get to second, run more than three feet out of the line as he rounds first?

FIVE—If a fielder throws the ball to the first baseman wide of the bag, yet in plenty of time to get to the runner, and the first baseman fails to touch the bag, how is the play scored?

ANSWERS:

ONE—A wild pitch is a legally delivered ball, so high low or wide of the pltae, that the catcher is unable to stop it, and thereby permits a batsman to reach first or a runner to advance.

TWO—The pitcher is credited with a strikeout, regardless of whether or not the batsman is retired.

THREE—He is not credited with a stolen base unless a play is made on him.

FOUR—He can round first base as wide as he desires in order to make a good turn at the bag.

FIVE—The first baseman is charged with an error.

NEW ALTITUDE RECORD

LE BOURGET, France, May 8.—Canadian Press. — Sergeant Bury yesterday broke the world's airplane altitude record for a machine carrying 550 pounds cargo. He reached an altitude of 8250 meters.

Aviator Gontard last week at the Le Bourget, with a machine carrying a load of 550 pounds, reached a height of 8000 meters (approximately 26,250 feet.)

FOOTBALL SEASON CLOSED SATURDAY

Notts County and West Ham to First Division—Interest Maintained to Very Last Game.

LONDON, May 7. Canadian Press Cable. — Football dies hard and the league warfare maintained its interest to the last for it was only on Saturday, the final day of the season, that it was decided Notts County and West Ham should ascend to the first division, and that otherham County should accompany the Wolverhampton Wanderers into the third division.

The day was very hot and it speaks well for the enthusiasm of the players that in the vital struggle at Upton Park there was not the slightest suspicion of taking things easy at any period of the game. West Ham in their match with Notts County frittered aawy their chances in the first half and were never allowed any rope on the change of ends.

Liverpool, who beat Stoke, finished at the top of the first division for the second year in succession with total points equalling the record of the West Bromwich Albions. Stoke and Oldham go down to the Second Division. Stoke's fall has been due as much to bad luck and to injuries to players as to inferior play while Oldham's failure was due to weakness in front of the goal. They have played no fewer than 14 games since New Year's without scoring a single goal. West Ham, despite their set-back at Upton Park secure promotion on their goal average for Bury obligingly defeated Leicester City who, had they secured a single point, would have stood in the London team's place.

Nelson, despite defeat at Walsall, head the northern section of the third division. Bristol City improved their lead in the Southern Section by a fine victory over Charlton. Taking the season all through the Southern clubs have not been much in the limelight but West Ham nobly upheld the honor of the metropolis by securing the runner-up honors in both the cup and the league contests.

BASEBALL CROWD KEEP ON GROWING

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, May 7.—(United Press)—Attendance at the early games of the baseball season made it apparent that the crowds in the future will be regulated only by the size of the parks in the big towns. It is no longer is a question of the number of fans who want to see the players in action, but a problem of the rather limited number of them who can be allowed to see the games.

There is little doubt that 100,000 would have been present at the dedication of the new Yankee stadium if the park was big enough to hold them. As it was, there were approximately 75,000 in the stands and about 25,000 were turned away.

The first five games of the season played by the Yankees drew more than 200,000 through the gates of the huge stadium and established a mark that is almost unbelievabe.

Interest in the game is not confined to New York, as a heavy increase in attendance has been observed in all of the big league towns and in a corresponding degree in the important minor points.

Ban Johnson predicted last season that the game has reached its peak and that there would be a slump in interest this year, but that just helps to prove that whenever Johnson expresses any kind of an opinion he is nearly always wrong.

A fight between Stengel, left fielder for the Giants, and Weinert, pitcher for the Phillies, occurred in the fourth. Both players were banished from the game after a lively exchange of blows. The new points rule prevailing in the schedule, to be commenced on May 28th was explained to each rink. It was decided to give valuable prizes to each of the group winners. Several club rules were agreed on, and all bowlings to be governed by the Dominion Bowling Association rulings. Owing to the increase made in the number of rinks a new schedule was found necessary and this will be published in a few days. Skips are requested to immediately get in touch with the members of their rinks, become acquainted and be ready for an enthusiastic season.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, May 8 (Special to The Examiner). — A much healthier tone was shown by the New York stock exchange in the trading up to noon to-day. Weak spots were few. Rails, oils, motors, and industrials displayed considerable strength, good gains being registered by most of these.

Short covering and the picking up of stocks hammered down to bargain counter prices largely accounted tor the gains.

Wlal Street was too engrossed in watching the stock market to give much attention to the British proposal to reject Berlin's latest reparaions terms. All eyes were centred in action of prices in their dealing and considerable relief was felt when the main body of issues showed an ability to score further progress on the recovery interrupted by the previous close. American Can., California Petroleum, Republican Iron and Steel, and other industrial leaders sold fractionally higher prices above the figures reached late on Monday, while rails displayed a steady tone.

Industrial stocks continued to move ahead in the first hour under the leadership of American Locomotive, which rallied 131 1-2 against Monday's lower 125 3-4. Baldwin reached a new high on th recovery at 127. Steel Common reached 191. American Can, 88 5-8, and Consolidated Gas gained 3-4.

Usually the market has to absorb heavy selling of impaired accounts after a severe break like Monday's, but evidently the week's accounts had been pretty well cleaned out in the previous session, except in a few individual stocks like Stewart Warner ,whcih reached a new low on this move at 129 1-2. But in view of the sharp spurt in American Locomotive which wa sbased on expectation of substantial increase in the dividend rate in a few months the general list was not influenced by these weak spots.

Favourable reports made public during the past week of the first quarter results of motor companies had little influence in sustaining the prices which declined in sympathy with the general market to low levels for the year.

Recent strength of General Motors Common near its high market of the year was accompanied by talk that the directors, in view of the record-breaking earnings, will either increase the quarterly dividend rate or declare an extra at the meeting next Thursday. Current earnings are sufficient to justify an increase to $1.50 or $2.00 annual rate. Production and sales of motor vehicles establish new high records in April.

Brokers point out that the decline in Stewart Warner, although more sensational, has not been out of line with the rest of the market. Many stocks have dipped down to new lows for the year. Stewart Warner at Monday's closing was still nearly six points above the year's low of 78 3-4. That the stock at 124 1-2 has worked into a weak technical position was evident to some brokers who had been offered thousand share blocks for distribution only a few months ago.

LACROSSE GROUP PICTURE OF 1889

When Dick Davidson, Jim Connal, Harry Foote and Ed. Manning Played the Game For the "Y."

A reminder of the lacrosse teams of a generration ago is presented in a picture of the Peterboro Y.M.C.A. juniors of 1889 which is on display in Lebar's window, Charlotte street. That summer they won their district losing only one game and that was an exhibition match with Norwood in which some of the regular "Y" team were off the lineup. The group includes Ed Manning who played goal, Dickson Davidson who was at centre in those days and is reputed to have been as fast as the best of them, James H. Connal who played a strong game on the defense and Harry Foote who starred on the home section. Others are Herb. Morphet who was the club secretary Dr. "Bob" Armstrong of Oshawa, Alex. McMillan, W. Hendricks, George Armstrong, Fred Metheral, R. Henderson who sported a moustache from ear to ear, Alex. Mooney and Stephens.

And they were comely youths in those days even if they weren't decorated with Valentino effects, obedient hair and other touches of present day personal decorations.

BRITAIN FAVORED COLLECTIVE NOTE

Regrets Independent Attitude of France and Belgium Toward Germany.

LONDON, May 8. — (Canadian Press).—Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer, stated in the House of Commons to-day that the Government regretted the precipitancy of the Franco-Belgium reply to the German reparations note and proposed to state its own view in a separate reply with the least possible delays. He added that there was reas on to believe that Italy was in accord with Britain and contemplated a similar proceedure.

The Government, he said regretted the loss of an opportunity of once more testifying to solidarity of the Allies by a joint communication to Germany. Britain believed there need have been no insuperable difficulty in framing a collective reply reserving for separate treatment by France and Belgium, if they desired, such questions as arose directly from the regent statements of Germany.

THEATRES

Back to the days of chivalry and romance, to the times when knights travelled over land and sea to deliver the Holy Land from the clutch of paynim hordes, when men in beaten armour tilted with heavy oaken lances for a lady's smile and a crown of valour from the hands of beauty, transferred in the twinkling of an eye to the days when "merrie England," was in its raw and lusty youth, this is the magic art of the screen in its presentation of the tale of "Robin Hood."

One can imagine the months of painstaking labour and research that must have gone into the making of such a picture, one that re-creates even in its general atmosphere the thoughts and standards of a by-gone forgotten age, the age of pure romantic love, when knights rode to savage encounter for the hope of a smile or a lady's scarf, when the king ruled by right divine and enforced his commands through penalty of death, when serfs abode in lowly cots and lords ruled in castle halls.

The trappings of the tourney, the gaily-caparisoned horses, the knights in suits of linked steel chains, plumed helmets and hawk-like vizors protecting their faces, emblazoned shields meeting the sudden shock of heavy spears, the fluttering, pennant tipped lances, the tapestries of the banquet-hall, the rude, uncouth manners of an age when kings quaffed draughts from huge beakers, gnawed at huge mutton-bones and wiped their fingers on velvet robes, all these and more go to make up a magnificent spectacle which has evidently in the making gone far afield in search of material.

Medieval castles of grey stone, turreted battlements, drawbridges of weighty immensity, the gorgeous robes and trappings of the days when rich apparel clothed the brave and the fair, they form a background for the swift-moving tale of "Robin Hood," the robber knight of Sherwood Forest, the bandit brave and bold who robbed the rich and helped the poor.

It is an idealized version of the story of Robert, Earl of Huntingdon, the favorite of Richard Coeur de Lion, who rides with his lord to war on the Turks in the Holy Land, and return to find his castles burned and his lands stolen by the rascally Prince John, brother of the Lion-hearted King.

Douglas Fairbanks as "Robin Hood," has ample scope in this picture for his dramatic ability and athletic vigor. Bold, brave, indomitable, he is "afraid of women," but the lovely Lady Marian Fitzwalter captures his fancy, and his love for her spurs him to deeds of valor and high emprise. In the scene where the venturesome Robin flouts the castle guards, invades the castle itself and makes them spin a merry chase, there is action, fast and furious, and the "merrie men of Sherwood Forest Green," provide plenty of entertainment when they flout the king's officers and capture the town of Nottingham.

Fat Friar Tuck, Will Scarlett, Allan-a-Dale, Little John they are all here, a merry, joyial crew, capering through the forest, arching their bows in friendly competition and following their adventurous leader through thick and thin. There is a comical scene when the fat Friar tests his strength against that of the masked Richard, and there is a note of grim, medieval humour throughout in the performance of the mighty Lion-Heart, himself, whose rough strength and robust mirth rejoice at the opportunity of joining the robber band which aims to foil the schemes of his rascally brother, Prince John.

From the first scene, where a tourney takes place the king and his jester companioned by Prince John, hooded falcon on finger, watching with grim appreciation the battling knights, to the close, on a note of romance, there is not discernible a single modern note in a superb picturization of one of the most interesting of story-book heroes, the brave "Robin Hood" and his merry men.

"A wonderful picture" was the comment of more than one of the spectators who thronged to the Capitol Theatre last evening.

At the ROYAL—To-night and To-morrow.

"Brothers Under the Skin," the picture at the Royal Theatre this week, is one of those light, exceedingly entertaining comedy dramas that come once in an age, and which are always received with delight. This is a Goldwyn picture, quite up to the usual Goldwyn standard, based upon one of Peter B. Kyne's popular magazine yarns. The story tells of the similar domestic difficulties encountered by two young husbands in widely divergent layers of society—one a general manager, at $30,000 a year, the other a shipping clerk at $30 a week, in the same big corporation.

The wives of both are young, beautiful, charming, but luxury-loving and irresponsible. Both keep their husbands in eternal debt and eternally worried.

But there finally comes a last straw at which the two husbands rebel .In no ungentle fashion the respective wives are shown the error of their ways .And all, presumably, is well thereafter.

"Brothers Under the Skin" has one of those small but distinctive casts that are seen too infrequently. Helene Chadwick, as the shipping clerk's wife, repeats the notably fine performance she gave as the young wife in "Dangerous Curve Ahead." Claire Windsor, whose beauty and acting ability have made her one of the most popular leading women of the screen, appears as Dorothy Kirtland, the other wife. The two husbands are respectively Pat O'Malley and Norman Kerry. Mae Busch is again the vamp in this laugh-a-minute picture, and as usual a fascinating one.

The film was directed by E. Mason Hopper, whose deft, light touch was evident throughout. Whether you are a picture fan or not, we unhesitatingly recommend "Brothers Under the Skin."

The rest of the programme is also very good, including a thrilling picturization of Jack London's famous sea stories, and two excellent comedies. It is a bill that has variety enough to suit every taste.

EXTOLLED WORK OF THE SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

The Queen Alexandra Home and Plans were discussed for the holdmonthly meeting last evening, the president, Mrs. S. F. Touchbourn, in the chair.

A fine report on the proceedings of the Home and School section of the Ontario Educational Association convention recently held in Toronto was given by Mrs. S. T. Medd.

Mr. Medd who was also present at the meeting last evening, spoke in congratulatory terms of the work of the Home and School Associations.

In the absence of the honorary president, Mrs. A. Mowat, the presentation of the set of the "Book of Knowledge," purchased by the Association for the use of the pupils of the Queen Alexandria School, was made by the president, Mrs. Touchbourn, and Miss E. Morrow, on behalf of the principal, M. H. Park, thanked the society for their gift.

Plans wehe discussed for the holding of a picnic in June, and a rummage sale in the near future. Proceeds of the last paper collection held by the Association were announced as $43.11.

An enjoyable vocal solo was given by Miss Grace Morgan, accompanied by Miss Gillespie, and Miss Lillian Harrison gave a reading.

BRITISH GOVT. WARNS RUSSIA

Britain Will No Longer Stand by and See Her Ships Seized and Subjects Ill-Treated.

LONDON, May 8.— (Special to The Examiner.)—Britain this morning sent her second note to Russia within two weeks, and it was couched in the strongest terms that Downing street has addressed to any power since the war.

Britain specially warns Russia that she will no longer stand idly by and see her ships seized and her people ill-treated, and further that she will hold the Bolshevists personally liable for the damage to life and property that has already been done. The note goes as far as it possibly can without breaking off all relations and it is believed that it would have actually taken the form of an ultimatum if the wishes of a section of the Cabinet had prevailed.

The note says, however, that if trade relations are to be maintained, Moscow must see to it that her subjects observe the ordinary rules of a civilized nation and obey the fundamental principles of International law.

The note was despatched as a climax to a series of meetings of the Cabinet in which Russian relations have been discussed. In the House of Commns yesterday Sir A. Richardson, member for Gravesend, asked the Government whether it was prepared to take action with regard to the purchase of Russian oil products, to bring about cancellations of the leases and the concessions on the grounds that they were contrary to public interest.

Ronald McNeill intimated that the Government had no intention of interfering in this matter, as it was a question of the operations of a private company, and that if action was necessary it should be taken through the usual channels in the law courts.

"If Russia does not at once make a specific promise to adhere to the ordinary uses of civilized nations trade relations will be broken off at once and the Soviet delegation will have to pack up," said an official of the Foreign Office.

MAYOR BOUGHT FIRST TICKET

His Worship Sets the Example For Thursday Night's Smoker in Victoria Hall.

Mayor Taylor bought the first ticket for the Lacrosse Club's smoker in Victoria Hall on Thursday night, and the sale is reported to be going smoothly. Tickets, including those for the reserved section, may be obtained at Lebarr's news store, Eddie Wright's, Bruce Patterson's, the United Cigar Store and Louis Yeates.

A big and varied programme is offered in Thursday night's entertainment. The Knox Minstrels will go on sharp at 8.15 o'clock for an hour or more of fun and music. Mr. Vernon Morphet has very kindly taken over the music details and promises a snappy, interesting programme as an opener. The boxing bouts will start immediately afterwards, and will run another hour. Four bouts have been arranged, and if present negotiations go through, a feature extra will be added. The main bout will bring Combe, of the P.A.A., against McTaggart, of St. Helen's Club, Toronto. The visitor has been well-recommended, and Combe needs no introduction to the local fans.

Millard and Corbett have been matched for the first time and should provide a fine exhibition at 118 pounds. The other boys are well known, and the whole card speaks for itself.

BOY OF 12 YEARS PLAYS DETECTIVE EFFECTIVELY
Flint, Michigan, is somewhat proud of the achievement of its boy sleuth Lawrence Connors, formerly of Peterborough. It appears that the investigations of Lawrence, who is only twelve years old, led to the arrest of the Grunbush brothers Jack and Steve, said by police to have been guilty of a series of auto thefts and he has earned $25 from his first adventure into criminology. A reward of $25 was offered by an auto mobile insurance agency for recovery of one of the stolen cars which is alleged to have been taken by the Grunbushs. This will go to Lawrence.

The insurance company will likely it was learned to-day claim a number of accessories from one of the cars for sale. The money obtained from these will go to pay the $25 to the boy sleuth, who trailed a stolen car to the Grunbushs' yard and later according to his story, watched one of them at work dismantling a car.

LABOR UNREST IS A PROBLEM IN BRITISH ISLE

Nucleus of a New Fascisti Movement Launched in Britain—Prospect of Serious Strikes.

CONSTABLES' BILL

LONDON, May 9.—(Special).—The increasing unrest in labor circles with prospects of serious strikes has lent an extraordinary interest to the bill passed yesterday in the House of Commons, known as the Special Constables Bill.

The measure provides for an organization similar to that which existed in war-time, and it is calling forth the most fervid protests from labor, who dub the new bill the British Fascisti Act. Many of the Labor members, notably C. P. Trevelyan, the member for Newcastle on Tyne, maintain that the Government is forming the new force to assist capital in over-awing labor and defeating the claims of the strikers. It is claimed that the bill is designed to provide special constables to replace new employed on public utilities in case of a strike. Jack Jones in an interview this morning bitterly denounced the organization as a blackegging force, and added: "The Government evidently wants every creeping, crawling thing in the factories to become a special constable. No decent workman will join such an organization." Other Labor members suggest the formation of a counter organization, and Geo. Lansbury, former editor of the Daily Herald, declares that the Rifle and Revolver Club recently formed among stock brokers and city men is in reality the nucleus of a new Fascisti movement in Britain. In spite of this criticism the bill was carried by a fairly large majority.

A WINDOW EXHIBIT SPECIAL INTEREST

Reminder of the Honor Brought to the City by Trinity S. S. Orchestra

An interesting exhibit, a reminder of the honor brought to Peterboro by the Trinity Sunday School Orchestra last week, when they won first prize in the Provincial contest at Toronto, is being shown in the window of W. C. Lech, 366 George Street. It consists of a large group flashlight photograph of the organization, which numbered thirty-two members in the competition, and which shows each individual quite clearly, also the gold medal awarded to Mr. R. Gliddon as conductor, and the handsome shield which becomes the property of the organization for a year, the first year it has been awarded. These three exhibits are silent reminders of the effective work going on in musical circles in Peterboro, a work of patience and continued study that has finally received official recognition and placed this organization in the top position as a Sunday school orchestra for the Province of Ontario. A look at the exhibit is sure to cause just a little thrill of pride in the fact that Peterboro has produced and developed such an accomplished group of musicians.

HATE IN RUHR IS EMPHASIZED

And Quite as Definite as the Unswept, Cinder-covered Walks of Dusseldorf.

By ERNEST M. HEMINGWAY.
Special to The Examiner. Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.

DUSSELDORF, May 9. — You feel the hate in the Ruhr as an actual concrete thing. It is as definite as the unswept, cinder-covered sidewalks of Dusseldorf or the long rows of grimy brick cottages, each one exactly like the next, where the workmen of Essen live.

It is not only the French that the Germans hate. They look away when they pass the French sentries in front of the postoffice, the town hall and the Hotel Kaiserhof in Essen, and look straight ahead when they pass poilus in the street. But when Nationalists and workers meet they look each other in the face or look at each others clothes with a hatred as cold and final as the towering slag heaps back of Frau Bertha Krupp's foundries.

Most of the workers of the Ruhr district are Communists. The Ruhr has always been the reddest part of Germany. It was so red, in fact, that before the war troops were never garrisoned there, both because the Government did not trust the temper of the population and feared that the troops would become contaminated with the Communist atmosphere. Consequently, when the French moved in they had no barracks to occupy, and had a very difficult time billeting.

At the start of the occupation all of the Ruhr united solidly to back the Government against the French. The night of the demonstration when Thyssen came home from his trial at Mayence, a German newspaper man told me he identified over a hundred men in the mob, singing patriotic songs and shouting for the Government, who had been officers or non-coms. in the Red army during the Ruhr rebellion. It was a great revival of national feeling that molded the country into a whole in its opposition to France.

"It was most uplifting," an old German woman told me. "You should have been here. Never have I been so uplifted since the great days of the victories. Oh, how they sang. Ach, it was wonderful."

That is finished now. The leaders of the workers are saying that the Government has no policy, except passive resistance, and they are sick of passive resistance. Their newspapers are demanding that the German Government start negotiations with the French. The French have seized millions of marks of unemployment doles, and as soon as the unemployment pay doesn't come in the workers begin grumbling.

It was beginning to look as though the workers would not hold out in the passive resistance, and the industrialists were extremely anxious to provoke an incident between the workmen and the troops. Something to stir up a little trouble and revive the old patriotic fervor. They ordered the sirens blown to summon the workers for a passive resistance demonstration whenever French troops appeared for requisitionings.

On the Saturday before Easter the incident occurred. It cost the lives of thirteen workmen. It would not have happened, perhaps, if the young officer in charge of the platoon that came to requisition motor trucks had not been nervous. But it did happen.

I have heard at least fifteen different accounts of what actually happened. At least twelve of them sounded like lies. The crowd was very thick and pressed tight around the soldiers. It was in a big court-

WILL AUSTRIA "LIVE OR DIE" THE QUESTION

Next Few Months Will Decide Future of Harassed Nation—Further Retrenchment Needed.

MAY PULL THROUGH

By William Philip Simms.

VIENNA, May 9.—Whether Austria is to live or die will be determined during the next few months.

Incidentally, the League of Nations will soon have flung the lie into the face of those who dubbed it a rope of sand, the impracticable dream of a visionary. That is, if Austria survives.

If Austria succumbs, the league will have lost its first big case and will have received a very considerable blow.

Late in April or during May, the Austrian minister to London, G. Franckenstein, with former Russian Minister of Finance (czarist regime) M. Bark, and Commissioner Nixon, of the League of Nations, plan a visit to America. They are coming to sound out the money market with respect to Austria.

Already this commission has visited the capitals of Europe—London, Brussels, Rome, The Hague—on a similar mission.

Are Encouraged.

I understand they have met with considerable encouragement. America is not at all vital to their scheme, but America will have a chance to come in if America wants to. America, I understand, will not be pressed. In fact, the mission will not go to America at all if there comes the slightest hint before they sail that the United States will receive them coldly.

Austria's deficit—while getting her house in order so she can balance her own budget unassisted—is calculated by the league's experts at something like $150,000,000.

A short-time loan to carry Austria over the spring months has already been negotiated—at Paris, Brussels, Rome, London, Amsterdam and Christiania.

Something like $100,000,000 or a little more will be needed in addition. This loan will be for 20 years, guaranteed by Austria's tobacco monopoly and her customs.

The commissioner general of the league, here, told me he considers this guarantee more than sufficient and absolutely sound.

The income from these sources are already being paid into the newly created Austrian Bank of Issue—the government can no longer print paper money at will—to a special account and not a cent of this can be used to defray any government expenses without an order from Dr. Zimmerman.

More Retrenching.

Austrians are beginning to use the deposit department of the banks again, deposits now growing at a rapid rate. This, Dr. Zimmerman explained, is one of the very best possible signs. It shows the confidence of the Austrians themselves—once at the disappearing point—is returning.

Free rides on the trains and reduced fares are to go. In December only 45 per cent of the passengers paid full fare.

The number of government departments this month goes down to only eight. Each cabinet member has the right to but one motor car. Subsidies, pensions, tax exemptions and the like have been reformed to the tune of 180 billion paper crowns saving a year.

What Austria needs is what every other country in Europe needs; European stability and security against hell being to pay tomorrow, Austria, thanks to the league, is going to pull through—if let alone by her neighbors.

SOCIETY FIND THE BUILDING COSTS HIGHER

Will Repair the Old Shelter Rather Than Attempt to Erect a New Building.

A LOOK AROUND

The present prohibitive cost of building is evidently the main factor in the decision reached by the Board of Management of the Children's Aid Society, which is to purchase rather than build, that is, if satisfactory negotiations can be made. The old Shelter with a new roof in place of the burned one, still remains as a refuge in case the Society fails to secure a property which will suit its purse. One owner of a contemplated site, taking advantage of the present need, has boosted the price of his property by five thousand dollars over a reported quoted value of last year.

The consensus of opinion amongst the members was against building. Between thirty and forty thousand dollars was an estimated cost of a new building large enough to house the Shelter's family, which is usually in the neighborhood of twenty odd children, swelling often to larger proportions. And thirty thousand dollars, which, by the way, is said to be the price asked for the old Barnardo Home property, is away beyond the modest nest-egg which has been accumulating through years of careful husbandry for this very purpose, and which lies in a

CONSERVATIVE WOMEN ORGANIZE TOMORROW

Call Issued For Meeting in the Grill Room of the Empress Hotel at 8 p.m.

These days, when women are privileged to play an equal part with the sterner sex in assuring to the province or Dominion, as the case may be, good representative government, the clarion call for organization usually falls on receptive ears. Such was the case in Lakefield last week, when Conservative women of the East Riding met in commendable strength, named their executive and planned for active cooperation with the men in the coming Provincial election fray.

And the experience in the northern village should prove reactive on Conservative women in West Peterborough, who are invited to attend an organization meeting in the Grill Room of the Empress Hotel to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock. This occasion will really mark the opening of an aggressive election campaign by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson's followers in this riding, the women being thus given place in the van of those forces gathering for concentrated action next Wednesday when at an open Conservative Convention in Victoria Hall a standard bearer is to be nominated.

Apart from the election of officers to head the feminine Conservative combative ranks in West Peterborough—and there is splendid material from which to select — Miss Constance Boulton of Toronto has consented to address the gathering. Miss Boulton hardly needs any introduction for she enjoys an enviable reputation in the political arena as a gifted speaker and debater of considerable weight, and capable of presenting the cause she so worthily champions with that intelligence which results from a thorough knowledge of her subject. Politically informative, an ardent Liberal-Conservative who has made a close study of political administration and present day Provincial exigencies, Miss Boulton always proves an interest-holding talker. She will to-morrow evening, present to her audience of the gentler sex the course she conceive they should follow in the coming struggle for party supremacy, not only in their own interest, individually and collectively, but also in that of the country in general. And above all things, she will stress the important part women can and should play in the general Provincial elections, and assist in organizing Conservative women here into an active body whose functioning shall have no mean weight in support of the party's candidate subsequently chosen to contest West Peterborough Riding.

Conservative women are expected to rally around their leaders to-morrow evening in vigorous unity.

HAD A DEBATE EVILS WEALTH

Peterboro Branch of U. F. Y. P. O. Had a Meeting Last Evening.

The Peterborough branch of the U.F.Y.P.O. held their regular monthly meeting at the Club Rooms on Simcoe Street last evening, with a large attendance of members. A carload of young people from Lakefield were visitors, bringing their debating team with them.

A debate was held, based on the resolution: "That wealth is a greater source of unhappiness than poverty."

The affirmative side was taken by Lakefield debaters, Miss Lemay and Mr. Anderson, while Peterborough club members, Misses May Muir and Hazel Ackison, upheld the negative, which won the decision.

Judges were F. C. McRae of Norwood, H. B. Cowan of Peterborough, and Robert Albert of Lakefield.

The formation of a baseball team was discussed, and Roy Sanderson, Stanley Cann, and Melville Scott were appointed a committee to meet the senior U.F.O. Baseball Club on 15th May.

F. C. McRae, of Norwood, gave an interesting talk on the pig club, which is being organised in this district.

It was decided to hold meetings for next season in the W.O.W. Hall, for which favourable arrangements have been made. Meetings will be held on the first Tuesday of the month.

Announcement was made of the date of the annual U.F.O. picnic, which will be held on 21st June at Wallace's Point.

THE TRANSFER OF ARMOUR'S HILL

Women's Patriotic League Have Paid the Full Amount of Purchase Price.

In last evening's Examiner, it was reported that J. J. McBain's offer to the city of a sixteen-inch strip of land on the south side of Munroe avenue, giving access to Armour Hill property, had been accepted by the Council.

In discussing the purchase of Armour's Hill by the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham, for conversion into a public park, the remark was made that "the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham had already paid $1,000 to Mr. E. A. Peck, representing the Armour estate, and it was understood that there would be no difficulty about the balance"

The members of the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham are anxious to correct any slight misapprehension which might exist regarding the purchase of the property, and state that the full amount of the purchase price has been paid over, the deeds issued, and all legal formalities completed for the transfer of the hill to the League.

GRAND JURIES MAY CEASE TO FUNCTION HERE

Manitoba Abolishes System and Britain Takes First Step Toward Adopting Similar Action

IS SYSTEM DOOMED?

TORONTO, May 9. — "Has the Grand Jury, as an integral part of the administration of criminal justice, outlived its usefulness?" is a question to which Canadian jurists are devoting their attention at present. Last week the Manitoba Legislature passed an act abolishing the Grand Jury, apparently convinced that the $50,000 a year which will be saved can be spent to better advantage in other ways than by maintaining this institution which is hoary with age; and that the wight who comes within reach of the law will not have his chance of a fair trial prejudiced because there will no longer be the Grand Jury to return a true bill against him, before he is placed in the dock.

Action in Britain.

But the Canadian West, which is perhaps as famous for its lack of reverence for institutions simply because of their antiquity as for its wheat acreage, is not the only portion of the Empire in which ruthless hands would assail what was once considered a bulwark of the people's liberty. Lately, the Lord Chancellor introduced a bill in the British House of Lords to do away with the Grand Jury in all cases except those coming up for trial at the Assizes. The only criticism the Law Lords had to make was that the measure did not go far enough, and that the Grand Jury should be abolished entirely. However, the opinion of the Lord Chancellor, that they should make haste slowly, prevailed.

Ontario Judiciary.

The matter was brought to the attention of the County Court Judges' Association of Ontario at its last meeting, and the opinion was generally expressed that the Grand Jury had outlived its usefulness and should be abolished.

But the York County judges, although members of the association, are not unanimous that the Grand Jury has no longer an effective part to play in the administration of criminal justice.

"This is a democratic country," said Judge Coatsworth, the senior judge, "and by calling on citizens to serve on grand and petit juries would bring home to them the fact that they are the rulers, and that the administration of the law is in their hands. It is one of the very few ways now in which they can take an active part in the government of the country. If there were no other reason, and there are others for maintaining the Grand Jury, I think that would warrant us in continuing it. I would not like to see it abolished."

A LOCAL ARTIST

MISS AGNES LOGAN

of Peterboro whose work on the piano at the Ontario Musical Festival Competition in Toronto was rewarded by five first prizes.

THREE PARTIES IN LOCAL RING

U. F. O. Will Not Likely Be Represented in Provincial Fight.

Three parties will likely contest the riding of west Peterboro in the provincial campaign. The present member, T. Tooms, has already declared himself as an adherent of Premier Drury, and in both the Conservative and Liberal camps there is a growing activity, a polishing of lances, that suggest tilting in the joust.

Some rumours have been circulated on the street to the effect that the United Farmers of this constituency would nominate Mr. James C. Campbell of South Monaghan township, but the mistake in that "feeler" lies in the fact that Mr. Campbell is not eligible as a standard-bearer in a provincial fight. His township is included with West Peterboro only for Federal purposes. So that eliminates Mr. Campbell from the list.

The U.F.U.O. will in all probability call a convention, but it is unlikely that they will put forward a candidate. In view of the local situation some of their leaders feel that they might as well leave the contest to the two old parties with Mr. Tooms making it a three-cornered affair. On the other hand some of the U.F.O. have become so deeply tinged with their party colours, so imbued with the spirit of their group and so vitally conscious of their class that they will refuse to vote for their old parties. This statement was made by a farmer who is well acquainted with the rural opinion in West Peterboro, but others have expressed the belief that few farmers would deliberately disfranchise themselves simply because their own group might not be represented.

Mr. Tooms considers that his prospects are bright. Although the Independent Labour Party in Peterboro have apparently been disbanded for some considerable time, and declarations have been recently made that the economic and political activities of Labour should be kept entirely separate, it is possible that the party could be revived for the coming engagement. Mr. Tooms believes that he will receive heavy support from the prohibitionists of this city, and he also entertains the hope that many of the farmer followers of E. C. Drury will for that reason mark their ballots for T. Tooms.

ALLEGED KIDNAPPER IS REMOVED TO HOSPITAL

TORONTO, May 9.— (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Margaret Cameron, who was arrested last night on the charge of kidnapping a baby, was removed in the police ambulance to St. Michael's Hospital early this morning. She was found in a cell suffering from internal trouble and bleeding profusely. Hospital authorities stated to-day that her condition was serious.

EXCURSION MAY COME TO PETERBORO' SOON

An official invitation has been forwarded by Mayor W. H. Taylor and the Chamber of Commerce to General Motors Ltd., to conduct their yearly excursion to Peterborough this summer. Mr A. Pickett, secretary-treasurer of the Glee Club, which has the management of the excursion, stated that he expected at least 1,000 to participate in the excursion. It has been suggested to Mr. Pickett that Nicholls Oval and Inverlea Park are admirably suited to the requirements of the excursionists. An invitation has also been extended to the company from Cobourg, but it is believed that Peterborough is more favourably considered.

ROADS BUILT OUTLIVE LIFE BONDS ISSUED

This is the Aim of Highway Engineers Declared Col. H. C. Boyden to Local Engineers.

NEED GOOD ROADS

"Highway Construction" was the title of an interesting, if sometimes highly technical, lecture by Colonel H. C. Boyden, consulting engineer of Chicago, at last night's meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute. Colonel Boyden proved to be a very interesting speaker, and showed a thorough knowledge of his subject. While his lecture was intended for the enlightenment of the highway engineer in the recent developments in roadway construction, it was also of interest to all who travel on or help pay for the highways.

One of the strong recommendations made by the lecturer was that roadways should be made wider in order to reduce traffic at the sides, where breaking usually occurs first, and also in order to provide for future expansion in road traffic. The objection to this plan is the expense; but, he said, "When we are financing road building with bonds that run 30 or 40 years it seems logical to have some sign of the road left when the bonds are being paid." In one part of Illinois the people are paying interest on bonds issued to finance the building of roads which cannot now be found.

In the course of tests made in Illinois with all kinds of road building material it was shown that no surface that has not concrete incorporated in it in some form or other will carry present-day traffic. This being recognized by governments throughout the United States and Canada, 80 per cent. of federal road building in the States being of concrete.

No Set Formula

The rapid increase in the use of concrete in highway construction shows that it has proved satisfactory in use, and is a way of safeguarding the public funds invested in roadway construction. Expert construction is absolutely necessary to successful road engineering, and no set formula can be taken as a guide. Investigation must be made in the field, and not on laboratory models. This means a great expense in experimentation. In the past two years tests and investigations in the United States have cost $2,000,000, and will cost a much larger sum to complete. In 1922 there were 430 tests proceeding.

Speaking of the sub-grade, the speaker stated that the quality of the soil underlying the pavement is one of the most important factors in these tests. The sub-grade varies greatly in supporting power, and is not given the attention it merits if lasting roads are to be obtained. Various methods of increasing its ability to carry loads are being investigated and some suggestions have been made. One suggest is the admixture of small quantities of Portland cement or other fine powder, while another recent development is the building of pavements thicker at the sides, commencing two feet from the edge, than at the centre. This latter is known as the Arizona type road.

Some Conclusions

Some of the conclusions drawn from a study of the problems in this line are: An intensive soil study should be made to determine the bearing power of the material for sub-grade. A uniform sub-grade should extend the entire width of the roadway. A standard for sub-grade cannot be fixed arbitrarily for a country or even for a state. The sub-grade must be taken into account for each part of the road, and the construction proceeded with to suit the conditions with regard to the maximum traffic on each road. "I have seen five different kinds of sub-grade in a mile of road construction," remarked Colonel Boyden.

The necessity for keeping concrete wet during the hardening period was stressed by the speaker. In order to get 100 per cent. efficiency the concrete must be properly cured. It is supposed, he said, that the chemical action of the water on the cement is not completed until the two have been in contact 21 days. If the mixture is allowed to dry out the result is not concrete. The only way to get 100 per cent. concrete—the only concrete suitable for roads—is to allow the mixture to remain altogether covered with water for 21 days and then allow seven days to dry off.

Referring briefly to reinforcement, the speaker stated that cantilever strength is not increased by reinforcement, but that it prevents cracking, will hold together cracks which occur and distributes impact and variation from weather conditions.

British Note to Russia Indicates Severance of Relations.

LONDON, May 9. — (Canadian Press.)—The text of the British note to Russia was issued too late yesterday to receive universal comment in the editorial columns of the morning newspapers to-day. All newspapers, however, print the note prominently.

The few comments which appear represent two leading shades of opinion—one wholly endorsing the Government's attitude and the other as completely opposing it. The latter is subscribed to not only by Communists and the more extreme among Laborites, but by the bulk of the Parliamentary Labor party. In the opinions which favor a rupture with Russia it is contended that the Anglo-Russian trade agreement has had little effect on trade, which is not dependent on it.

A RUSSIAN GUN BOAT RAIDS BRITISH TRAWLER

LONDON, May 9. — (Canadian Press.)—A Russian gun boat to-day captured another English trawler off Murmansk, alleging it was fishing in Russian territorial waters, according to a Central News despatch from Hull.

ALL STRONGHOLDS OF CHINESE BANDITS HAVE BEEN UNDER HEAVY FIRE

C. G. Jacobsen Made Successful Dash For Liberty and Has 'Phoned For Aid

IN THE HILLS.

TIENTSIN, May 9.— (Canadian Press.) — Government troops are believed to have completely surrounded all the hill strongholds where fifteen foreigners are being held by the Suchow, according C. G. Jacobsen, inspecting engineer for the British American Tobacco Company, who ran a gauntlet of bullets to carry the bandits' demands to the outside. Jacobsen arrived here yesterday. He told a graphic story of separate dashes made by himself and Miss Schonberg, another captive, through a "No Man's Land" swept by the fire of the bandits and the pursuing soldiers; of how he reached the troops' lines waving his cotton underwear as a flag of truce after he had overpowered and disarmed the last brigand he encountered; of Miss Schonberg's nerve in braving the bullet-raked zone after the bandit guard in the doorway of their prison had been shot down by rifle fire from the besieging soldiers.

Jacobsen siad that the entire party, after their capture Sunday morning, were marched steadily three hours across country, up into the hills to the east. After gaining the high ground, they were broken up into groups which were led off in different directions. His party, numbering eight, included Major Pringle, Miss Schonberg, the Major's son, Roland, and a Mexican couple They were driven over boulder-strewn trails, across hills 2,000 feet high for another two or three hours, and finally reached a walled enclosure, the bandits' stronghold.

Two hours later soldiers appeared on the scene and immediately opened fire. The only protection for the party was the seven foot wall about the compound and they crouched in the corner under the bullet hail, hungry and miserable. They had no food, and their clothing was scant.

After a consultation, the bandit chief agreed to the suggestion that one of the foreigners be sent out to the troops and arrange for his passage through the lines to Peking to negotiate a ransom for the remainder.

An Italian lawyer of Shanghai, Chevalier Musso, was chosen as the emissary. He started but returned almost immediately as the troops redoubled their fire on his appearance. Then Jacobsen undertook to make the dash. As she passed the stockade gates bullets missed him by inches, but he succeeded in reaching the bottom of the hill on which the bandit stronghold stood. There he collapsed exhausted.

As he lay there other bandits came up and he feigned unconsciousness. They all passed him by except one. Jacobsen watched his opportunity and gathering his strength he leaped on the brigand and disarmed him.

Heading in the direction in which he believed the troops to be, he came up to them at last and to induce them to cease firing on him he took off his underwear and waved it as a flag of truce. The troops recognized the signal and treated him kindly.

The fugitive was taken before the captain in charge of the detachment who questioned him calmly, despite a severely wounded hand that hung limp from a uniformed sleeve, smashed by a bandit bullet. Here Jacobsen met Miss Schonberg. She had volunteered to run the gauntlet from the brigands' fort and had escaped almost miraculously. As she passed through the gateway the guard there fell at her feet, shot through the throat, but she kept on her course and reached safety. The engineer said that members of the party were compelled to entertain the bandits in their stronghold by playing jazz instruments that had been seeiezd in the raid on the train at Suchow. He added that he was certain the soldiers had completely surrounded all the hill fastnesses in which the captives were being held.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(Canadian Press.)— The Peking Government has promised to pay the ransom demanded by Chinese bandits who captured British and United States' citizens and a number of other foreign nationals after wrecking the Shanghai-Peking express Sunday morning, the State Department was advised late yesterday by Jacob G. Schurman, United States Minister at Peking.

The Chinese Prime Minister also has agreed to act as rapidly as possible in meeting all demands presented by the Portugese Minister at Peking, Dean of the Diplomatic Corps there, and has given assurances that the Peking Government intends to dismiss the civil and military governors of Shantung province.

The Portuguese Minister informed the Chinese Foreign Office, according to State Department advices, that the corps of foreign diplomats at Peking, "reserved the right over and above any moral and material damages claimed to demand a progress indemnity for every day after the twelfth of May that the foreigners remain captive."

PEKING, May 9. — (Canadian Press.)—Some of the foreign prisoners taken by the bandits who raided the Shanghai-Peking express train Sunday were shot when the brigands used them as shields from the bullets of the attacking Government troops, according to unconfirmed reports received both here and at Tientsin.

WOMEN MADE PERILOUS TRIP OVER THE ICE

Twenty-Three Passengers Made Their Way From Ice-Bound Steamer to Shore Over Ice Packs.

WOMEN FELL IN.

SYDNEY, N.S., May 9. Canadian Press. — Near to exhaustion from their nervewracking walk across the tight miles of floating ice rafts that form part of the barrier which had imprisoned them on the steamer Kyle for more than ten days, four women and 23 men reached Flat Point at 3.45 yesterday afternoon.

There they were given hot drinks by the lightkeeper and in a short time all had recovered sufficiently to continue their walk along the shore to Waterford where they entrained for Sydney.

"It was a case of every man for himself," said one of the lady passengers, "because we had no ropes, and if one disappeared between the floating cakes of ice it would have been impossible for the others to be of any assistance."

Miss M. Rollis, one of the ladies of the party, fell into the water once, but pluckilyscrambled back on to the ice by sheer grit and the urge of self-preservation. The ladies stood it as well or better than the men.

The journey was fraught with great perils because there were open spaces to be avoided, mountains of rafted ice to be climbed, and wide fissures to be jumped. Some of the passengers carried their luggage but the majority contented themselves with reaching shore without their personal effects which they hope to recover when the steamer is finally released.

REV. G. S. RORKE CAVAN, RESIGNS

Delicate Health Will Not Permit Him to Continue His Charge.

CAVAN, May 9. — It was with great regret that the official board of Cavan Methodist church received the resignation of the Rev. G. S. Rorke, at the quarterly meeting of the board of managers. Mr. Rorke has not been feeling very well since his recent bad cold and fears that the long drives on Cavan circuit might prove too much for him during next winter. He, too, regrets severing his connection with those churches where he has worked so harmoniously and efficiently during the past two years.

During his two years on Cavan circuit, Mr. Rorke has won the affection and respect of his own congregation and many others. It is sincerely hoped that he may recover his health and find a charge in some other sphere of the work where his duties will not be so onerous. The best wishes both of the community and church will go with him.

A Mass Meeting.

At two thirty in the afternoon of Sunday a mass meeting of the Sunday school, church members and adherents of the church, also all others who care to attend, will be held in the auditorium of the church. There will be a special programme in which good music will form a feature. An address will be delivered by Mr. Reginald Cuff Peterborough. All are invited to come and unite in showing honour to "our mothers."

CANADIAN BUTTER OUTCLASSED BY N.Z.

Methods Employed in Grading, Packing, Refrigerating and Branding Cheese Also Hopelessly Out of Date.

MONTREAL, May 9—(Canadian Press)—Unpalatable truth were expressed at a special meeting here yesterday afternoon of the Montral Produce Association for the purpose of hearing an address from J. A. Ruddick, Dominion Dairy Commissioner who has recetly returned from a trip to the Antipodes. Mr. Ruddick stated that Canadian cheese which used to be the premium standard of quality on the British market had dropped to second or third place there in favor of New Zealand and Australias cheese, and that instead of commanding a premium of four to six shillings in England it now took a back place with this high premium going to the New Zealand product. Mr. Ruddick said that Canadian factory methods, grading, packing, refrigerating and branding methods were hopelessly out of date, as a result of which Canada was necessarily falling back in the race.

Mr. Ruddick further stated that the position of Candian butter was even worse; that New Zealand was making butter of a quality and grade undreamed of in Canada and that the Canadian prodcut was hopelessly outclassed in the British market.

In reply it was stated that the export market was spoilt by the home market. Canadians were easily satisfied, while the British palate had been trained to the perfection point

Mr. Ruddick said that more rigid grading and packing regulations were needed here if Canada was to regain its place on the British dairy market. In the Antipodes factories were run on co-operative principles and Canadian plants were small compared to them. Cheese factories there turned out 1,000 tons in a year and butter factories in New Zealand ran to 2,500 long tons yearly.

SAYS INFANT WAS ABDUCTED

But Mrs. Margaret Cameron Claims Mother's Right to Three-Weeks-Old Child.

TORONTO, May 9. — (Canadian Press).—"The baby belongs to me; it is my baby, and I am going to keep it," exclaimed Mrs. Margaret Cameron, aged 33, when placed under arrest last night on the charge of abducting a three-weeks-old child, daughter of a young woman who was a patient at the maternity hospital, where Mrs. Cameron was also a patient.

The abduction took place a week ago last Sunday evening while the mother of the child was visiting friends in an eastern town.

With her arms tightly clasped around the infant, Mrs. Cameron became hysterical when informed by the police that she would have to part with the baby overnight. She strongly maintained that the baby belonged to her, and that the infant had been taken away from her for three days after its birth.

RUSSIA'S BINS NOW BULGE WITH GRAIN.

Too Much Bread May Be Russia's Dilema in 1923.

MOSCOW, May 9 (Associated Press).—Too much bread promises to be Russia's dilemma in 1923.

From 1917 until 1922 bread was the most precious thing in Russia. A farmer could trudge into Moscow with a small sack of grain and trade it for a grand piano or anything which the hungry city dwellers had to offer. Now the same peasant could walk from one end of Russia to the other and, excepting in a few isolated famine districts, could not get a jack-knife for the same sack of grain.

If the harvest of this year turns out as expected, Russia will have a surplus of grain which could not be sold abroad.

From a country which less than 18 months ago was clamoring for crusts, Russia has changed into a nation which promises within a few months to be swamped with wheat and rye.

At Saratof, near certain communes that have been listed as famine-stricken, rye flour, the staple of bread, is quoted at less than 25 cents a pood, which is 36 pounds. At Samara, the district where even cannibalism occurred among the starving a year ago, rye goes begging at less than 40 cents a bushel.

In Moscow, naturally, transportation costs have made prices somewhat higher, almost double the reigning price in the great producing regions. Siberia, once the granary from which wheat poured into Western Europe, did not fare so well in last year's harvest, and there prices are higher, but in Odessa and at Kieff, in the southern wheat belt, recent official quotations show wheat costing under 70 cents a bushel.

The Soviet government, through the collection of taxes, has rolled up a grain reserve amounting to nearly 200,000,000 bushels. Some of this is needed to feed the army, but it can be exported, the governments does not know what to do with it. as for the bulk of the grain, unless

BRITISH HANDED EMPHATIC NOTE TO THE SOVIETS

NO REPLY YET.

MOSCOW, May 9. Canadian Press —An emphatic note from the British government handed to Maxim Litvinoff, the Assistant Foreign Minister, yesterday afternoon, alleging propaganda and other violation of the Anglo-Russian trade agreement, and demanding assurances of unconditional fulfillment of specific requirements within ten days, was considered by the Russian officials last night as definitely intended to bring about a break in the Anglo-Russian relations.

As the note is only being distributed among the higher officials of of the government none of them would predict the nature of the Russian reply, but the general impression seemed to be that Marquis Curzon, the British Foreign Secretary, was desirous of a break.

"His Majesty's Government has no desire or intention to enter into a prolonged or possibly acrimonious, controversy on these subjects" the note says in insisting upon unconditional fulfillment within ten days. Even the opinion among members of the British mission last evening seemed to be that the Russians would have to back down further than at any time in Soviet history if they conceded Lord Curzon's demands and accepted the tone of the note meekly.

If a break in relations comes the Russian trade organizations now located in London will probably be removed to Berlin or one of the Scandinavian countries.

Icebreakers Rushed to Aid Sick Woman.

Cause Cat Adopts A Family of Foxes

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., May 9.— (Canadian Press.)—The three young foxes valued at several hundred of dollars, which were slowly starving to death on a fox farm at Mile Post 48 of the Port Arthur and Duluth Railway have been nearly restored to full health and strength by the ministerations of a common female house cat.

The cat was selected from several offered by local people in response to a newspaper advertisement. The foxes' mother, herself worth about $300, was killed in a fight.

The cat and her brood were taken to the fox farm, where the young foxes had been fed by spoon. One by one the kittens were taken away and the foxes substituted. The mother cat apparently has not noticed the change and is bringing up her adopted family with every appearance of success.

RUIN IS FACING THE MARITIME PEOPLE

Abolition of Differential Freight Rates Has Been a Serious Blow to the Eastern Provinces.

OTTAWA, May 9. — (Canadian Press.)— The Senate yesterday discussed the effect of increased freight rates on the business of the Maritime provinces and the methods to be adopted to solve this problem.

The question was brought before the senate by Hon. Mr. McDonald (Shadiac), who declared that the industries in the maritime provinces were facing bankruptcy under the present conditions. Until 1916, he added, there were differential rtaes which permitted the export of goods from these provinces to central and western Canada. These rates weer abolished and ruin now faced the factories and families were leaving the country. The government had acted on behalf of the western farmers on the freight rates question and could do the same for the maritime provinces. The Canadian National Railway had become international not national and was diverting trade to United States ports. He urged that the government give back what they had been promised and received for fifty years after Confederation ,and moved a resolution to this effect seconded by Hon. C. Turgeon, who declared that freight rates were Canada's greatest problem ,and that these rates were bearing heavily on the maritime provinces, which were essential to Canada.

AGNES OBJECTS TO MARRIAGE SERVICE

Canada's Only Woman M.P. Objects to Certain Passages in the Service as it is To-Day.

MONTEAL, May 9. Canadian Press. — Addressing the Temple Emmanuel Sisterhood here yesterday Miss Agnes MacPhail, Canada's only woman M. P., voiced a vigorous objection to those passages in the marriage service, such as "wilt thou give this woman," and "who gives this woman?" which she claimed were relics of the old servitude, although the old condition had been a happy one, generally speaking.

"Love and service" were woman's two most distinctive characteristics, she declared. She believed that the old male ideal of fighting has gone, and added: "I think one of the things women can do is to make war look what it is—hell!"

Miss MacPhail summed up: "Politics viewed as the business of looking after this great big family of ours in Canada — that is the kind of politics I think that women should be in."

WEDNESDAY, MAY 9TH, 1923.

STARTLING FIGURES.

The President of the Save-a-Life League gives us the following pleasant statistics:

Twelve thousand persons committed suicide in the United States during 1922, of whom one-third were women. The grand total included 38 college students, 50 college professors and school teachers, 19 members of religious professions, 52 judges and lawyers, 84 physicians, 100 heads of large business concerns, and a number of bank presidents. The oldest suicide was aged 100, and the youngest aged 5.

The motives in some cases appear to have been whimsical or silly. A man killed himself because he had to give up playing golf; a young woman "just to get a new thrill."

Child suicide, in particular, has alarmingly increased. In 1919, 477 children committed suicide; in 1922 the number was upward of 900.

Most pathetic of all is the statement that more than 1,000 ex-soldiers have committed suicide since the war.

WHY NOT GO TO RUSSIA?

A gentleman from Toronto bursts into the limelight today with some flashy patter about "welcoming the day when the Union Jack is dragged in the mud," says the Montreal Star. He finishes his little monologue with those laudatory references to Soviet Russia and the Red Flag without which no diatribe against the British Empire can be regarded as quite complete these days.

There is one word of advice which might be offered to the spouter. That is that if he is really consumed with the wish to drag the Union Jack through the dirt he can stage his little act at a meeting of any branch of the St. George's Society or before any one of the other patriotic societies. In fact, if he is daring enough he might try it in any city in Canada—after due notice—and at his own risk.

Finally—and the gentleman is obviously not worth such extended notice—if he is so enamored of Soviet Russia, why not apply for a passport. Emma Goldman, the very pinkest of the pink Bolshevists, can probably give him a pointer or two before sailing. At a pinch we could spare him and Lenin could surely find him a job.

BUNK BY RADIO.

While radio fans in Canada are much indebted to the big broadcasting stations in the United States for a fine variety of musical and literary entertainments, it often happens that remarks are made by speakers, says the Ottawa Journal, that give offence to listeners on this side of the line. It would, of course, be impossible to censor and eliminate objectionable parts of banquet orations, for the benefit of Canadian audiences. The fact probably is that most of the programme managers overlook the fact that thousands of Canadians are tuning in and are part of their radio audiences just as if they were occupying seats in the banquet hall. And we, who get for nothing entertainment of a high class character, are too sensible of the debt we owe them to complain if speeches of enthusiasts are constructed solely for the purpose of entertaining Americans.

On Sunday night last a banquet was held at Albany. Rear Admiral Benson was the chief guest, and the toastmaster, in somewhat fulsome praise of that dissinguished gentleman, introduced him as the man who, with 450 ships, had saved Europe. It is seldom indeed that an American orator of the spread-eagle type does not tell his mixed radio audience of Canadians and Americans that General This or Admiral That went "over there" and Won the War.

This type of banquet orator is a pest that is hard to suppress. We in Canada might retaliate by creating powerful broadcasting stations and filling the air with counter blasts that We Won the War, but would this cure our neighbors? Of course, such an assertion would not be true because we only helped—we were only a small part of a huge machine that did finally, after much hammering on the German lines, win the war.

Our United States friends who are responsible for assembling the high class talent for the radio concerts need, perhaps, only to be reminded that they are talking to an International audience and that ridiculous claims of superiority over all mankind are not likely to improve the good relations that should exist between neighbors.

HE WENT—HE SAW—HE CAME BACK.

He is only one, perhaps, but he has come back. He left Brantford five weeks ago because work was scarce there in his line, and reports of lots of employment took him to Detroit, says the London Advertiser.

This man is in London today, at work. His family expect to join him in a few days. When he got to Detroit he soon secured work; the wages were attractive, and he even had the choice of two places inside of three days.

All this was fine, but he found that it cost him a lot to keep himself in Detroit; that he was miles away from his work if he wanted a room in a desirable place. He was not saving much to send home.

Then he looked for a house so that the family might come. He found there was a demand much greater than the supply, and the only place he could secure would cost him $63 per month, and he "would not put his family in that district," to use his own words.

In short, he found there was employment; that things were on the move; that people were making money, and others were planning how to take it away from them.

This man was anxious to live with his family; he could see no good reason why they should live one place while he worked in another. So it was that he came to London and found employment. He is not making as much money as he made in Detroit, neither is he parting with it as quickly; he is not far from his work, and already has a place in a good, decent locality where his family will live with him.

Canada is a good place to come back to.

THE AMUSEMENT TAX.

In the latest bulletin of the Citizens' Research Institute just received by the Examiner the question of the amusements tax is discussed in a most interesting manner, particularly in regard to the disposition of the revenue obtained from this source.

Should the Province receive all the amusements tax because of the need of funds and because Provincial Governments first organized this form of taxation?

On the other hand, should it be received by the municipalities because it is paid by the citizens of such municipalities and because the municipalities are under considerable expense in connection with the amusement businesses from which the tax is derived?

Or should both Province and municipality share?

At present, with two exceptions, the amusements tax in Canada is levied by the various Provinces. In the case of Quebec the tax is levied by the municipality, and one-half the gross receipts are turned over to the Province. In the case of Saskatchewan, cities and towns may levy the tax and use the proceeds for their own purposes, and the Province does not share therein.

At present also, with three exceptions, the whole of the proceeds of the tax are used for Provincial purposes. The exceptions are:

In British Columbia an amount equal to the tax collected under the Amusements Tax Act in respect of monies deposited for the purpose of betting at race meetings, under the system known as the pari-mutuel, is apportioned among the several municipalities in the Province in proportion to their respective populations.

In Quebec one-half the amount collected under the Amusements Tax Act is kept by the municipality in which the amusement is situate, and one-half is turned over to the Provincial Treasury Department.

In Saskatchewan, whenever the necessary bylaw is passed by the city or town, the proceeds from that tax go to such municipality.

In these days of burdensome taxation, when all governments, Dominion, Provincial and municipal, are constantly seeking new avenues of revenue, the policy of "What Sources of Taxation We Have We Will Hold" is a popular one with each respective government.

The following arguments have been used in favour of the, perhaps, equal division of proceeds of amusements taxes between the municipalities and the Province:

1. The amusements tax is not universal in its application within a Province (i.e.), there must be an amusement place before the tax can be collected.

2. The bulk of the revenue from the tax comes from the inhabitants of the municipality in which the amusements taxed are situate. The municipality therefore would appear to have a right to at least share in the proceeds.

3. The expenses of providing police and fire protection to amusements, and the people in attendance at amusements, and the expenditures on health, roadways, etc., necessitated in part by the existence of amusements, and contributing to the profitable character of such amusements, as well as other forms of business, are mainly contributed by the taxpayer of the municipality where the amusements are carried on.

4. The municipalities have just as much need of the proceeds as the Provinces, and therefore have just as much justification for receiving a share of the levy.

5. Three Provinces have already admitted the justice of permitting the municipalities to share in the proceeds of the tax.

A TIMELY TALK AS TO LABOUR

Rev. G. S. Gervan at Millbrook Also Stresses the Responsibilities of Voters at Elections.

MILLBROOK, May 9.—Rev. G. S. Gervan had a very timely message on the subject of "Labor" in Grace Presbyterian church on Sunday morning, speaking practically to a union congregation the services in the Methodist church being withdrawn on account of the pastor's absence attending his father's funeral which took place in Toronto on Saturday.

The texts were chosen from Genesis 47:3, "And Pharoah said unto his (Joseph's) brethren, what is your occupation?" and also from Jonah 1:8, "Then said they unto him, What is thine occupation?" Evidently the teaching of God's word mainly is that God formed us to be by labor, and intends every man to be so employed as to be truly happy and very useful. At the very beginning we read, "And God took the man and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and keep it." Long afterwards Christ said, "My Father worketh hitherto and I work." Surely no thinking person can deny that idleness is the parent of guilt and ruin. Or as the Spanish proverb puts it, "Men are usually tempted by the devil, but an idle man tempts the devil." Seest thou a young man idle? Thou seest also an old man needy and miserable.

Even if physically incapacitated for manual labor and unable to stand the heat and burden of the day, it is not necessary to go in among the crackers and find fault; one can at least cheer on the rest; and if the hands must be idle there is the better opportunity for the cultivation of the mind. "Six days shalt thou labor" is as much a command as the hallowing of the seventh day, and was given, not in cursing but in blessing, for man is so made that he must have occupation or be miserable. Toil is the price of sleep and appetite, of health and enjoyment. The body and the minds are improved by the work which fatigues them. Even after the fall of labor God has all along intended as a blessing was but intensified, the sentence reading, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat thy bread"—a judgment which has never been repealed. It is labor only that gives relish to pleasure. It is the indispensable condition of possessing a sound mind in a sound body, and it is absolutely true that every industrious man, who gives himself to his proper business from morning to night, is comparatively out of the reach of vice and immortality. Application and industry, having great and good objects, are the best preventives from mischief.

Choice of Occupation.

The choice of occupation is very important and a subject that should concern parents greatly for their children. In earlier days when large families were the rule rather than the exception, one child was almost invariably intended for the ministry; now wealth and position rather than service, are urged as being the most desirable ends to be attained in life. But since this life is the seed time for that which is to come, and every day and hours lays a moulding upon our destiny, under these circumstances it is a very serious thing to determine one's calling in life. Eternal salvation or perdition may depend upon the choice for which both parents and child must assume responsibility; hence it is amazingly important to give time and prayer to this matter because what the boy or girl is to be may, and probably will, decide their character and state for ever. "When your treasure is there will your heart be also" so ask of the thing decided upon as a life task, "Is it worth doing?" Will it help me to measure up to the stature of the perfect man in Christ Jesus?" and then set to work to produce and accomplish something—the best we are capable of—taking no account of weather or moods, or feelings, for as George Elliot says: "There is many a good piece of work done with a heavy heart." Undoubtedly that life is richer in accomplishment if the work chosen to be a worthy one suited to talents and inclination, rather than when, as too often happens, the worker has just drifted into his task and has no natural aptitude for it. Many a spoiled life careless and thoughtless and prayerless parents will have to answer for. On the other hand fathers and mothers who have prayerfully undertaken the immense, critical, complicated task of guiding even one child into the way of virtue, usefulness, holiness and happiness, against the strong influences from without and stronger from within, will find in this life, immeasurably more in eternity, that they have reason to be glad for every one of the gay, plodding days they spent doing their utmost in fulfilling the task which God laid upon them.

Election Responsibilities.

There is another aspect to this question of labor, the speaker pointed out in conclusion. We are soon to have an election in this province; how many realize that after they have marked their ballot their responsibility for the task of good government is not ended. By interest, prayer, maybe in other ways which shall be revealed, the voter is responsible to hold up the hands of the member elected for his constituency. Pressure to labor in various forms is the main cause of efficiency, and even though filling only a small place one may be making possible the greater service of the "man higher up."

Get leave to work
In this world—'tis the best you get at all;
For God, in cursing, gives us better gifts
Than man in benediction. God says: "Sweat
For forcheads"; men say, "crowns"; and
So we are crowned,
Ay, gathered by some tormenting band of steel,
That snaps with a secret spring.
Get work; get work;
Be sure 'tis better than what you work to get.

Total amount sent the Branch Treasurer, Mrs. Jas. Kendry, Peterboro, $200. The mission circle sent $50, and the mission band, which has a membership of thirty-two including fifteen life members had a total of $37.94 when their final accounts were made up.

Field Day Sports

The annual Field Day of sports held by the different C.S.E.T. organizations of three churches of Millbrook, and including the Tuxis Boys and Trail Rangers of other churches in the district, will be held on Monday, June 4, which is, by official proclamation, to be observed as a public holiday this year. Arrangements for all details in connection with the programme for the day will be completed at a meeting to be held on Tuesday evening of the week provided the necessary representatives from the outside groups are able to be present.

How an Investment of $5,000 Made $21,000 Within a Year

"Did you notice that chap who just went out?"

I turned in the direction of the only other occupant of the smoking compartment of the car and found him addressing me.

"Not especially," I replied. "Why?"

"Whenever I meet him I always think of automobiles."

"About ten years ago," he continued, "an aunt died and left him $5,000."

"It had always been his ambition to own an automobile, which he bought for $3,500."

"I had just returned from the gold mining camps of Northern Ontario, and met him one evening in the King Edward Hotel.

"We were having dinner together, and knowing that I had made money in mining, he finally asked me what I thought about the possibilities of gold."

"I was so enthusiastic over what I had seen up North that my friend became equally enthused."

"I advised him to sell his car and put his $5,000 in Hollinger."

"As the car was brand new, he sold it and put his $5,000 in Hollinger.

"Within a year he sold his Hollinger for $21,000, bought a $5,000 car, purchased a home and besides had his $5,000 to the good—in other words, his $5,000 made $21,000.

"Before you came into the smoker he told me he had bought a block of shares of Matchewan Canadian Gold Limited and intended leaving his money in this mine until he had made a fortune."

"And I certainly think he will, because he is one of the luckiest men I know."

There is not the slightest doubt the Matachewan Canadian Gold Limited offers greater opportunities at the present price of the stock than any other property in Northern Ontario.

About the only speculation connected with this stock is how big the mine will develop and how high the stock will go. The gold is known to exist for at least 1,600 feet in length, and over wide widths on the property, diamond drilling and other work done has proven its existence in large ore bodies of commercial value.

The proof is right here in our office, accessible to you for confirmation at any time.

The diamond drillings were made by an experienced mining engineer, and are scientifically accurate in their showings.

No argument in the world can get over actual facts, and they are here for your inspection.

Summing up, the property of the Matachewan Canadian Gold Limited covers an area of 840 acres in one complete block.

As you will see by the prospectus, the board of directors is an unusually strong one.

The present offering of 600,000 shares of the Matchewan Canadian Gold Limited at $1.00 a share is to build a mill and mine the ore which the development and drilling has disclosed.

Why not send at once for particulars of this remarkable opportunity? The coupon below is all that is necessary.

TRACE BANDITS TO THEIR LAIR

Strength of Chinese Brigands Estimated at 3,000—One British Citizen Was Killed.

SHANGHAI, May 8.—(Canadian Press).—Two foreigners, including one British citizen named Joseph Rotham, have been killed in the shooting incident when bandits raided the Peking Express train according to a list compiled here to-day. The other foreigner is believed to be an American, but his name is not given.

Messrs Day and Jacobsen and Miss Coraliti, who escaped from the bandits, have reached Tientsin, and they state that Lucy T. Aldrich, sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Miss Minnie McFadden and Miss Schonberg have stopped at Tsinanfu, where they were admitted to hospital suffering from shock.

The lair of the bandits to which the captives were driven was a village in the hills encircled by a stone wall. The prisoners were forced to take the roughest paths said Day, and if anyone protested he or she was mercilessly beaten. Soldiers appeared outside the town and a lively engagement was soon in progress. The bandit chieftain persuaded Day to take a note to the commander of the military informing him that if firing did not stop the captives would be shot. Day was fired upon by both the military and bandits in making his way with the note, but he delivered his message and firing ceased. He estimated the strength of the bandits at about three thousand.

BRIGHTON MAN UNDER ARREST

Well Known Business Young Man Charged With Receiving Stolen Goods.

BRIGHTON, May 9. — There has been another new and startling development of Brighton's latest sensation which involves the sons of some of the leading citizens of the town. A well known young man engaged in business here has been arrested on a charge of receiving some of the articles which it is alleged that five young men stole recently from a private residence. The business man in question was given a preliminary hearing before County Magistrate Floyd who came up from Cobourg for the hearing. After the testimony of two witnesses had been taken the case was adjourned until Saturday next, the defendant being allowed to go after furnishing bail in the sum of $500.

Young Men in Trouble.

The case is one of the most remarkable in the history of Brighton. Six young men now stand charged with offences which if brought home to them will have serious consequences. All of them are members of some of the best families in the community. With all of them, so far as the records show this is their first offence. They may have been a trifle wild but they were never regarded as vicious by those who knew them best. The whole affair is the story of a drunken orgy on liquor that was stolen after a private home had been broken into during the absence of the family in Toronto.

But the thefts, it is alleged, did not stop with the purloining of liquor. Two gold watches, it is said, and a quantity of valuable silverware, were taken from the residence. Some of the silverware was afterwards found in a ditch where it had evidently been thrown by those who had secured unlawful possession of it, after they had carried it for some distance. The theory is that they found it not only heavy but difficult to conceal.

After helping themselves to the liquor in the house it is further alleged that the young men wantonly damaged the furniture. Pictures were found cut from their frames or otherwise damaged, and upholstered chairs and couches were mutilated.

The Despoiled Home.

The house, the scene of thes depredations, was the mansion of the late C. W. R. Proctor, which stands on Yonge street, near the outskirts of the village. It is one of the handsomest and best furnished homes in Brighton, and since Mr. Proctor's death has been ocupied by two maiden sisters of the deceased. The Misses Proctor closed their home some time ago and took apartments for the winter in Toronto, intending to return here in the spring.

Police take Action.

Some time ago it was found that the residence had been broken into and despoiled as above described It was a case that called for more police probe that the village was at that time able to furnish, and Provincial Officer Boyd of Port Hope, came here to investigate. The result was the arrest of five young men, three being little more than boys and all respectably connected. They were taken to Cobourg for a preliminary hearing before County Magistrate Floyd, who released them on bail of $1000 each.

The stolen liquor consisted of whiskey, the remains of a supply that had been secured for a relative of the family, a son of a former member of Parliament for East Hastings, who had spent some time in the Proctor home when threatened by tuberculosis. There was beside in the cellar a quantity of home made grape wine. All of the liquor had been freely sampled by the housebreakers, whoever they may have been, and it is thought that the boys in the party became crazed by the stimulants to which they were not accustomed.

One of the defendants, and he is among the eldest of the five, is a graduate in Arts in Toronto University, and was taking a course in Pedagogy to qualify himself for the teaching profession.

Offer to Settle.

It is said that the parents of the young men have offered to make restitution, so far as possible, and to pay for the damage done the residence provided that the proceedings be dropped or the defendants be at least allowed to go on suspended sentence. Provincial officers, however, are not likely to listen to such proposals.

Since this trouble started there has been a change in the office of the chief of police here, J. M. Spencer having recently been appointd. He had however nothing to do with the arrests.

Native of Campbellford.

Provincial Officer Boyd, who worked on the case from the beginning is establishing a reputation as an energetic and successful detective. He is a native of Campbellford, where his mother still resides, and where he lived until he went overseas with the aviation corps early in the war On his return to Canada he secured an appointment on the Provincial force, being first stationed at Bowmanville. He was later transferred to Port Hope, his present headquarters.

WAS ALMOST A NERVOUS WRECK

Says Wincarnis Restored Her Health

"Ten months ago I began to lose my strength. My household duties became burdensome. I felt exhausted after the slightest exertion. Then my nerves got so bad that at the slightest noise I used to tremble, my legs would shake and my heart beat violently causing me to gasp for breath. One afternoon a friend called to see me and she was shocked at my pitiable condition. She went out and bought a bottle of 'Wincarnis' and gave me a dose right away. I continued taking 'Wincarnis' three times a day and its effect has been almost miraculous. Gradually but surely my strength came back, a color came into my cheeks, my nerves grew steady and it seemed as if I had taken a new lease on life. Today I am a very happy woman because I am well."

STEAMER DELAYED BY SMOKE FUMES

The Steamer Minnedosa Enters Complaint Regarding Fumes From Pulp and Paper Mills.

MONTREAL, May 9.— (Canadian-Press) — Smoke fumes arising from the pulp and paper mills in the vicinity of Three Rivers caused a delay of two hours to the Canadian Pacific liner Minnedosa and brought a vigorous complaint from her master, Captain Noratio Sibbons when he docked his ship here at noon yesterday. The Minnedosa was first of all forced to anchor at midnight for five hours at Port St. Francis, five miles above Three Rivers, owing to the fact that the laying of gas buoys had not been completed. The delay was lengthened by another two hours when the smoke fumes poured over the river. The result was that the ship docked here two hours late.

Captain Sibbons said that last summer on one occasion a whole night was lost for the same reason.

BILL WOULD BAR HEREDITARY TITLES

Aristocratic Labor Member Introduced Bill to Terminate Titles, Yesterday.

LONDON, May 9. — (Canadian Press Cable) — Arthur Ponsonby, the labor member for Brightside (Sheffield) who is himself of aristocratic lineage introduced a bill in the House of Commons yesterday which is designed to terminate hereditary titles, enabling the present peers to renounce their titles by deed of poll and barring heirs and heiress born after the passage of the bill from succession to titles.

Mr. Ponsonby, in introducing his bill expressed the opinion that many peers would take advantage of the first provision, especially those who found high-sounding titles an embarrassment and also peers of ancient lineage who might be dissatisfied with the numerous colleagues presented to them in the last few years. Everyone agreed, said Mr. Ponsonby that the peerage was becoming grotesque and when the labor party came into office, neither for party purposes nor public services would they confer heriditary honors.

Although it may safely be predicted that the bill will not travel far on its parliamentary journey, it is expressive of a movement which has recently become pronounced in both labor and liberal circles. The liberals however generally prefer other methods for achieving their object, namely by a downward step with every succession. Thus the son of a Duke would become a Marquis on his father's death and the son of a Marquis would become an Earl and so on until distinction except in the case, where a holder by his own merit regains his father's rank.

NEWS FROM CAVAN AND THE DISTRICT

CAVAN, May 9.—Excavating for the gymnasium basement of the new wing which is being added to the Millbrook Continuation School, is completed and the cement work started.

The scholars are hard at work under their efficient staff of teachers all keeping in vision the June Examinations. Last year the Continuation Forms took a very creditable stand, when compared, according to numbers with other schools. This year there is every promise that under the able direction of Miss Money and Miss Hood, they will do as well, if not a little better this year.

Preparing for Baseball

The baseball season is at hand and now that the rush of spring work is somewhat over, rural sections are preparing to share in the sports. A meeting was called at the Presbyterian Manse, Springville, on Friday May 4, with a view to forming a League composed of Fraserville, Springville, Ebenezer, Mount Pleasant and Cavanville teams. There was not much business done, however, as the attendance was not as large as hoped for. Rev. I. Craw and Rev Mr. Patterson are interested in providing good healthy sport for the boys.

Representatives of the juniors of Millbrook, Frazerville and Cavan Centre met in the Millbrook public library, after school hours, May 7, to consider forming a junior league.

ORLAND ORGANIZES A BASEBALL CLUB

Throws Hat in Ring in Reorganized Northumberland League.

ORLAND, May 9 — The Orland Club, one of the three baby members of the re-organised Northumberland Baseball League, has elected the following officers:

First game on the home grounds will be played with Colborne on the opening day of the League season, 24th May. The team will also be at home on the 24th of May, Harwood being the opposing nine on the holiday.

W. J. Latimer, leading merchant here, is regarded as the father of baseball in Orland, having always been an enthusiastic supporter of the game. He owns the diamond, and this year a new agreement, mutually satisfactory, has been made between Mr. Latimer and the officers of the club. He is to allow the team the use of the diamond free of charge, and, besides, is to purchase at his own expense, the uniforms, bats, balls, and all the other equipment required, besides looking after the advertising of the games. In return, all the receipts go to him.

Captain-Manager Belford has always played second base, and will hold down that corner again for the season of 1923.

Last year the Orlands met all the amateur teams in the district, and victory came so easy to them that they had either to drop out of the game or get into faster company. This accounts for their entry into the Northumberland League.

While nearly all of the teams in the district finished in debt in 1922, Orland came through with a surplus of $90.00.

DRURY TO VISIT CAMPBELLFORD

Makes Date for June 7 — Conservatives Plan for Organizing Their Forces

CAMPPBELLFORD, May 9. — Major Belford, of Codrington, Conservative candidate for the Legislature in Northumberland East, was in town yesterday and spent the major portion of his visit in consultation with Robert Lowery vice-president for Campbellford, and R. Walker, of Warkworth, secretary of the Conservative Association in the riding.

Plans for organising the party forces in the different sub-divisions were discussed, but no announcement was made as to campaign meetings to be held here.

Drury Here on 7th June.

Wesley Montgomery, U.F.O. representative from this riding for the past four years, has returned to his home at Brighton since the prorogation of the Legislature, and is spending considerable time on his farm near Hinton. Mr. Montgomery has opened an office on Main Street, Brighton, and from there will direct his campaign.

Mr. Montgomery has sent word here that Premier Drury is billed to speak in Campbellford on 7th June. He suggests that one of the rinks be secured for the meeting, as speaking in the open-air is as a rule a heavy strain upon a campaigner who, like the Premier, will be addressing two or more gatherings every day.

Minister of Highways Biggs is expected to address a meeting in Brighton in the interests of Mr. Montgomery's candidature.

It is the general opinion that there will be no Liberal candidate in the field.

A Correction.

A typographical error in the report the meeting of the Campbellford Council, as published in The Examiner yesterday, does an injustice to Reeve Anderson. When the Council decided to issue the High School debentures, Reeve Anderson said that he hoped the controversy would now cease. The type made him say that he hoped the controversy would not cease.

Reeve Anderson is one of the last men in Campbellford to continue an argument when obviously there is nothing to be gained by pursuing it, and his desire that harmony be restored is heartily echoed by the citizens who have wearied of a difference of opinion that has finally been settled by the majority.

KING AND QUEEN VISIT THE POPE

A Solemn State Ceremony Marked the Occasion.

(By Camillo Cainfarro)

ROME, May 9.—(United Press). —King George and Queen Mary of Britain paid their official visit to Pope Pius XI at the Vatican to-day Solemn state ceremony marking the occasion.

At ten thirty this morning the King and Queen drove from the Quirinal where they are staying as the guests of the King and Queen of Italy to the Palazo Patrini on the Via San Nicola da Tolentino, which has been placed at the disposal of the British Envoy to the Holy See, as a temporary legation for this week.

Vatican etiquette would have been offensed if the royal visitors had driven straight from the Quirinal with which the Vatican has no official dealings so that by diplomatic means the British sovereigns were able to drive from 'British Territory' and be in a position to receive the return visits afterwards of high Vatican officials.

Punctuality on the hour set three Vatican automobiles arrived at the Palazo Patrini and the King and Queen entered accompanied by their personal staff, the British Envoy and First Secretary of Legation Dormer. Upon their arrival at the Vatican, the papal Swiss guard rendered honors, trumpeters sounding a fanfare and Prince Alessandro Ruspoli, Grand Master of the Sacred Hospice, stepped forward to open the door of the royal motor.

Their Majesties were immediately greeted by Monsignor Riccardo De Samper, the Papal Major Domo, attended by an imposing staff.

Four Bussolanti or doorkeepers, a picket of the Swiss Guards, and half a dozen grooms were on duty with this party.

Elevators not being considered suitable for state sentries, King George and Queen Mary walked up the stairs to the first landing, solemnly escorted by the Major Domo and his staff.

The royal party then entered the Papal presence in the Sala Del Trono etto or throne room.

After preliminary greetings His Holiness invited his guest to be seated onthe state chairs, which had been placed in a semi-circle around that of the Pope.

Following a private interview, the royal and legation staffs were presented to the Pope, and the visit then ended.

The royal procession was again formed as before, and a state visit was paid to Cardinal Gasparri, Secretary of State.

The party then returned with the same ceremonial to the waiting automobile, driving back to the Palazo Patrini.

Shortly after their return Cardinal Gasparri arrived to repay the official visit. His Eminence remaining to the luncheon given by Envoy Russel in honour of his sovereigns' visit.

SECOND READING OF COMBINES BILL PASSES COMMONS

Division Gave Government Largest Majority of the Session, 117— Throw Light Into the Dark Recesses of Business.

OTTAWA, May 9, Canadian Press —By a majority of 117, the largest majority of the session, the House last night gave the second reading to the combines bill. The division came after two full days of debate. In the vote all the Liberals and all the progressives voted for the bill. Of the Conservatives W. F. Maclean of South York alone voted for the bill. The remainder voted against, the result being, for 138, against 21, majority for 117.

The Prime Minister closing the debate, declared the legislation would provide means of letting light into the dark recesses of business. Once the public knew the facts it could through Parliament and other means apply the remedy. Previously Hon. J. B. M. Baxter for the Conservatives declared that it was of no use to represent to the people that a wonderful panacea had been discovered, "for I am sure that they are in for another disillusionment."

There was passing reference to the sugar combine. To loud progressive cheers W. F. Maclean, Conservative of South York urged that those behind the combine in Montreal be notified that if they had not afforded some relief by Friday the tariff would be cut. If that did no good he would have the Royal Bank and the Bank of Nova Scotia (which he said were behind the sugar trust) notified that if nothing were done, facilities for rediscount would be taken away. Finally if nothing still were done, Mr. Maclean would have the Manufacturers Association informed that the tariff on other items would be reduced.

Much has been said about an alleged newspaper monopoly. A monopoly of this sort was one of the most dangerous that could possibly exist in a civilized country. Newspapers were the only means of informing the people of developments and a dependable press was necessary to the country. Mr. Forke referred to the plank in the Progressive platform requiring the publication of names of those who owned and controlled stock in newspapers. This, he said, would show who was dictating the news and editorial policies of those papers.

The Progressives had been criticized last year in asking for a wheat board on the ground that they were seeking a monopoly of wheat marketing. The only reason for seeking this was in order to stabilize the price so that the farmer might reap some of the benefit. It would not have added a cent to the price of wheat in England but it would have made possible stabilization of the flow of grain in order that best prices for the farmers might be secured.

The present bill was a move in the right direction. Mr. Forke believed in free trade as the right principle but it must be remembered that at the present time Canada was up against a condition and not a theory. She must have revenue and as long as the tariff was used only as a means of securing revenue there was not so much criticism of it as there would be under other conditions.

There had been reference to a shipping combine acting against cattle shippers. Mr. Forke believed that there was such an organization taking the last possible cent out of the cattle business. There was a serious loss of morale amongst farmers who as a rule were an optimistic class. However, they found that whether they had a big crop or a small one they only secured a bare living. They and the laboring classes had as much right to public concern as had business.

Mr. Forke declared he would support the bill. He did not believe it would cure all of the present evils which could only be cured when trade was allowed to flow freely in all directions. The tariff was an infinitisemal evil compared to the evils which flowed from it. It made possible the things which the present bill were hitting at. Criticizing Mr. Meighen's opposition to the bill he said the leader of the opposition had presented a case which was peculiarly weak and lacking in conviction.

A. R. McMaster (Liberal, Brome) was also in favor of the bill as a step in the proper direction. There was a need for such legislation as all parties in the House were agreed.

Our economic and industrial life was honeycombed with combines and rings of all sorts. It was said that all combines were not bad. There might be that rara avis, a beneficial combine, a gathering of manufacturers bent upon reducing production costs and passing the reduction to the consumer.

T. L. Church (Conservative, North Toronto), stated that Canada today was the happy hunting ground for American trusts and combines. The Minister of Labor, while campaigning in the country, had made extravagant statements as to what he would do to combines if elected. Why was he not taking hold of these big interests? Big American companies running restaurants were controlled in the United States but their Canadian branches were subject to no control. Mr. Church did not believe that the bill before the House would be effective, before the officers to be appointed under it got into action some lawyer would discover a flaw in the legislation, carry the case to the Privy Council and have it declared ultra vires of this parliament. He suggested that there should be some practical legislation such as was in force in the United States. In that country, they had obtained results in the control of large organization of capital.

Mr. Church suggested an amendment which, he said he proposed to move when the bill got into committee. It provided that any grand jury duly and lawfully convened in any province "may exercise as respects any person or property within such province any power which by this act may be exercised by the registrar or any commission appointed under this act without obligation however, to report to any minister of the Crown and with power to make a presentment in accord with the facts found by it."

TWO SERMONS THAT HELD THE INTEREST

Large Congregations at Mark Street Methodist Church—Good Music.

(Contributed)

The services last Sabbath shall not soon be forgotten, being characterized by great spiritual power. There were the largest number of communicants in years, about one hundred partaking of the Sacrament. The choir did excellent work in the morning, and were assisted by Rev. and Mrs. Ross, who sang a duet. Also, the Male Voice Chorus delighted the people in the evening.

"Bridging the Chasm," was the subject of the morning sermon and was an exposition of the passage of Scripture taken from Romans V, 11, "By whom we have now received the Atonement." The following is an outline of the discourse. We believe that mighty mountains ranges have been flung aloft by the forces of nature in a state of convulsion. Canyons, chasms, gorges and even the unfathomed deeps of the ocean, have been torn out by nature's mighty forces in action.

If we carry this thought into the spiritual realm, we find effects that demand some great spiritual force as their primary cause. Great spiritual cataclysms have torn asunder the peace of God's spiritual empire; sometime and somewhere in the dim vista of the far away past. Sin is here, and yet there is in the world some strange power that works for truth and righteousness. We must trace the conflict of right against wrong, back beyond the history of this world. We believe that there was war in heaven between good and evil, long before the conflict entered the Eden of God. There was a mighty rupture between the celestial intelligences, when angel fought with angel, and the legions who kept not their first estate, were hurled as Milton puts it, "nine days downward" into hell. Thus a great gulf was formed between these spiritual forces, which may not be bridged; for how can Satan even be reconciled to God? When sin entered this world a great chasm was torn out between God and Man, which has been spared by God's wonderous plan of redemption.

The mists of doubt form and thicken and melt above the gulf of sin, but the gulf itself remains. Niagara's fearful gorge remains, when the mists have cleared away. The fogs of doubt come and go, increase and diminish, as generations rise and fall, and as the ages pass. It has always been so, and ever will remain. Through the gathering mists of doubt, men will cling to the tender beliefs of childhood, and their thoughts will ever wander back to their mother's God. But I am to consider the eternal chasm that is fixed between man and God by sin, and how this gorge has been bridged. The great gulf rolls between God and man, light and darkness, peace and war, love and hate, life and death, joy and sorrow, the harmony of heaven, and the discord and turmoil of earth. But the hideous gorge has been spared by God's own plan.

The Atonement.

No man can define the Atonement. Our poor language of earth fails to convey its full meaning. It begins with the love of God, and who shall define that eternal love. The Son of God would have come into the world to reveal this love, whether man had sinned or not. The presence of sin in the world has given to the incarnation the form of Atonement. It is love put to the test, overcoming obstacles; it is love militant, eternal, and victorious. It covers the whole range between man and God, and bridges the gorge between outraged justice on the one side, and a race of rebels on the other. A man cannot comprehend the Atonement any further than his personal needs are realized by himself. This need arises out of a sense of sin. There is the shame of impurity, the pain of bondage, the sense of guilt, and the hope of mercy. Every element in the nature of God and in the nature of man is touched by this wonderful provision.

The Chasm Bridged.

"How did they get that great bridge across that mighty gorge?" Said a boy, as he stood mid the maddening roar of the turbulant waters of the Niagara rapids. "Well my boy," said the father, "one day a man put up a kite when the breeze was blowing across the chasm. There was a man on the other side of the river who caught the string when the kite fell with the wind. A stronger cord was then draw across, then a fine wire, and then a corser wire, and then a small cable. A larger cable and then part of the bridge."

How was the chasm between God and man bridged? Nothing earthly could do it. First an angel carried a promise across—"the seed of woman shall bruise the serpent's head." Then a thin line of prophecy, then prophetic cables, and in due time the human and Divine Christ formed a beautiful, shining way from earth to heaven, and from man to God, but it cost Him His Life.

Reconciliation Through Christ.

Atonements have been going on in the world from the beginning, between man and man, and between God and man. There are three elements in every reconciliation, viz: an offence committed, the one who offends, and the mediator who always suffers more or less. There must also be an element of love. How shall enemies come together without love? The love of the great English or American heart may yet join the hand of France and Germany. We can tell? Jesus is that great element of love that sufferers to bring the world to God. The bleeding, crucified and exalted Christ has bridged the gulf for sinful men. A farmer drove into town with a very spirited team of horses hitched to a wagon. As he alighted

FIRST SAIL BOAT PASSES THROUGH PANAMA CANAL

BALBAO HEIGHTS, Canal Zon, May 9 (Associated Press).—An 18-foot canoe, flying a main sail and a jib, enjoys the distinction of being the first sailing craft of any description to pass through the Panama Canal under the power of her canyas.

The little vessel, manned by Lieutenant Miller, of the U.S. Navy, and H. J. Grieser, a swimming instructor, who had previously rowed, paddled and piloted a motor boat through the canal started at Cristobal, on the Atlantic side of the cut, at 6 a.m., and docked the same evening at Balbao, on the Pacific, at 8.45.

The frail craft squeezed her way into the great locks alongside of huge steel freighters, was raised or lowered to the level of the next lock, and passed on to repeat the process until she had negotiated the entire lock system. The tolls were 72 cents.

Letter From Mr. J. H. Burnham

To Editor of THE EXAMINER:

Sir,—Whilst others are talking politics I am presuming to talk morals. On the eve of a general election it is perhaps well for us to give thought for a moment to our spiritual condition. In previous letters I set out the scandalous fact that Drury has sold out the prohibitionists to the grape growers of Western Ontario from which comes a highly intoxicating wine, permitted by the O. T. A.

We are living, therefore, in an atmosphere of lies, of gross deception, of common, despicable trickery. So much for our moral condition. I showed the necessity of having this state of affairs set right and of applying the principle of reform by state laws which we have adopted to other things such as the wholesale pollution of girlhood in motor cars, etc. I now want to call attention to the fact that the bill for face powder, etc., on this continent, exceeds our total expenditure for religion and education combined. Besides face powder (amongst men, at any rate) is used to make them appear more beautiful than they are, which is another example of the lies we love to live in. Then take gambling.

The gambling craze has produced more suicides than all other known pursuits put together. We must stop this madness, even if we have to put everybody in gaol and keep them there. Then, too, notwithstanding the wholly immeasurable gifts of the medical profession to mankind, they make us drunk with alcoholic drugs when they operate upon us and we are out these days to stop drunkenness, no matter what the excuse. In short, we must get good, honest prohibition because the people want it and then we must apply it to all outstanding evils. The report of the Drury Liquor Commission says that the grape growers of Western Ontario do not violate the act. That is true. The act permits the manufacture of very strong alcoholic liquor. That is what I maintained. The Globe quotes the replies of manufacturers and others to the Drury questionnaire re prohibition and 75 per cent. of the replies agree that prohibition produces greater efficiency and greater production. So does peonage in the Southern States for that matter, but the culling out of divorce, gambling, liquor, motor debauches, family quarrels and family laziness and inefficiency by the application of police methods will increase the production still further.

Liberty begets all these crimes and sins, and it now largely admitted that the way to abolish sin and crime is to abolish liberty. We began by abolishing the liberty of the innocent drinker in order that the guilty might no longer have the opportunity of excess. The same principle, of course, applies to all other sins such as I have attempted to enumerate. The liberty of the franchise which has been so freely extended has let in a vast horde of ignorant and unjust, both male and female, it is alleged. I am not in favor as some are of taking away this privilege. If we do we will soon have no men and women but things—mere wooden images. It was that fact, of course, that the Almighty recognized when He made men individually and not collectively morally responsible.

Still many do not believe in that now and ——— as they are tearing up the commandments and the inspiration of the Bible to provide wood for their own new ideas and reforms and platforms, so we must, I suppose, realize that the individual is now the slave of the state. He even, though he sin not, has no rights as against the state. Drury's thirteenth commission that an hotels has just reported and its report lays it down flatly that prohibition does away with liberty, but that the interests of the majority demand it." And this was the doctrine of the Middle Ages. After all, we are learning nothing new. We are going back to the time when the struggle for liberty began.

All this time we have been dreaming the wrong dream and the liberty of the just, good man was merely a myth, a nightmare. The individual, being now the slave of the state, may soon become the slave of those who rule the state. However, we all agree that prohibition of liquor and crime generally must be the grand aim of us all henceforth, no matter what else happens.

J. H. Burnham.

Facts about non-skid tires on all four wheels

THE dream of every tire engineer has been to produce a tire with the traction of a non-skid tread combined with the steering ease of a plain tread.

In Dominion Royal Cord Tires that combination is achieved.

On the rear wheels Dominion Royal Cords give all the traction and holding power against side slip that a non-skid tread can give.

On the front wheels the Dominion Royal Cord tread runs straight and true without "climbing" ruts or crowned road bed.

You can increase your mileage by the interchange of tires, front to rear, when the latter become worn; you have no steering trouble and you have the better appearance of a uniform set of tires.

To these advantages add the extra dependability and super service—without extra cost—which you get in Dominion Tires.

AFTER BABY COMES

Strength Often Returns Slowly

Mothers May Depend Upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Restore a Normal Condition

Many, many letters similar to the following recommend the Vegetable Compound as a wonderful medicine for bringing the mother back to normal health and stsength.

It is an excellent restorative, contains no harmful drugs and may be taken in safety by a nursing mother.

Thousands of mothers who have regained their strength by taking it are its best recommendation. Why not take it yourself?

Could Not Gain Strength

Bury, Quebec.—"I have had great help from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am a different woman now. I was very sickly before my first child was born. I did not get my strength back afterwards, and he did not stay with us long. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for three months before my second child was born, and have taken it occasionally ever since. My doctor had said that medicine would not do me much good, but my nurse wished me to try the Vegetable Compound, so I did. I do not go without having it in the house now and I am looking well and feeling fine. I do all my work, sewing and all."—Mrs. JOHN SIMPSON, Box 566, Bury, Quebec.

Oshawa, Ont.—"After my second child was born I was sick and tired all the time so I could not do my own housework. I picked up one of your little books and read it and then I tried some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It seemed to help me quite a bit and I felt much better after I had taken the Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I thank you for your help and I am taking your medicines right along. If any woman wants to write to me I will tell her the same."—Mrs. J. MCGINN, 300 Courcellette Avenue, Oshawa, Ontario.

Before My Baby Came

Vancouver, B. C.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my baby came as I was suffering from neuralgia pains. I had not been taking anything for these pains because I thought there was nothing I could do, but when I read about the Vegetable Compound in the 'Vancouver Daily Province' I began taking it; and of two things I am sure—that I had an easier time when the baby came and that it is the best medicine ever. I recommend it to all my friends who suffer as I did, and you can use my letter as a testimonial."—MRS. JOSEPH BLACKMAN, 225 9th St. West, Vancouver, B. C.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

NORMAL CHILDREN.

There is no greater joy for a mother than to know that her child is normal in every particular. Her joy is increased when her baby is better than the average, that undeniable pride in the fact that he walked when he was 11 months old when her neighbor's baby was still only able to creep; when he exhibited teeth at 4 months when her sister-in-law's baby had none at 7 months. In such small things do we find content.

Just what is normal and what is so abnormal as to leave room for worry? The average baby may have one tooth at 5 months and six teeth by the time he is 1 year old. Most babies who have no setbacks and have a good nourishing food supply do have teeth at this age. But the baby can be normal without having six teeth at one year, but HE SHOULD HAVE ONE at least. If he hasn't the mother may quite safely conclude that his diet does not contain the right elements to make teeth and not that he isn't teething because his father didn't. Perhaps the same thing that kept his father from having teeth at a normal time is acting on the baby. Habits of feeding the baby as grandma did, for instance.

Some mothers have asked me if giving lime water and lime tablets would help to stimulate teeth. It is a generally accepted fact that lime in this form does not act as does the lime in milk, vegetables and fruits. This latter "organic" form of lime, that found in growing foods is the kind which the baby should have to supply his calcium needs.

There is a vast difference in the time limits within which baby's walk. A thin, active baby may be crawling around and walking at a year, while the fat, heavy baby may be much longer in getting the courage to walk. About sixteen months may be taken as the latest date at which the most children should walk. Much later than this would indicate that there is something which had better be looked into. Has he rickets? Are his ankles and legs strong enough to bear his weight? Is his diet right? One need not worry—but one should investigate and not just lazily decide that he'll outgrow it.

Talking varies in different children. Sometimes the child in a large family will be slow to talk because at his slightest whimper his wishes are gratified. He finds no real reason for expressing his needs verbally, since they fly to him on magic wings. The child who does not talk at two years is not abnormal, though some mothers begin to worry then—but if he is not speaking a word at 3 years it is well to see if his hearing is good.

As a last warning don't be too anxious when the baby doesn't fit right into the groove and differs somewhat but do be solicitious if he varies greatly from the normal.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS' NEW LIMITED TRAINS BETWEEN TORONTO AND MONTREAL.

The Canadian National announce two new limited night trains will be operated between Toronto and Montreal, commencing Sunday, May 13th.

Already the Canadian National trains between Toronto and Montreal are taxed to capacity and the introduction of the new ones will eliminate any congestion which naturally would result from the opening of navigation on the St. Lawrence route.

Apart from providing additional accommodation for passengers, the new night Limited train to Montreal will prove to be a boon to travellers who must regulate their arrival in the two cities according to the daylight savings clock.

One train will leave Toronto at 9:45 o'clock, standard time, or 10:45 o'clock daylight saving time, and will arrive in Montreal at 6:45 a.m., standard time or 7:45 o'clock daylight saving time. The train from Montreal will leave for Toronto at 9.30 p.m., standard time, or one hour later on daylight saving time, and will arrive in Toronto at 6:20 in the morning standard, 7:20 daylight saving time. This service will provide an additional fast train over the well known double track route between the two important Canadian cities.

The Canadian National Railways will have six trains operating nightly between the two cities. Two other trains leave Toronto at 8:30 and 11 o'clock in the evening daily, arriving at Montreal respectively at 7:10 and 7:30 o'clock, standard time, in the morning; while leaving from Montreal are two more trains, one at 7:30 and the other at 11:00 o'clock at night, reaching Toronto the next morning at 6 o'clock and 7:30 standard time. The equipment of all six trains is of the most modern type and the locomotive hauling these trains the largest in Canada.

Millbrook Comment.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Burnham and daughter, Dorothy, motored from Peterboro on Sunday and were guests of his mother, Mrs. E. S. Burnham.

Rev. S. T. Tucker, who is in Toronto, this wek attending to business connected with his late father's estate, received word on Tuesday that his uncle, Mr. Benjamin Godkin, only remaining brother of his mother, the late Mrs. (Reverend) William Tucker, had passed away suddenly at his home in Bay City, Mich. Deceased had never married. Rev. W. B. Tucker of Brighton, Rev. S. T. Tucker, Millbrook and their only sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Morton Gallagher of Bay City, will attend the funeral which will probably take place on Thursday. The late Mr. Godkin was in his 89th year just six month younger than his brother-in-law, Rev. W. Tucker, whose death occurred on Thursday of last week.

TITLED BRITISH WOMEN ADVERTISE FOR LODGERS

LONDON, May 9.—(Associated Press).—One of the significant signs of the times is the number of titled women who are taking boarders because they are hard up. They are advertising for them, too, but they do not call them "boarders."

They refer to them as "paying guests"—a term which, it is said, has not yet obtained currency in America.

There is no real difference between "boarders" and "paying guests" except that the latter are charged more. Boarders are regarded as quite vulgar, while paying guests are assumed to be people of some social position.

One titled lady advertises that she has a wide circle of titled people among her friends and acquaintances to whom she will introduce "paying guests" and that nobody will know they are not her own particular friends. It is added in the advertisement that "liberal terms" are "expected."

"A lady of title," runs another advertisement, will accept the chaperonage of a few young ladies of good breeding for whom she will guarantee "exceptional social advantages" and "will organize dances, parties and entertainments."

Another advertisement runs, "A lady of title who used to entertain on a lavish scale before the war but is no longer able to indulge her fondness for hospitality on such a generous scale as formerly, will receive some highly recommended paying guests at large and magnificently furnished ancestral mansion standing in midst of beautiful and extensive estate. Only people who have been accustomed to moving in the best society will be received."

That is one way of hinting that the rates charged will be considerably more than at a first-class hotel.

One advertisement that appeared recently read: "A few American young ladies whose parents can appreciate value of a refined and cultivated English accent received as paying guests by two ladies of title who will instruct them in the manners and deportment of people who move in the best English society. References exchanged."

OUTRAGE BY CHINESE ON CANADIAN CITIZEN

TIENTSIN, China, May 9.—(Canadian Press.)— A Canadian citizen named Lowe was the victim of a second outrage which followed close upon the raiding of the Peking express by bandits near Suchow on Sunday.

Mr. Lowe was travelling to Shanghai Monday night, when he was pulled from the train by Chinese civilians, beaten, bound and carried away. This outrage occurred on the Tsinpu railway line.

Mr. Lowe was later released through the efforts of the British consul. Reports state that the Chinese police were standing near when he was pulled from the train by a mob, but they made no effort to release him or interfere with the ruffians who perpetrated the outrage.

NEWSPAPER DIRECTORY

The A. McKim Limited Advertising Agency has just issued the 1923 Canadian Newspaper Directory. This is the sixteenth edition of this comprehensive directory of Canadian Publications and Gazetteer. The first edition was published in 1892 when many Canadian papers, now recognized as great influences in moulding the country's destiny, were weak struggling enterprises. The Canadian Newspaper Directory has kept step with the great advance made by Canadian publications. Each edition has been in advance of the previous issue. New features have been introduced, geographical, physical and commercial. In fact the book serves as a commercial gazetteer for all Canada and is on the desk of practically every national advertiser.

JOHNS, Nfld., May 9.—(Canadian Press.)—Squire's government last night had a substantial majority in election results tabulated to date in general election called for submission of plan in connection with financing of pulp and paper industry in colony. Of thirty-five seats the government has now seventeen, Opposition ten and the remainder have not yet been heard from.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

John Parker turned gravely to his wife. "Old hon," he murmured softly, "Don Mike Farrel is a pinch-bug. He pinched Kay's chin during a mental lapse; then he remembered he was still under my thumb and he cursed himself for a sky-blue idiot."

"Oh, John, dear, I'm so glad." There were tears in Mrs. Parker's eyes. "Aren't you, John?"

"No, I'm not," he replied savagely. "I think it's an outrage and I'd speak to Farrel about it if it were not apparent nobody realizes more keenly than does he the utter impossibility of permitting his fancy to wander in that direction."

"John Parker, you're a hard-hearted man," she cried, and left him in high dudgeon, to disappear into the garden. As the gate closed behind her, John Parker drew forth his pocket book and abstracted from it a hundred-dollar bill, which he handed to Pablo Artelan.

"We have had our little differences, Pablo," he informed that astounded individual, "but we're gradually working around toward a true spirit of brotherly love. In the language of the classic, Pablo, I'm here to tell the cock-eyed world that you're one good Indian."

Pablo swept his old sombrero to the ground. "Gracias, senor, mille gracias, he murmured, and shuffled away with his prize.

Verily, the ways of this Gringo were many and mysterious. To-day one hated him; to-morrow——

"There is no doubt about it," Pablo soliloquized, "it is better to be the head of a mouse than the tail of a lion!"

CHAPTER XXX.

The following day Don Mike, Pablo and the latter's male relatives, who had so mysteriously appeared on the premises, were early aborse, driving to El Toro the three-hundred-odd head of cattle of all ages and sizes rounded up on the Palomar. The cattle were corraled at a ranch half-way to El Toro the first night, and there watered and fed; the following night they were in the cattle pens at El Toro, and the following day Farrel loaded them aboard the cars and shipped them out to Los Angeles, accompanying the shipment personally. Two days later he was back on the ranch, and the Parkers noticed that his exuberant spirits had not in the least subsided.

"I'd give a ripe peach to know what that fellow is up to," John Parker complained. "Confidentially, I've had him shadowed from the moment he arrived in Los Angeles until the moment he returnd to El Toro and started back for the ranch. He has conferred with nobody except the stock-yard people. Nevertheless, he has a hen on."

"Yes, and that hen will hatch a young bald-headed eagle to scratch your eyes out," his daughter reminded him, whereat he chuckled.

"Old Bill Conway's drilling away at his dam-site," he volunteered presently, "and his suit against me for damages, due to breech of contract, is set for trial so far down Judge Morton's calendar that the old judge will have to use a telescope to find it. However, I shouldn't charge the judge with a lack of interest in my affairs, for he has rendered a judgment in my favor in the matter of that mortgage foreclosure and announced from the bench that if this judgment doesn't stick he'll throw the case out of court the next time it is presented for trial. I wonder what Farrel's next move will be?"

"I heard him announce that he was going to get ready for the fiesta," Kay replied.

For two weeks he was busy harrowing, disking and rolling the old race-track; he repainted the weather-beaten poles and reshingled the judge's stand; he repaired the fence and installed an Australian starting-gate, dug a pit for the barbecue and brought forth, repaired and set up under the oaks close to the race-tracks, thirty long wooden tables at which, in an elder and more romantic day, the entire countryside, as guests of the Farrels and Noriagas, had gathered to feast. Farrel worked hard and saw but little of his guestse, xcept at meal-times; he retired somewhat early each night and, insofar as his guests could note, he presented a most commendable example of a young man whose sole interest in life lay in his work.

"When do you plan to give your fiesta, Miguel?" Kay inquired one evening as they sat, according to custom, on the veranda.

Most every one who realizes how effective Kellogg's Bran is for the permanent relief of constipation has their own particular way of serving this wonderful cereal. Most families eat it as a cereal with milk or cream. Others sprinkle it on their favorite hot or cold cereal. Every one enjoys its nut-like flavor!

If you are cooking a hot cereal try this method:—Measure off two tablespoonfuls for each member of the family. Mix it with the cereal and cook as you always cook the cereal.

Kellogg's Bran is scientifically prepared and ready to eat, but its regulatory powers are in no way impaired if you cook it with other cereals.

Kellogg's Bran has won the friendly recommendation of physicians because it does give prompt and permanent relief from mild or chronic constipation and because it can be eaten without forming a habit. Again, Kellogg's Bran will free you from drastic, dangerous cathartics.

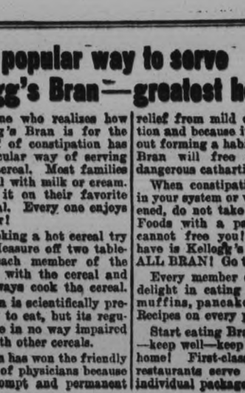
When constipation conditions exist in your system or when you are threatened, do not take half-way measures. Foods with a partial bran content cannot free you! What you must have is Kellogg's Bran because it is ALL BRAN! Go the limit; get relief!

Every member of your family will delight in eating Bran raisin bread, muffins, pancakes, macaroons, etc. Recipes on every package.

Start eating Bran to-day! Get well—keep well—keep disease out of your home! First-class hotels, clubs and restaurants serve Kellogg's Bran in individual packages. All grocers.

G. N. GORDON IN THE SPOTLIGHT

The Secretary of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce asked for the most characteristic thing about his city, said: "The people of Seattle get what they git after." The Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committee of the House of Commons is recorded as having been born at Brighton, Ont. He must have come from Seattle. To become Deputy Speaker after only one session in Parliament is, in its way, as astonishing a performance as the offer of the Premiership to Pitt when he was twenty-three. Pitt had a great name at a time when it was too often assumed that the name was the standard of the man. He had been trained to the mentality of Parliament by the greatest Parliamentary force of that age. But Newcombe Gordon went to Ottawa in February, 1921, with a political reputation that had been made in a bewildering by-election, and the reputation was rather that of a swashbuckling D'Artignan of the hustings than of the student of rules of order and the calmly restrained, the grave and reverend seigneurs schooled and fitted to preside over portentous debates. In a year his party was in office, though scarcely in power. He had made his title clear to Peterborough, and when posts were distributed he named the Deputy Speakership for his own, and the Prime Minister was induced to affix his mark also, and Gordon got what he got after. He will get more, before he's very much older. The sharps say the Solicitor-Generalship next, and then, when there's another turnover of portfolios, he will get after and get the handiest one.



G. N. GORDON, K.C., M.P.

Gordon is not one of those fellows of whom it is said when they land preferment, "How on earth did he get it?" One look at his picture tells you a whole lot. He's not only a getafterer, and a getter, but he makes good when he has got. He's Peterborough's latest big man; and in his own sphere doesn't dread being mentioned in the same sentence with George A. Cox, Joseph Wesley Flavelle, E. R. Wood and—but what's the use of filling half a column with a catalogue of Peterborough men who have made Toronto famous.

* * *

That by-election, now, was Gordon's stunt. It was brought on by Ham Burnham's resignation on the ground that commoners elected to support a Union Government whose first, last, all-the-time business it was to win the war, had no business to go on sustaining another Government that had really ceased to be a union, and was not at war. There were five candidates, with Gordon the regular Liberal nominee. He inspired his own campaign, and showed that there can be a good deal of the showman and promiser about a modern electioneerer. As a promiser he could give Ned Macdonald any handicap and beat him in a canter. But misunderstand not—the Gordon promises had little or nothing to do with filthy lucre—they rested on the country's need for things to be done which no weak, incompetent reactionary administration like that in power could ever achieve. His orientations for the future were harmonious with his heraldings for the present. He used the billboards literally and without any suggestion that a sucking dove was dictating the copy. For instance, as you walked the city between meetings, you saw this in every conspicuous place:

Tomorrow Night.
Hear Charlie
Murphy of Ottawa,
The Man Who Makes Demosthenes
Look Like a
Piker.
Hicks Hall
Come One
Come All.

Some people thought Gordon the member would be like Gordon the candidate—a mighty rushing wind. He sat still listened much, said little, and felt a lot. Scenting an election before another opening ceremony, he participated somewhat frequently in debate towards the end of the session, rightly discerning that that was a good way in which to gird the armor on. Anyway, when the general election came his majority went up from twelve hundred to twenty-one hundred, and if he didn't discuss a portfolio with Premier King it wasn't because he was doubtful of re-election.

* * *

Gordon at forty-two became Deputy Speaker. He has been a success, first because of native ability, secondly because he has combined legal and public life. He was a Peterborough Alderman nine years, City Solicitor four, and on the Board of Education four. He taught school and was a reporter before becoming a lawyer. His wife was a Bulkley, of his native Brighton. He might have made a good golfer if he hadn't become devoted to the throttle and excursions to lakes and woods with Mrs. and the boy.

Gordon is a Liberal of more than electioneering quality. He has a characteristic which would excellently become some other Liberals who appear to think that the way to win the next election is to be at outs with people whose work helped them to lose the last. There were Liberals who did something to lose Peterborough to Ham Burnham in 1911. Gordon had too much political sense to be frigid to them. If he could have his way the Liberal party would be composed of Liberal-minded men and ditto women.—Toronto Star.

NOT IN CONDITION FOR MOTHERHOOD

So Report Physicians of Mrs. Cameron, Charged With Kidnapping.

TORONTO, May 9.—(Canadian Press.)—Mrs. M. Cameron, who was arrested last night on the charge of stealing another woman's baby from the maternity home, and who is now is the hospital, too ill to answer the charge against her in court today and the case was remanded for a week. Mrs. Cameron told the police when arrested that Dr. Hart and Dr. Frank Abbott had attended her when she was admitted to the maternity home. Dr. Hart, however, states that she was not in a fit condition to have a baby when she was admitted. The case was a peculiar one from a medical viewpoint, and he did not care to discuss the matter for publication.

In the course of an interview Mrs. Cameron at St. Michael's Hospital to-day is quoted as follows:

"It wasn't my baby, but my husband wanted a baby and I had gone to the hospital to have one. When my baby died I didn't want him to know and he thought the baby I brought home was really my own." Just before this statement she said that she thought the baby was hers and she didn't intend to do anything wrong. "Its own mother does not love it as much as I do," she said.

EMPLOYEE'S DEAL IN SHARES OF C.G.E.

Produced for Him Three Times Amount of His Investment.

How ten shares of C.G.E. stock yielded three times their investment for a young employee of the C. G. E. Company, is related by a friend to whom he recently reported the sale of his small holding. Shortly after he entered the employ of the company here, in the year before the war he bought ten shares of C.G.E. at $55 a share. He received the regular dividends and also participated in the various bonuses that were paid towards the close of the war and immediately afterwards. He moved to Flint, Michigan, and some time ago needed a little extra money to buy a home. He decided to cash his stock, and although C.G.E. had been around $80 a few months ago, this former employee disposed of his ten shares at the price of $110. The impression was left upon his friend that someone wanted the stock because it was only in a local communication that he mentioned his intention of selling. The price was double what he had paid, and the dividends and bonuses, he said, had also produced the purchase price.

BAND LOOKED AND PLAYED SMARTLY

"Home, Sweet Home" Centenary Fittingly Celebrated--Attendance Small.

Musically and sartorially the Peterborough Rangers' Band made a very favorable impression upon the fairly large audience that took part in the "Home, Sweet Home" centenary. The bandsmen wore their new uniforms of navy blue, brightened by the brass buttons and red shoulder straps. The programme demonstrated that the band is beginning the new season with a fine instrumental balance and assembled strength with accomplished soloists. The rendition of "Home, Sweet Home," which was also sung by Mr. Everett, was strikingly effective, but the attendance should have been larger for such an occasion.

LAST CAUCUS OF GOVT. FOLLOWERS

Discuss Questions of General Legislation and Organization.

TORONTO, May 9.— (Canadian Press.)— Government followers in the Legislature are holding their last caucus to-day at Parliament Buildings.

This morning matters of general legislation and organization were discussed. This afternoon the Premier will attend. Members are busy recommending their returning officers for the election and Provincial Secretary Nixon received a dozen or so recommendations this morning.

SUGGESTION CONCERNING PLANS FOR A SCHOOL

Citizen Suggests Offering Prizes For Competition. In Vogue Other Places.

A citizen who takes an interest in civic affairs suggests in connection with the plans for the proposed new school building that the School Board offer three prizes, the first to be one thousand dollars, the second seven hundred and fifty dollars and the third five hundred dollars for the three best plans submitted to a committee of competent judges.

Just recently a large Chicago newspaper offered substantial prizes for plans and specifications of a new building they were about to erect, and recently issued a pamphlet showing designs from all over the world that had been submitted to them through this manner.

The gentleman offering this suggestion states that if it was accepted it would save a great deal to the citizens as the estimated cost of such plans is in the neighborhood of $8,000.

Extols Sheiks of Desert

MRS. EDWARD S. JORDAN

By NORRIS W. QUINN.

CLEVELAND, May 9.—After having crossed the Sahara Desert on the swaying hump of a camel and having lived for weeks among the nomads of the sand wastes, Mrs. Edward S. Jordan, society woman, says the sheik craze isn't so foolish, after all!

"The real sheiks are magnificent specimens of manhood," says Mrs. Jordan. "Their features are handsome, their bodies excellently proportioned. And they are kindly, courteous, honorable, possess a fine feeling for romance and a delicate appreciation of poetry."

But from the untamed, hard-riding, hard-fighting sheik of the Sahara to the jazz-clothed, smooth-shaven, bell-trousered "sheik" of the American dance hall seems a far cry to Mrs. Jordan.

Is Society Leader.

Mrs Jordan is the wife of the president of a leading motor-car company. But, instead of spending her time over the society teacups, she'd rather fare forth with her friend, Mrs. Roger C. Perkins, to seek adventure in far places.

"The Sahara, I believe, is in many respects far inferior to our own Mojave Desert in California where I spent a season recently," says Mrs. Jordan. "The most colorful desert in the world is right here at home."

Mrs. Jordan and Mrs. Perkins were the only occidentals in their party on the Sahara. They were accompanied by eight Arabs and lived in tents throughout the journey.

Mrs. Jordan has the highest respect for the Mohamedan religion and its followers, but she believes the prophet's adherents in north Africa are better off under French rule than they would be under self-rule.

Praises French.

"The French colonial administration is excellent," says Mrs. Jordan. "The officials interfere in no way with the religion or national life of the governed people.

"I believe it is wrong for us to attempt to Christianize Mohammedans. I loved to hear our camel driver recite passages from the Koran.

"The desert country is one of subtle charm, romance and poetry. I cannot but be thrilled by Islamic culture but I shouldn't like to see it sumper-imposed on our own civilization—a thing which some extreme Pan-Islamists seem to desire."

VOICE OF PEOPLE

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN AND CHURCH UNION

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

Sir:—The Presbyterian Women of Canada in their great Missionary Societies, East and West, have more than a hundred thousand members, and they raised in the last reported year more than half a million, for Missions a larger amount than was ever given in a year, until quite recently, by the whole Church.

This Women's work has grown from the small beginnings of sixty years ago, and next year they celebrate in Montreal a Diamond Jubilee.

This great Society, I speak of East and West as one, is practically independent of all Church Courts. It makes its own laws, carries out its own plans, does its own work, votes its own Funds. It is self-promoting, self-governing, self-contained and self-controlled. The Assembly has no part whatever in its management; and yet the Assembly without even "by your leave"—without ever consulting it as a Society—is asking Parliament to hand over that Society, body and soul, to a new Corporation.

The Assembly is a Board of Directors chosen by the Presbyterian Church to manage its affairs and pledged to "maintain and defend" this Curch" and to "follow no divisive course from the present order established therein" and with no right under any circumstances, to attempt to wipe "this Church" off the map as a separate and distinct Organization.

What would you think, business men of Canada, if you had organized a Company, appointed Directors, and pledged them to "maintain and defend it; what would you think or do, if these Directors, on a vote of one third of the stock of that Company, should ask Parliament to wind up its affairs and hand it over to others?

That is what the Assembly is attempting to do with the Presbyterian Church. The Assembly is appointed to manage an existing Church, and is pledged to "maintain and defend" it, and is proposing to ask Parliament to end this Church, and out of its stones to build a new one.

But in the case of the Women's Missionary Society, the members of Assembly have not even the claim that they are appointed to manage it, for in that management they have no share in any way.

There is a further element in the case which adds to the injustice and wrong, viz.-that the women have no place nor voice in these Church courts which are thus attempting the transfer of their Society to other control.

The women are the largest half and the most important half of the Church: and yet in all that the Assembly claims the right to do, as the Supreme Court of the Church, the women have neither voice nor vote, not even when that Assembly attempts the wholesale disposal of the Society which is the Women' exclusive possession.

Will the Presbyterian women allow themselves to be traded off as so much goods and chattels? Will they submit to such wrongful usurpation of their rights, and permit their great work to be handed over to some new control by the presumption of those who have no shadow of right to do so? Now is the time for these women to assert their rights and save their great Society as well as their Church.

No matter what changes may be made in the "Church Union Bill" whether congregations be permitted to withdraw before or after the Union takes place, its essential wrong will still remain unchanged in that it proposes to wipe out completely our present "Presbyterian Church in Canada."

The whole "Union" Movement and especially its later coercion developments, is a reaction towards the days of Ecclesiastical despotism, when the clergy aided by the civil government, ruled in matters of faith and the people had to obey.

Presbyterians have ever in the past had a foremost part in securing and maintaining civil and religious liberty, and today the Call comes to the Presbyterians of Canada to stand for their liberties and not allow themselves to be driven out of the Church of their choice, either into the proposed New One, or out into the wilderness without a Church Home; and, as in the past Freedom will not not call in vain.

Montreal, 7 May, 1923.

HATE IN RUHR

yard. Those that were in the front rank of the crowd were killed or wounded. You are not allowed to talk to the wounded. The troops are not giving interviews. In fact, they were sent a very long way away very soon after the last ambulance load of wounded had gone. Hearsay evidence is worthless, and there are plenty of wild stories.

Two things stand out. The French had no reason to make any bloodshed and wanted none. On the contrary, they had every reason to avoid any sort of conflict, as they were making every effort to win over the workers from their employers. The industrialists, on the other hand, had been provoking incidents and advising the men to resist.

Twenty different workmen swore to me that there were Nationalist agitators, former German "Green police," in the crowd. The workmen say these men egged on the workers and told them they could swarm over the French, disarm them, and kick them out of the courtyard.

All the workmen said the crowd ran at the first volley, which was fired over their heads. They had all served in the army and had no desire to attack armed troops unarmed once they saw they meant business and would really shoot. It is there that the question arises whether or not the lieutenant proceeded to fire unnecessarily. I do not know. All the men I have talked to swear they were running after the first volley and did not see anything. After the first volley the troops fired independently.

The funeral at Essen was delayed the last time because the French and German doctors could not agree on the nature of the bullet wounds. The Germans claimed eleven of the workmen were shot in the back. The French surgeon claims that four were shot in the front, five bullets entered from the side and two in the back. I do not know the claims on the two men who died since the argument started.

At present the Ruhr workmen are feeling decidedly unpatriotic. They believe that sooner or later negotiations will start, their steadily dwindling unemployment pay will stop, the mark will plunge down again, and that they will not be able to work full time, due to various sabotages and the general disorganization. None of them have any illusions that the Government will be able to pay them unemployment pay indefinitely and they are demanding that the Government start something.

The French seem to run the administration of the occupation admirably. The troops are kept out of sight as much as possible, and there is a minimum of interference with Germans going through from unoccupied to occupied Germany. They are all required to have red card passes, but the examination of these passes is purely perfunctory. A noncom. sees the red card, says, "bon," and the line of Germans passes through the barrier.

They run the military end smoothly, but are only able to move six trains of the one hundred and thirty-three from Essen each day. In three months of occupation France has obtained the same amount of coal she had been getting each week from Germany for nothing before the Ruhr seizure.

M. Loucheur, the millionaire ex-Minister of the Devastated Regions under Briand, went to London and felt out public opinion on his own hook, although he told Poincare he was going, and reported to him on his return. Poincare was reported furious at Loucheur's trip, which he regarded as a first step in a Loucheur drive for the Premiership when the Chamber of Deputies again sits in May. Loucheur suffers in France from being called the French Winston Churchill, and has a record for brilliant performance and brilliant failure. His very sound credentials for the Premiership will be that he has always opposed the Ruhr venture.

Aristide Briand is now working on a speech that he hopes will return him to power. He is planning to attack Poincare by stating the number of millions Briand got out of the Germans in reparations while he was Prime Minister and compare them with the money Poincare has lost since he came into office.

The Caillaux Liberal camp have started a new paper in Paris. Leon Daudet, the Royalist, says the first thing he will ask the Chamber when it reopens is why M. Loucheur was permitted to go to England as an alleged representative of the Government against the wishes of the Government, etc.

Andre Tardieu has announced an attack on the Ruhr policy as it has been carried out. Things are beginning to boil.

The end of the Ruhr venture looks very near. It has weakened Germany, and so has pleased M. Daudet and M. Poincare. It has stirred up new hates and revived old hates. It has caused many people to suffer. But has it strengthened France?

VISITED PROPOSED SPAWNING GROUND

Superintendent of Hatcheries Was Favorably Impressed With the Locality.

A. W. McLeod, Superintendent of Hatcheries for the Provincial Government, visited the proposed site of the protected spawning ground near Fowler's Corners yesterday forenoon in company with Leon Fraser of the Chamber of Commerce; R. W. Carson, Fish and Game Inspector; C. G. Graham and W. C. Ackerman of the Fish and Game Protective Association.

Mr. McLeod was very favourably impressed with the suitability of the location of this natural spawning ground, and said that it would be an innovation on the part of the department to establish and protect natural spawning grounds for lunge. It would be inexpensive also in this case, and the superintendent considers it a good policy to protect these places which the fish have selected for spawning. A further survey, he intimated, may reveal many more locations suitable for the preserving the spawn.

This spawning ground has been advocated for some time by the Peterboro Fish and Game Association, and the matter has been well looked after in Toronto by T. Tooms, M.P.P. for West Peterboro. Mr. Tooms arranged for this visit by the Superintendent of Hatcheries, and as a result it is probable that the department will establish the ground during the present year. Mr. Tooms is going to Toronto tomorrow to push the matter with the authorities there.

The site under consideration now is at Lancaster Bridge on Chemong Lake, and one of the advantages attaching to this particular location is in the number of lakes and waters served by it. Its establishment means much to Peterboro in the preservation of fish, as Mr. McLeod pointed out that the destruction of one lunge in the spawning season may mean the loss of 175,000 fish.

Mr. Tooms some weeks ago took up the matter of extra protection for local waters and was instrumental in having 17 extra men appointed in this district to guard the fish.

WOULD DEPORT SOVIET

LAUSANNE, May 9.—(Canadian Press)—A committee of the Fascisti issued a statement to-day asserting that M. Vorovsky, Russian Emissary to the Near East Peace Conference, must be deported because of his accusation that the Swiss Government had acted unfairly and partially in preventing a Russian Courier from reaching Switzerland. The statement adds that Lausanne Fascisti are adequately armed and that everything is ready to enable them to deal with M. Vorovsky unless he leaves of his own account.

CHARACTER TELLS THE STORY!

People throughout this county are giving more thought to hygiene and to the purity of remedies on the market, but no one doubts the purity of Doctor Pierce's vegetable medicines, for they have been so favourably known for over fifty years that everyone knows they are just what they are claimed to be. These medicines are the result of long research by a well-known physician, R. V. Pierce, M.D., who compounded them from health-giving herbs and roots long used in sickness by the Indians. Dr. Pierce's reputation as a leading and honored citizen of Buffalo, is a sufficient guarantee for the purity of that splendid tonic and blood purifier, the Golden Medical Discovery, and the equally fine nerve tonic and system builder for women's aliments, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Soft Ball Finals Tonight-Big League Games-Other Sport News

GAME TONIGHT IN SOFT BALL FINALS

Woollens and Belmonts Will Meet in First Game of the Final Series.

The stage is all set for the opening battle of the series to decide the soft ball championship of the city. The first game will be played this evening and will get under way promptly at 8 o'clock. The Canadian Woollens nine, undefeated champions of the Industrial section will meet the Belmonts, champions of the Club section and the games are expected to surpass all others for speed and closeness.

The Woollens proved themselves to be far superior to any of the entries in the Industrial section for they went through their whole schedule without sustaining a single defeat, they have been however, weakened lately by the loss of their star battery. McLean and Hopkins who did the battery work for them have both left town and for the past couple of weeks the champs have been working out a couple of players to fill their places. They now have a new battery developed which is expected to be quite on a par with the former pair and with the airtight backing which can be expected from the remainder of the team they will be able to put up a scrap for the honours that will keep the Belmonts working. Dawson will do the hurling while Turner will be on the receiving end.

Holyman and Haskill, the old standbys for the Belmonts will bear the brunt of the battle again this evening. This battery sustained but two defeats in the preliminary schedule. The club section was much more evenly matched than the Industrial and the Belmonts had a hard fight all the way. The fact that they came out on top is in itself sufficient proof of a fast team and one which may be able to hand the Woollens their first set back of the season.

The second game will be played Friday evening at 8 o'clock and if a third contest is necessary it will be staged Saturday evening at the same hour.

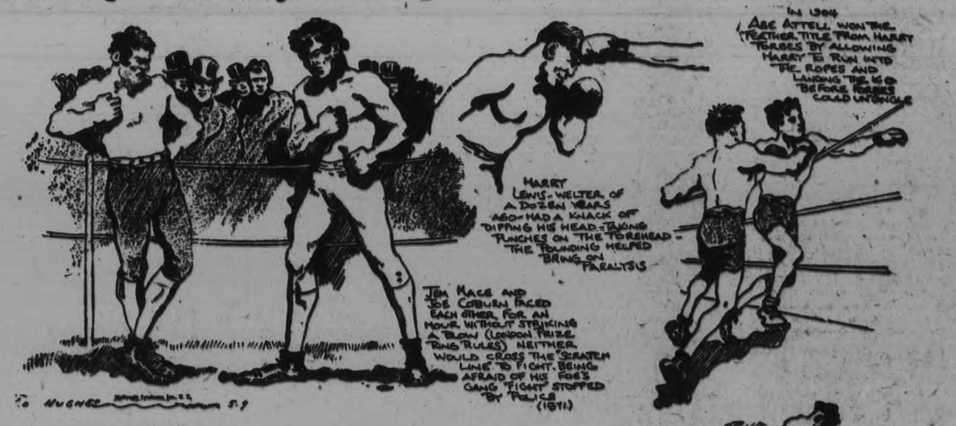
Oshawa Still Says Dainty Will Pitch.

Oshawa Reformer: Harold Dainty, two years ago star hurler for Oshawa in the Central Ontario League, who will line up with the Motor City crew this season, set all wild rumours at rest last night regarding his whereabouts last summer. In speaking to a Reformer representative, Dainty declared emphatically that he did not sign a Michigan-Ontario certificate, and further than that did not play ball all summer. He added that he spent last year in Detroit managing his father's business affairs.

Down Queer Alley in Ringland - - By ED. HUGHES



One of the queerest fights you can come across down Queer Alley is that of Jem Mace and Joe Coburn in Canada on 11th May, 1871. George Siler, famous old-time referee, in writing about it, said:

"The fight was a fight in name only, as they were in the ring over an hour without striking a blow. Whenever Mace would toe the scratch and feint for an opening Coburn would retire to his corner, inviting Jem to follow him. The Englishman, however, was too wary, as the men that surrounded Joe's corner had knives and guns in their hands and murder in their hearts.

"Joe was there to win if he could, but by no means to lose, and, as Mace thought more of his life than he did of the money involved in the battle, he religiously remained on his side of the ring. Seeing he could not draw Coburn to the scratch, and Coburn seeing he could not induce Mace to come into his territory, they killed time leaning against the ropes rubbing their bodies."

The police finally broke up this fiasco.

Remember old Harry Lewis, a corking welterweight of a dozen years ago. Harry had a peculiar knack of blocking. Lewis had a particularly tough head, and he formed the habit of dipping the dome and taking punches on the top of his forehead. He was a hard man to hurt, because few ever got a good shot at his jaw.

The pounding, however, helped to bring on paralysis later in life.

Scientive boxers sometimes lose through stupid blunders, like ordinary ringsters. Harry Forbes put himself in this class when he lost his feather championship to Abe Attell in 1904.

Forbes was a master boxer and was leading Abe handily when he ran into trouble. In the fifth round Abe side-stepped one of clever Harry's rushes Forbes lunging into the ropes. The Chicagoan got tangled in the upper strand in some way. Before he could detach himself Attell stepped in and delivered a knockout to the jaw.

One of the toughest fights on record is that between Sharp and Crosby held somewhere in Illinois in 1890. The men started in the afternoon and battled far into the night thanks to the aid of lantern light. Both boxers were terribly beaten, and in the rain and darkness it was often difficult to distinguish which was which.

Once both boxers staggered to the corner of his rival, and the seconds, unable to tell them apart instantly, actually cared for the wrong man.

That doesn't happen very often these days.

GAME CALLED ON ACCOUNT OF COLD

DETROIT, May 9.— (Canadian Press.)—While fans warmed themselves around impromptu bonfires in the bleachers and grandstand, and ball players swung their arms vigorously to fight the numbing cold, Washington defeated Detroit, 8 to 2 yesterday, in a game that went through seven innings before it was called by Umpire Owens. Warmouth was wild, passing seven men, but three double plays behind him nipped Tiger rallies. Score:

LACROSSE

Tonight's practice will be at Central Park at 6.30 o'clock.

Afterwards the boosters will hold a short meeting at the Examiner Office at 8 o'clock.

Candidates for the Intermediate, Junior and Juvenile teams are requested to turn out this evening. A net will be up and the going should be lively.

Negotiations are under way for a game in Oshawa before the local group games start, and it is hoped that the Club will be in a position to proivde lots of action this season.

The players owe it to themselves to get into condition at once. The finishing touches will be put on later.

Team managers will be chosen in a few days and by that time the squad material should all be out and under way.

HOCKEY ECHOES.

From Montreal comes the monthly story about a storm brewing in professional hockey. It is once again rumoured that the owners of the new arena, which is being erected at Ottawa, have signed all the members of the N.H.L. team at the capital and that a new league will be formed if the men who have had the franchise for the past few years offer any objection.

There is not room for two leagues and it is a good bet that the trouble, if there is any, will be straightened out before the opening games next December.

GREB HAS INFECTED ARM

PITTSBURGH Pa., May 9. — Canadian Press. — Harry Greb, the former light heavyweight boxing champion of America, was operated on in Mercy Hospital Hospital here yesterday for an infected arm which developed from a boil. The first intimation that the boxer was ill came late on Monday when a physician said that Greb's arm was in such a shape that he could not go through with a bout on Monday night.

ACCEPT ENTRY OF COGNAWAGA TEAM

East Peterborough League Has Three Teams Already Signed and Will Start the Season With Four.

The East Peterborough Baseball League accepted the entry of the Cognawaga team last night with Keene and Lakefield, and a fourth team that will be forthcoming probably from the city.

The League opens at Lakefield on 24th May, where the Cognawagas will be the visitors.

This new athletic club has its habitat in the south-end of the city among the young men of St. James' Church.

It is practically assured that the League will have four teams, making a trim convenient circuit.

SIX U.S. GOLFERS SURVIVED ROUND

DEAL, May 8 Canadian Press.— The second day's play in the British amateur golf championship tournament on the links of the Royal Cinque Ports provided few upsets, and was featured by victories by such favorites as Cyril Tolley, Roger Wethered, T. A. Torrance, W. B. Torrance, Michael Scott, the French champion, E. W. E. Holderness, the defending champion.

Francis Ouimet, Boston, and Geo. Rotan, Houston, Texas, were two of the prominent members of the team from the United States to come through with victories.

The matches in which Scott, playing as a member of the Royal St. George's, defeated Dr. J. D. MacCormick, Hermitage, and W. B. Torrance, Edinburgh; Burgess won from H. H. Smith, Prestwick St. Nicholas, proved exceedingly close and exciting contests. Both went to the 19th hole.

Robert Wethered had little difficulty in winning from C. C. Aylmer, a British star, 4 up and 2 to play, while Holderness did as had been expected when he downed H. H. Beauvais, of Hindhead 6 up and 4 to play. Tolley, a former champion, won from Allan Graham, Royal Liverpool, 6 and 4.

Sixty four golfers remained in the struggle for the title. Among these are six from the United States.

Of the United States players who are still in the tournament, Ouimet, who defeated Bernard Darwin yesterday by 3 to 2 is still considered by the British onlookers to have the best chance to capture the title.

MACK'S STAR HAS SERIOUS HANDICAP

Weak Throwing Arm is "Wid" Matthews' Only Fault—A Hustler in the Field and a Good Batter.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9. — A weak throwing arm is liable to prove quite a serious handicap to "Wid" Matthews, called the sparkplug of Connie Mack's club by eastern critics.

Matthews, secured by Mack from the Milwaukee club at a price said to be $20,000, is very fas, a great fielder and a hard man to pitch to the plate.

About the size of Wee Willie Keeler, Matthews assumes a crouch when he steps to the plate that doesn't give the pitcher much of a target to shoot at.

However, Matthews' greatest asset is the fact that he is always hustling. He is all over the field, tries for every ball, and never stops running, no matter how weakly he may tap to the infield.

Unfortunately for Matthews, he has a weak throwing arm. The eastern clubs of the American League, quick to note the fault, have taken advantage of the fact on the bases by running wild on all balls hit into his territory.

Mathews is a big leaguer in all things except throwing. It will be interesting to see if this one fault keeps him from holding down the berth of regular centre fielder which Mack has alloted to him.

Legal Blow For Professional Soccer.

LONDON, May 9.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—A severe blow was dealt professional soccer clubs yesterday when in an important case the King's bench divisional court allowed the appeal of Henry Leddy, a professional player, of Chesterfield ,Derbyshire, who sought a reversal of a county court judge that the club's agreement to pay him a wage of £9 a week was subject to the football association's ruling of April 12 that the wage should be £8 weekly for the playing season and £6 a week during the summer.

The judicial opinion was that the club's contentions were unreasonable, as the association might even reduce wages to £4 a week or on the other hand increase them to £10, which in the latter case would be an anomaly, all professionals receiving £10 while Leddy was bound to the club's agreement to play for £9 a week.

Leave for a further appeal was allowed.

If the appeal is upheld it means that football clubs will have to pay all arrears since the reduction in wages.

SOCCER NOTES

The G.W.V.A. will meet the Thistles in a league fixture at the Oval on Thursday evening. This will be the first time into action this season for the vets and as they have not had a team on the field since 1921 this will be the first opportunity many of the fans will have to get a line on their players. Kick off will be at 6.15 and J. Howarth will be the referee.

Thistles and C.P.C. will clash at King Edward Park on Saturday afternoon for the first of the semi-final games for the Gordon Cup. The game is scheduled for 3 o'clock sharp and J. Clarke will be the referee.

Football enthusiasts will learn with regret that Jim Howarth, who has been acting in a very efficient manner as the secretary-treasurer of the P. & D. F. A. is leaving the city. Mr. Howarth accepted the onorous duties of secretary-treasurer at a time when the local football situation was in a rather chaotic condition and President Cairns found him an efficient aid in putting the game on a sound foundation again. His place will be filled for the time being by W. G. Nicholls.

It has been decided that in the future all games must start sharp on the time scheduled. In the event of a game being late in starting the club at fault will be penalized.

Fans are reminded that the spectators must not under any circumstances interfere with the players. This rule has been disregarded to a certain extent by some of the local followers of the game but the P. & D. F. A. has issued a request that spectators in the future bear the above rule in mind and govern themselves accordingly.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS IN "ROBIN HOOD" CAPTURES ENROPEAN CAPITALS.

"Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" is now in the third month of its run at the Salle Marivaux, Paris, where it has broken all previous records of box-office receipts, attendance and length of run for any motion picture production ever before presented in Paris.

The Douglas Fairbanks' production has been showing five weeks at the Theatre de la Monnaie, Brussels, an unprecedented run for that Belgian city, with indications that the engagement will extend until well into the summer.

Since March 25 the Fairbanks' masterpiece has been filling the big Palladium Theatre at Stockholm at every performance. On April 6 the production was shown at the Royal Palace, Madrid, before King Alfonso of Spain and the Royal Family, previous to the commencement of a run at the Theatre Cataluna, Barcelona. King Alfonso was delighted with the performance and sent an enthusiastic letter of congratulation to Mr. Fairbanks.

PETER PORKER SAYS:

During the summer months nothing is more convenient than BOILED HAM. Keep your kitchen cool—ask your dealer for

ROSE BRAND BOILED HAM

"ROSE BRAND" means that the hams have been specially selected, cured and matured. The ROSE BRAND flavor equals anything that ever came out of Yorkshire, and Yorkshire Hams have been famous for centuries.

Both are active for their weight.

SOCIETY FIND

safe deposit vault, part of it in the form of Victory Bonds, ready to be converted into cash for a new home, or to lie dormant for years to come, should the directors decide to return to the old Shelter premises. With the $1,150 received from the fire insurance companies, the City Trust Commissioners will place a new roof on the old Shelter, awaiting the final decision of the directors of the Children's Aid Society before proceeding to turn the premises into a double dwelling-house. For loss by damage of water and smoke, the Board itself received insurance of $170.

In a body, the Board of Management motored on an inspection tour of four contemplated sites, yesterday afternoon, holding a meeting last evening in F. H. Dobbin's office to report on their findings. Properties under consideration were Mr. Myles Hamilton's house at Auburn, Mr. G. H. Popham's residence on Lock Street, and two East City homes, those of Mr. Wm. Irwin and of Mr. L. Yeotes, the latter on Burnham Street. The Board already possesses an option on the Hamilton property, and, at last night's meeting, the secretary was empowered to secure option on the Irwin and Popham sites. Although many complimentary remarks were made with regard to the generally clean and up-to-date condition of the L. Yeotes premises, the main consideration involving its elimination centred around the fact that its situation was not as favorable as the others under discussion.

Answering an enquiry, Secretary J. Edgar said that he understood from City Clerk Armstrong that any property purchased for use as a Children's Shelter would be automatically exempt from taxation, as being used as a charitable institution.

Final decision on the subject of purchase of new premises is deferred until the return to the city of the president, B. F. Ackerman.

A temporary home for the children, who, at the moment, number only a baker's dozen, has been secured at 617 George Street, in a house owned by the Schneider Estate, with a new telephone number of 1542J. Although no stated rent has been set for this temporary refuge, Mrs. W. H. Gibbs reported that satisfactory arrangements had been made with the owners. A vote of thanks to the ladies, Mesdames Herbert Kendry, Fanning and Darcy, who looked after Shelter wards following the recent fire, was carried unanimously. It was also decided to give $25 to the matron, Mrs. D. Rogers, for extra work involved in moving and settling her small charges. Mr. J. Edgar reported that differences between Mrs. Rogers and the Board regarding work and salary had been smoothed away after an interview by Board members with the matron, who now professed herself as satisfied with conditions.

Mr. G. W. Powell reported children made wards during the last month, 1; returned to parents, 4; brought in (not wards), 1; wards placed out, 6; wards returned to the Shelter, 1.

Publication of the following letter was requested: "Dear Sir,—The remark made by a member of your Board that I was asked to vacate the house at 341 Downie Street was correct. (Signed) A. Bongard."

Members present at last night's meeting were: Mrs. W. H. Gibbs (presiding in the absence of the president), Mesdames Kimberley, Devey, Fanning, Welsh, Darcey, Knox, Hodgson, Messrs. F. H. Dobbin, W. Stocker, J. Edgar, G. W. Powell, C. S. Cummer, J. W. Meyers.

Accounts reported by Mrs. J. S. Fanning, and ordered paid, were: Higgins' Hardware Co., $2.10; R. Denne, $1.60; S. Kemp, $1.65; Bell Telephone Co., $5.83; J. M. Heard, $21; F. H. Patterson & Co., $12.60; Mrs. Girven, $6.98; R. Neill, Ltd., $12.31; Peterboro Hardware Co., $5.30; Nicholls Hospital, $22.50; G. W. Powell, $14.80; Canadian Packing Co., $21.50; T. L. Edwards, $7.26; Robson & Penrose, $15; R. Hall & Sons, $1.30; Grafton & Co., 98c; Peterboro Lumber Co., $25.60; New Centre Meat Market, 60c; A. B. Taylor & Son, $16; John Rowe, $15.50; Utilities Commission, $2.19; A. McIlmoyle, $14—total, $226.89.

Some discussion arose over the amount charged by Nicholls' Hospital, which was for adenoid operations on several of the Shelter children, several of the members claiming that a charge should not be made.

H. WANNAMAKER DIED RESULT OF ACCIDENT

Was Thrown From a Milk Wagon—Had a Sister in Hastings.

BELLEVILLE, May 9. — Matthew Harvey Wannamaker, who was injured in a runaway at the Union Cheese Factory on Monday morning about 8.30, died in the Belleville General Hospital yesterday, without having appeared to make any gain towards recovery.

His injuries, which were internal, were to the lung and abdomen, and on Monday afternoon there was sign of collapse, as his pulse weakened. Little hope had been held out from the start, and late on Monday it was expected that the ending would be fatal.

The late Mr. Wannamaker was one of the best known of the farmers between the 3rd and 4th Concessions of Thurlow. He was born 35 years ago, in the Township of Mayo, being a son of Mr William Henry Wannamaker and Mrs. Wannamaker, who now reside at Chapman, Ontario.

For years he has farmed not far from Canifton ,and it was his duties in connection with dairying that took him to the Union Factory on Monday.

He was married some years ago to Miss Annie Whiting, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Whiting, of Canifton. She survives with one son, Donald, aged about 3 years.

There are also bereft his parents, three brothers, W. L. of Oshawa, Marvin of Dunkirk, Sask., and Richard of Fort Stewart, Ont., and four sisters, Mrs. James Bremner of Trenton, Mrs. George Bruce of Chapman, Mrs. Charles Graham of Hastings, and Mrs. John Trotter of Alberta.

He was a favourite in the community, and was a member of the Methodist Church.

The funeral takes place on Thursday, the burial being made at Elmwood Cemetery, Corbyville.

ROADS BUILT

Reinforcement should be used as an added precaution and not as a substitute for concrete.

"A concrete surface may break up under impact, but it will not wear out," said the speaker. In speaking of impact, the one-quarter inch allowance usually made for inequalities in surface finish is too much, as a one-quarter inch inequality may cause a truck wheel to jump one inch, thus increasing impact which is the greatest enemy to the concrete road. In some parts of the country, roads are demanded which show no inequalities in the length of a ten-foot straight-edge. Many states prohibit the use of badly-worn solid tires on trucks on account of destruction to the road through impact. The speaker advocates the universal use of pneumatic tires of trucks.

Many lantern slides were shown of test roads in the United States, showing examples of work, good and bad, in road construction.

Colonel Boyden stressed the fact that roads are built not only for this age, but for many years to come, and care should therefore be taken to ensure their proper construction and that adequate provision is made for natural growth in road transportation.

GRAND JURIES

Justified Existence.

Judge Morson, who has served longer on the Bench than any of the other county judges of Ontario, would not favor the abolition of the Grand Jury.

"The Grand Jury system was established to meet a real need, in protecting the liberty of the subject," said Judge Morson, "and during the centuries it has justified its existence. The liberty of the subject is now so safeguarded that no citizen could be held indefinitely in prison, without trial, at the caprice of a despot, but some conditions the Grand Jury was established to meet still exist, and I do not think the day has come when it should be abolished as part of our judicial system."

Follow England.

Judge Denton concurs with the position of the Law Lords and thinks that if the Grand Jury can be dispensed with in England, it could safely be abolished in Canada.

"The day of the Grand Jury is done," said Judge Widdifield. "The time was when nearly every prominent statesman came before the Parliament on attainder, and an institution such as the Grand Jury was necessary to stand between the Crown and the accused. But that necessity is now done away with and I would say that the Grand Jury had outlived its usefulness. They very seldom return a no bill, and perhaps if they were not there, magistrates would be more particular in committing persons for trial."

Judge Tytler favors the retention of the Grand Jury, both to pass on bills before the accused are placed on trial, and to visit public institutions.

"Even though they saved one innocent man from the ignomy and jeopardy of a criminal trial, I think that the expenditure would be warranted," said His Honor, who also expressed the opinion that in their inspection of public institutions they not only served to keep the professional inspector up to the mark, but that they would often notice conditions which would escape in a routine examination.

Respect For Law.

"It is of prime importance when constituted authority is being attacked from so many quarters," said Judge O'Connell, "that the community generally should be impressed with the importance of law and order. Citizens, sitting as jurors, and taking part in the administration of law and justice, which they are called to consider offences against society and to see the law put in operation against offenders, have their respect for the law increased as they would in no other way. With the changing conditions of society, the law necessarily lags behind, more or less, and the desire of the legislators to enact laws to meet the new conditions arising could hardly be better guided than by the expression of the opinion of the Grand Jurors, who can perceive conditions needing mending, and can make the necessary representations."

In their inspection of public institutions, Judge O'Connell thought, practical men going in were apt to see conditions which might easily be overlooked in the routine inspection of a public official, and to make suggestions for mending and improving conditions generally.

GOOD MEETINGS HELD AT THE GOSPEL HALL

On Tuesday evening the Gospel Hall was well filled with a most interested audience. Mr. T. Baird, who has visited Peterborough before, gave an address on "How We Got Our Bible." It was full of instruction and profit, being illustrated with pictures of the oldest manuscripts of the Scriptures. The speaker told of the extreme care and reverence of those engaged in copying the word of God. As for instance: When the name of God had to be written the writer would wipe his pen clean, and when it was Jehovah, he would retire and bathe his whole body before doing so. He also dwelt upon the fact that the excavator's spade is continually digging up long-hidden stones, cylinders, etc., the writing on which proves the absolute truth of holy writ. These things must make the modern infidels called higher critics tremble.

Mr. Baird will continue these illustrated talks on the Bible Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights at 8 o'clock.

If you are interested to know more about this subject don't miss hearing it handled by a very helpful speaker.

BOUND ON JOURNEY TO BRITISH GUIANA

Motor Launch Built in Peterborough Suggests Romance and Adventure.

Romance and adventure are suggested by the sturdy lines of the motor launch squatting on a flat car yesterday on the Canadian National track near Aylmer street. It is bound on a journey of exploration in British Guina, up swift shallow streams into the depths of primeval tropical forests.

Because of the shallow water the boat is specially built with the tunnelled propeller which is featured by the Peterborough Canoe Company and which has made the name Peterborough known in all parts of the continent. A short time ago a large launch of this type was shipped to the Artic circle, and the boat now loaded is going within four degrees of the equator.

Sturdy in Structure.

This boat is built for the British Guiana Diamond Venture and is intended to carry supplies from Demerara to the diamond mines in the interior. Because of the rough usage to which it will be subjected in the swift streams, the boat has been exceptionally strongly constructed, making no pretense at graceful lines, but conveying an impression of sturdiness and safety. It measures 33 feet by 7 feet 6 inches; has a horse power motor, and a freight capacity of 4 tons. Travelling light it has a speed of more than 12 miles per hour and under load it can make 6 miles per hour.

Advertise Peterboro.

All aong the route from Peterboro to Demerara the origin of the boat will be announced in large print on the side of the car—"From Peterborough, Ontario."

It is interesting to note that there are at present in the factory of the Peterborough Canoe Company, motor launches for shipment to the four points of the compass. A few weeks ago a launch was shipped to Hudson's Bay; yesterday a launch went to the equator, and others are on order for Maine, the home of the motor boat; Rainey River, forming the boundary between Minnesota and Western Canada, and Quebec. A car load of canoes will be shipped soon to Seattle for the United States Government, and another shipment will go to Durban, South Africa. All of these carry the name "Peterborough."

GERMANY'S SEA POWER IS SPEEDILY GROWING

BREMEN, May 9. (United Press) —Marine activity is the rule at all of Germany's ports. Hamburg, Bremen, Bremen-haven, Emden, Lubeck, Stettin and Kiel all show large gains in tonnage cleared, and helped by government subsidies German shipyards are now buying second-hand vessels cheap abroad and patching them up.

Some ports report 90 per cent. of the tonnage cleared in 1913 and virtually all the old world routes of German steamship lines are now re-established.

Financial News and Views

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — And Curb Prices.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 9—(Special.) — Speculative favourites and specialties were marked up sharply in the forenoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange today. Shorts are finding some difficulty covering their committments with consequent appreciation of prices in the stocks involved. Secretary of Commerce Hoover's profession of facts in continued prosperity helped materially to create improved sentiment and trading has been of a healthier character than has been witnessed in weeks. American Locomotive again assumed the leadership, opening nearly 2 points up at 132 5-8, and advancing rapidly to 133 3-4. Baldwin, after an initial loss of 1-8 at 127 advanced above 128. Steels also were in better demand. United States Steel was up 1-2 point at 101 1-4, while Bethlehem showed 1-4 point gain at 60 1-4. Sugars were up 1-4 to 5-8.

Sharp advances in some specialties featured the market in mid morning. American Waterworks sold at 41 for a gain of 2 3-4, the six per cent. preferred advancing 1 1-8 to 60. New York Airbrake at 38 was up 1-2. This stock is being steadily accumulated by insiders who believe its large earnings of about $10 a share on its entire capital means dividends of at least $4 a share on junior stock before winter. Airbrake is in stronger financial position than in years and has orders into 1924. American Locomotive continues active fractionally below its early top. A short interest was accumulated in this stock during the past week or so and it is apparently finding difficulty in covering. American Locomotive Commons is scarce, due to steady absorption by banking interests since the early part of last year.

It is calculated close to 100,000 shares were taken out of the market by these interests and these holding are still intact. On the way down from its recent high, buying has been by the same interests who bought the stock from 80 up. It is expected that Locomotive will be put on an 8 p.c. basis this year, with extras likely. In some quarters it is believed stock will pay 12 per cent. before the close of the year, a rate that would be fully justified by current earnings. No change at the May meeting is likely.

CHURCH MUST KEEP ABREAST OF TIMES.

Should Forget Differences of Creed and Unite in Common Beliefs.

DENVER, Colo., May 9. (United Press.) — Failure of the church to keep abreast of the times is the cause of people turning away from religion, according to the Rev. W. S. Rudolph, pastor of the Union Congregational Church here.

But on the other hand, these same people, by adopting the "live and let live" slogan of the modern business world, are taking up the principles of Christianity to a larger degree than ever before in their daily life.

Churches, Rev. Rudolph said, to meet the situation, must forget the petty differences of creed and unite in the beliefs that they have in common.

Strict blue laws are intolerant and are not adapted to our varied population, the pastor believes. Sunday, he said, is no more sacred than any other day, and the "movies are no worse on the Lords Day than on any other. Sunday gives the privilege of fellowship with God — not the duty."

RELEASE DEPORTED NOW IN IRELAND?

This May Be Outcome of Action by English Court of Appeal.

LONDON, May 9 (Canadian Press). — The Court of Appeal today granted the application for a writ of habeas corpus made on behalf of Art O'Brien, who was deported to Ireland following the Irish raids in March.

On two previous occasions the lower Courts refused to grant such a writ which was asked in an effort to bring O'Brien back to England to test the validity of the recent deportations.

Counsel for O'Brien contended that the British Home Secretary had no power to send the applicant to Ireland.

Republican officials hold that the success of the application must lead to the release of all Irish deported in March now in Ireland.

Decisions of the English Courts are not binding in Ireland, and the British Home Secretary may find much difficulty in carrying out the instructions to release Art. O'Brien, or any of the one hundred deported.

The attitude taken by Kevin O'Pegging, Free State Minister of Home Affairs, may be summed up in the cry, "What we have we hold."

City governments, it is pointed out in Dublin, got these presentments from England in a definite bargain with the British Home Office, and will carry out exactly the provisions of that bargain.

The decision of the judges suggests the possibility that the tangle may have to be straightened out by passing an Indemnity Act through the British Parliament.

COSGRAVE'S REPLY TO REBEL CHIEF

DUBLIN, May 9. — (Canadian Press).—President Cosgrave in the Dail read correspondence conducted with De Valera by Senators Douglas and Jameson acting as intermediaries. The correspondence showed that De Valera insisted upon an election by September 15, and assignment to the republicans of Barracks where their arms could be stored under guard pending outcome of the election.

The president authorized the senators to state that his Government must be recognized as the sole administrative power in the Free State and have effective custody of all lethal weapons. Surrender of all arms was necessary before peace could be discussed.

GANG OF ROBBERS MAKE A BIG HAUL

WINNIPEG, Man., May 9 (Canadian Press). — A gang of robbers cleaned out the branch of the Bank of Hochelaga at Dollard, Sask., early this morning.

At nine o'clock an official of the bank had word that all the cash, all the notes and securities had been stolen, but they had no information as to the amount of the booty.

The safe was wrecked, and the building badly damaged by the explosives used.

It is reported that five men were engaged in the robbery.

It is stated that the gang got away with $6,800 in cash, negotiable securities, which may amount to $200,000, and other paper of high face value.

BRITISH SEND A GUN BOAT TO MURMANSK

Will Protect Her Fishermen From Russian Piracy at All Costs—Limits Are Disputed.

RUSSIANS REPLY

LONDON, May 10. — (United Press).—A British gun boat, the Harebell, has been ordered to Murmansk to prevent Russian interference with British vessels outside the three-mile limit, with orders to "use force if necessary."

Ronald McNeil, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, announced this in the House of Commons today.

Russia's Reply.

Russia's reply to the British note protesting seizure of British fishing vessels was handed the British mission at Moscow by M. Litvinoff last night. The Soviet note defends Russia's right to a twelve-mile territorial zone along the Murmansk coast, the scene of recent seizures, pointing out that international law does not limit such zones to three miles. They claim the Russians have a nine-mile zone at Ceylon.

The Russo-British dispute over this question of zones is of twelve years' standing, the note states. Formerly, it says, Britain was willing to submit to international arbitration of the question. Now, obviously, she is not.

Fishing is the only means of subsistence open to the population of Murmansk, the Russians declared. Nevertheless the Moscow Government is prepared to submit to arbitration.

Under Secretary said the Government understood that another English trawler Lord Astor, had been captured by a Russian gunboat while fishing ten miles off the Murman coast. British agent in Moscow, he added, had eben instructed to enter a strong protest and to demand the release of Lord Astor's crew.

Declare There Are Too Many Dives and Rum Shops in Sydney, Which They Threaten To Burn Down

SYDNEY, N.S., May 10. Canadian Press — "There are too many dives and rum shops in this city, and we are going to burn them down. We have come here to give the Mayor and Aldermen due warning."

This was the statement given to Chief of Police McCormick today, when he was visited by a delegation from the Ladies' Auxiary of the Steel Workers' Union. They had just completed a meeting ot which it was decided that certain "Joints" in Sydney were contributing too greatly to the general state of unrest in the city.

OIL PRODUCER FUNERAL PYRE

Thirteen Identified Bodies and Three Skeletons Smouldering in Burning Texas Oil Pit.

CORSICANA, Texas., May 10.—(Canadian Press).—Thirteen identified bodies, three skeletons smouldering in the grim well pit and possibly a score of others to be uncovered, mark the tally of death wrought late yesterday by the explosion of the giant gusher of the J. H. Hughes development company (McKie No 1 Well).

When the fire was at its height the flames, leaping three hundred feet into the air could be seen for fifty miles, reports received this morning from number of points declare. Heavy billows of dense black smoke are still being carried by the wind over this town which is eleven miles from the scene of explosion.

The huge producer is a veritible funeral pyre in which charred twisted and mangled bodies remain while the well burns.

KING OF KINGS AND RULER OF RULERS

Unbalanced Man Thus Styles Himself in St. Catherines, and is Arrested.

ST. CATHARINES, May 10.—(Canadian Press).—"I am King of Kings and ruler of rulers", was the startling statement made by a well dressed bearded man who arose at service this morning in a St. Catharines Catholic Church and endeavored to convince the congregation that he was the true Christ. He was removed from the church as quickly as possible and later after house-to-house visits in the neighborhood he was arrested and charged with vagrancy, giving his name as William J. Murray or "marvellous" Murray, a former tight-rope performer

Asked by the Magistrate what he did for a living, he replied: "sacrifice penance and prayer." He said he had offered himself to the movies, but they had no faith. He was remanded for a week.

REAL INDIAN FUNERAL.

PONCA CITY, Okla., May 10.—(United Press).—The first real Indian funeral ceremony in this part of the old Indian country in a number of years, accompanied the burial of John Pipe Stem, high chief of the Otoes, near here.

Members of the Otoe tribe and friendly members of other tribes travelled from all parts of Oklahoma to attend the funeral of the old chief.

Scores of cattle and hogs were killed for the funeral feast, which was accompanied by the historic all-night dances and death chants by the chief's relatives.

Custom of giving away all the property of the dead chief, most remote of the customs practiced, was re-enacted.

FATE IN DOUBT

Not a word has been heard from Lorne Knight, arctic explorer, in nearly two years. The last mail from him was a proclamation from Wrangell Island, north of Siberia, declaring the island to be British territory. That was Sept. 15, 1921.

THE DEPORTATION PROBLEM IN HOUSE

British Upper House Will Consider Appeal in Art O'Brien Case.

LONDON, May 10. — (Canadian Press).—The House of Lords has decided to begin consideration next Monday of the Government's appeal from a court decision granting writ of habeas corpus to Art. O'Brien, who was deported to Ireland after raids as an Irish agitator. The Lords will sit daily until they have disposed of the matter. There is a general belief that the Lords will confirm the Appeal Court's ruling, in which event the Home Secretary must deliver O'Brien to the English courts. The Government would then be entirely dependent on the goodwill of the Free State in accepting the decision.

THE WEATHER.

The heavy snow that fell yesterday and the sharp frost that prevailed this morning, shows that winter is indeed loath to take its departure. The snow yesterday that fell here melted as it fell, but if it had remained as snow it would have given us over three inches of a mantle of white. During the night it turned much colder, and this morning the thermometer was down to five degrees below the freezing point. Snow in May, while not common, occasionally falls. The last heavy fall we had was on May 4, 1907, when six inches fell on the level. On the 28th of May the same year we had ½ an inch. A still heavier fall than May 4, of 1907, was that of May 9th, about 28 or 29 years ago—I am not certain of the year. There is a belief that if May snow is collected and bottled it is a panacea for sore eyes, and that the water remains sweet and clear for years. The belief is more prevalent than I thought, and I have been informed by several that they had eye water of the vintage of 1907 still in stock. I do not refer to what is popularly known as "Paddy's eye-water." Quite a number laid in a supply yesterday while others replenished their supply. Many will consider it a bit of superstition, but there seems to be scores who have the most implicit faith in the virtues of the waters of May snow.—W. P.

ALL FOREIGNERS ARE RELEASED BY BRIGANDS

But Chinese Bandits Make an Exception of Chevalier Musso, an Italian Attorney.

STORY OF THE GANG

SHANGHAI, China, May 10 (Canadian Press). — All foreign captives held by the bandits are being released fexcept Chevalier Musso, an Italian attorney, according to a message from Tsao-chwang, signed by the relief agent named Naill, and addressed to the Asia Development Company.

An American who probably knows more Chinese bandits intimately than any other person in the world, says there is little to fear from most of them.

He is Dr. Thomas Coole, Kansas physician, who has just returned to this work after twenty years' work in Southern China for the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"The attack on the Shanghai-Pekin express and kidnapping of the foreigners by bandits," he says, "is the most serious anti-foreign action in China since the Boxer rebellion. But it is so unusual and so contrary to the general attitude of mind among the roving bandits, that it cannot be construed as part of a concerted plant to terrorise foreigners

"Most Chinese bandits don't work that way"

Take Officials.

In cases of kidnapping for ransom, Chinese officials are usually taken instead of foreigners

"For then," says Dr Coole, "the bandits are able to bargain with the authorities for the exchange of chieftains in the hands of the law and comrades in danger of execution.

"Chinese bandits rarely shoot straight and few of them are reckless enough to risk a punitive expedition of native troops. They are even more afraid of foreign forces. That's what makes the kidnapping of the Americans so unusual."

Composition of Bandits.

Penniless ex-soldiers, out of favour, make up most of the bands of bandits.

"Broke and out of luck," says Dr. Coole, "these men take to making a living the easiest way they know how. As soldiers they had learned how to maraude; and as politicians they had learned how to graft. So they easily work hand in hand.

"While they think little of killing men of their own kind, they are afraid of harming others.

"Christians usually go unharmed. A Bible or prayer book has saved many a life.

"Many of the Chinese know this, and often carry these books for protection, although they are not believers in the faith.

"At one time the run on these books for passport use became so great, I had to sew little badges on the coats of the converted to mark them from the others"

Held Up Often

Dr Coole has been held up often in China But he has never been harmed

"One day while I was returning from a long trip into the province of Fukien," Dr Coole went on, "my train was stopped by a group of bandits They said their chieftain wanted to see me.

"I told them I was busy. They became threatening and forced me to accompany them

"Leaving my carriage and coolies behind, I went to the camp behind a stockade a considerable way off the road.

"The chief was most cordial. He apologised for having troubled me. But he had an urgent matter to discuss.

"He wanted to build a Christian church.

"He was insistent. Only after long argument was I able to show him that it would not be feasible for us to use his plunder for spreading the gospel of God."

A few weeks later, Dr. Coole found out the reason for the zeal of the chief.

"He wanted to get back into good standing with the law-abiding citizens," he says. "And he did. He was pardoned by the government, was reinstated, and became a magistrate.

"But he soon got into trouble again, and was, according to latest reports, awaiting execution in a Chinese prison at Foochow."

CORRECTION IN PRICE OF COAL

In an advertisement of Hodgson Brothers yesterday, stove coal was advertised at $10.00 per ton and also went on to say that orders for nut size for same price. This was a mistake on the part of the paper, as Hodgson Brothers' copy distinctly stated $16.00 per ton and not $10.00 per ton.

FRANCE'S FEAR OF THE KRUPPS BEHIND TRIAL

Climax in French Determination to Render Big Armament-Producing Plant Impotent.

STRUCK A SNAG

NEW YORK, May 10.—Behind the trial of Baron Gustav Grupp Von Bohlen and eight of his directors, assistants and overseers who are now being tried by the French on the charge of endangering the lives of French soldiers is another story. It's a story that was told me both by Germans, when I went through the Krupp works at Essen, and also by French soldiers during the months I spent in the Ruhr.

The trial grew out of the killing of 13 workmen at the factory when they engaged in a hostile demonstration against the French who had entered the plant in order to requisition autos for military use. Krupp Von Bohlen and his associates are charged with inviting their workmen to attack the French.

But the story goes back farther than that day when the workmen of Krupp faced the muzzles of the French guns. It had its beginning in the French fear of Krupp — Krupp, the world's largest and most famous manufacturer of war materials.

After the signing of the Treaty of Versailles, the first step was to render impotent, so far as possible, the Krupp war factory. For a time all went well, thousands of guns and big shells were destroyed, machines for the manufacture of war material were dismantled, and the great proving ground for big guns at the Krupp factory was wrecked.

Then a snag was struck.

The wreckers had come to the shop known as "Kanonen Werkstatt No. II," the shop where the enormous guns, the outstanding surprise of the war, had been made.

The Germans were polite but inflexible. They refused to permit the destruction of the big lathes which had been used for the boring of the big guns.

They claimed the right under the Treaty of Versailles, to manufacture articles of commerce. They claimed that the big gun shop was the only shop they had suitable for the turning out of such articles as big rolls for heavy rolling mills, long and heavy shafts, etc. It was necessary for the manufacture of the large and heavy hollow-forged tubes essential to the production of nitrates from the nitrogen of the air, a process vital to German agriculture.

The allies were divided. France insisted the big gun shop must go because it was one of the chief factors in the German plan for world domination.

But nothing was done. The big shop stands to-day as it stood in 1914. It is busily engaged in turning out implements of peace, but it still retains its potentialities for war.

And the Krupp workmen have threatened to rise should the Krupp officials be convicted by the French.

URGES AMICABLE TRADE RELATIONS WITH U. S.

Robert Forke Says Canadian Prosperity Bound Up With That of States

OTTAWA, May 10. Canadian Press. — A plea for amicable trade relations between Canada and the United States was made here last night by Robert Forke, the Progressive leader, at a complimentary dinner to the former Progressive leader, Hon. T. A. Crerar.

"I am British," said Mr. Forke, "but I believe that for weal or woe, the prosperity of Canada is largely bound up with that of the people of the United States. We cannot go our own way and pay no attention to the people to the south of us."

Mr. Crerar urged the need of a lower tariff for the western farmer, and advocated inceased immigration with a joint Federal and Provincial system of agricultural credits to assist new settlers.

ATHENS, Greece. May 10. (United Press.) — Fifty-five million Venetian ducats. the loot of the famous brigand, Ali Pasha, who terrorized the Balkans more than a hundred years ago, are believed to be just within the reach of excavators who are digging beneath the bandits' ancient stronghold.

Scattered across the twisted paths of the labyrinth which leads to Ali's treasures have been found the skeletons of twenty-five men. They were murdered because they knew the secret hiding place of Ali Pasha's wealth.

The value of the fifty-five million ducats is approximately $115,000,000.

REMEMBER THE RUHR PRISONER

Krupp Receives Thousands Telegrams in Prison on 52nd Birthday

BERLIN, May 10. — (United Press).—Literally thousands of telegrams of condolence, sympathy and birthday congratulations went forward from all parts of Germany today to Herr Krupp Von Bohlen, imprisoned "somewhere in the Ruhr." It is Krupp's 52nd birthday. He is awaiting the outcome of the appeal against the sentence of fifteen years' imprisonment passed by the French for alleged responsibility in connection with the killing of a dozen German workmen by French soldiers at Essen.

SEND MESSAGES TO MOTHERS BY WIRE

Timely Greetings Ready for Use by Sons and Daughters.

For the convenience of sons and daughters who are distant from their mothers on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 13, the Canadian National Telegraphs have compiled a pamphlet containing suggestions for Mother's Day messages by wire. A wide selection of code wishes is prepared for the convenience of patrons, all of which are exceedingly appropriate and such greetings as any mother would be rejoiced at receiving on Mother's Day. The smallest of these suggestions for transmission reads, "Every day is Mother's Day for me; much love." The most extended one is as follows: "Most of the good things in this life comes to us in twos and threes, dozens and hundreds—plenty of roses, stars, sunsets, rainbows, brothers and sisters, aunts and cousins, comrades and friends, but only one mother in this wide, wide world." The other greetings prepared convey similar sentiments of affection bound to cheer any mother's heart.

ST. JAMES' W. M.S. GAVE HAPPY BIRTHDAY PARTY

On Tuesday afternoon the newly elected executive of St. James' W. M.S. gave a very pleasant and informal birthday party on the occasion of the society's fifth anniversary. With but one or two exceptions, the charter members were all present.

During the business session an interesting feature was the reading of the first minutes of the society by their first secretary, Mrs. H. A. Benney. Mrs. J. G. Plunkett, the first president, gave a short resume of the organisation and its growth since 1918.

Mrs. J N. Welbourn the new president, also gave a brief account of the advance of W. M. S. in Canada, and especially in the Peterborough district.

Mrs. Welbourn recalled being present, when a young girl, at the depature of Miss Jessie Munro, the first girl to go from Peterborough as a missionary to Japan. Loving tribute was paid to the memory of the late Miss Munro, whom all W. M.S. workers had learned to love and revere.

Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. Mrs. (Rev.) J F. Chapman, the retiring President, poured, while Mrs. (Rev.) B. Greatrix (the Charter Treasurer) cut the lovely birthday cake with the five candles.

The executive of St. James' Auxiary should be congratulated upon the original and well carried out programme, which promises a most successful year.

Tenants and Owners in Session Tonight

Tonight a public meeting of owners and tenants will be held in the G.W.V.A. Hall for the discussion of public affairs, such as the recent controversy over the police administration, the proposed new extension to the Collegiate Institute and other matters of importance to every tenant and owner in the city. Ward associations that would meet regularly and discuss matters of civic interest have long been advocated, and the Tenants' and Owners' Association is a step in this direction. Election of officers will also take place this evening.

The concert begins at 4.30 p.m. eastern time that is for Peterboro auditors, but actually at 3.30 o'clock Central time. Mr. Braund is playing a concert in the A.S.O. orchestra of thirty-five pieces. The A.S.O. glee club will also contribute several numbers, and vocal and instrumental solos will make up the rest. AN URGENT APPEAL TO WHOLE PROVINCE

Typhoid-Swept Town of Cochrane Calls for Financial Help.

TORONTO, May 10.—(Canadian Press.)— So serious are conditions existing in the typhoid swept town of Cochrane that it has become necessary to make an urgent appeal to the whole province to assist the town's populace, not in a position to help themselves.

The Red Cross has issued a call for funds, and a province-wide campaign will be made. This is the first appeal the Red Cross has made since the signing of the armistice.

ITALIAN GOVERNMENT TO WRITE ANOTHER MISSIVE

LONDON, May 10. Canadian Press. — It is understood in diplomatic circles in Rome, says an Exchange telegraph despatch, that the Italian government although considering the latest German offer on reparations insufficient, will favor the opening of negotiations in order to break down the present deadlock. The Italian note will be delivered on Saturday, the message says.

OBEDIENCE IS REQUIRED FOR THE CHILDREN

Interesting Address by R.F. Downey at Annual Meeting of Home and School Council.

ELECT OFFICERS

"If we could teach our boys and girls to be obedient and industrious and thrifty, we would do much for better citizenship," said Mr. R. F. Downey, principal of the Central school, speaking in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce at the annual meeting of the Home and School Council.

"One of the first things that parents should look for is obedience. We teachers have a terror of a time along that score. Children nowadays do not want to obey and they do not want to work. Don't you think they should be taught to be industrious? Why does the country fellow that your children laugh at surpass them? Go out to the farm in the seeding season and you will find little boys, from ten years up, driving four-horse teams, learning habits of industry and self confidence. Our boys and girls in the city are hedged about by too many diversions and attractions and are out on too many nights in the week. And they should be taught at home, too, the Christian graces of courtesy and honesty. To my mind, the English boy, with his "yes sir," and "no sir," and his hand to his cap, surpasses our children in manliness, and courtesy and good breeding."

Referring to the success achieved by Miss Agnes Logan in music, the speaker said: "Set your children on fire in their early years by giving your boy or girl an incentive towards success in some line. Encourage a spirit of good-hearted rivalry and emulation in them. Teach them also to think of others and not alone of self."

"The home and the school must co-operate. Teaching aims to make good citizens. What is the home doing to assist in this work? Our teaching ability is tested, not by the front of the line, but by the rear, by the measure of success we achieve with the backward boy or girl."

Paying a tribute to the teaching staffs of the various Public schools in the city, to the vice-principals who gave so much of their time and attention towards encouragement of sport, to the support given the teachers by the Board of Education, Mr. Downey said that parents, however, should stop and think: "Are we getting value for what we are putting in? Are our children growing mentally, physically morally and spiritually, or, in better words, are they growing soulfully?" In 1920, upkeep of the Public schools of Ontario cost twenty-three million dollars, with an added three and one-half millions for Collegiates and High schools. The elementary cost per pupil in 1920 was $44.03, with the cost per elementary pupil in Peterborough at a slightly lower rate in that year, $44.07.

"There are six women to one man in the Public school teaching profession in Ontario," said Mr. Downey, who expressed the wish that boys in the higher grade classes might meet in their teachers "the vitality and strength of the man side of the profession."

The physical side of school life was emphasised to a great extent, "but we are not as alert on the moral and spiritual side. There are beautiful things in art and literature and history, in the lives of those around us, that should serve as incentives to the growing boy and girl."

"The discipline at home is relaxed The grip is off. Why not put it on, you parents?" said the speaker, who quoted the Kiwanis and Rotary mottoes, "We build," and "He profits most who serves best," also the words of a celebrated writer,

'He who knows most, grieves most for waste of time" in a concluding appeal to home dwellers for appreciation of the work of the teachers, 'whose faces are quickly lined by the years and the tremendous task of coping daily with your forty or fifty children, with their forty or fifty varying ways.

Mr. Downey's interesting and at times humorous address was listened to with profound attention by

DEATH FOR THE CHIEF OF THE MURDER GANG

Leader of Campaign of Terror Against French Has Been Sentenced to Death.

OTHERS ON TRIAL.

DUSSELDORF, May 10 (Canadian Press). — Albert Schlogetter, one of the chiefs of the so-called "murder gang" which has been carrying on a campaign of terror against French occupation in the Ruhr, was convicted by a court-martial, last night, and sentenced to death.

He was charged with espionage and sabotage.

One of Schlogetter's aides, named Hans Sadowsky, was sentenced to imprisonment for life at hard labour.

Five other Germans of the "murder gang" were given jail sentences varying from five to twenty years.

Schlogetter, who is a former Prussian officer, admitted having committed sabotage. He contended, however, he had never damaged passenger trains, but had merely blown up railroad tracks and bridges.

One of the defendants, Kuhlman, formerly worked for the Krupps at Essen, and the prosecution contended that the men of the gang on trial had been paid for their work by a Krupp official, who fled before he could be arrested.

It was charged that one of the objects of the gang was to kill the Germans who worked for the French.

The prosecution also claimed that the men received orders regularly from a spy organisation to gather information concerning troop movements and the French Intelligence Service.

It was declared that the real leader of the gang, who commanded a brigade which carried on a campaign of terror in Upper Silesia, had not been arrested.

The sentence of death against Schlogetter is the first of its kind imposed by French courts since the French troops entered the Ruhr.

INDIA OPPOSES SALT TAX.

DELHI, India, May 10.—(Associated Press)—The new tax on salt, proposed as a means of removing the deficit in the Indian imperial budget, is meeting with general opposition on the part of Indian legislators and their constituents. The bill now being sponsored by the administration provides for doubling the present tax.

POLITICS BEHIND CHINESE BANDITS

Bandits Have Threatened "Dire Consequences" If Attacking Troops Are Not Withdrawn.

SHANGHAI, May 10. (4 a.m.) — The kidnapped foreigners held by the Suchow bandits in the hills back of Linching "face dire consequences" unless the troops surrounding the brigands' stronghold are withdrawn, according to a message which has been sent out by one of the captives J. B. Powell, newspaperman of Shanghai.

PEKING, May 10. Canadian Press. —That some one of the Chinese political factions is behind the bandit raid on the Shanghai-Peking express on Sunday morning, with the object of embarrassing its opponents through international complications, following the kidnapping of foreigners, is the impression steadily gaining ground here.

The theory is said to be freely accepted in Chinese political circles that the bandit outrage was something more than an ordinary case of brigandage, inspired by the cupidity of unorganized outlaws.

There is no intimation that any idea of the aggression against foreigners entered into the alleged plot. Discussion in the capital appears to centre mainly on what effect the affair will have on this or that political party.

It is pointed out in some quarters that the semblance of organization reported to exist among the bandits of the Suchow district is dominated by an element which has no sympathy whatever with the recent successes in the Yangtze Valley of the militarists of the Chih-li-Party. This party's nominal leader is Marshal Wu Pei-Fu, military sponsor of the Present Peking Government.

Irrigation System Has Been Opened.

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., May 10. — Canadian Press. — H. Emmelkemp, of Hollandale, was the first to use water from the five million dollar Lethbridge Irrigation project on his land. Water was turned into the ditches about ten days ago for the first time, and has now reached Keho Lake Reservoir, about 30 miles below. It will be available for irrigating this years crop throughout the 105,000 acre project, by June 1st, the officials state.

FIRST BINDER TWINE.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., May 10 (Canadian Press). — The first shipment of binder twine this season for use in the Western Provinces reached here yesterday from Chicago.

The consignment consisted of 151,536 bales, or 7,576,000 pounds, and was valued at $800,000.

FRANCE HAS SPENT HUGE SUMS IN RUHR

The Total Will Reach 231 Million Francs By the End of This Month—To Ask Credits.

PARIS, May 10. — (Canadian Press). — By May 31, France will have spent 231,000,000 francs in the Ruhr since the French troops occupied Essen on January 11, according to the figures the French Government will ask the Chamber to vote as "Ruhr credits," on May 22.

Of this total amount the sum of 97,000,000 francs is for net military expenditures, while 133,000,000 is listed as civil expenses, comprising 5,000,000 for missions and 128,000,000 for advances to the railways. The balance covers for the most part the cost of French services which Germany refused to pay since the occupation.

The gross military expenditures amount to 142,000,000 francs, of which the sum of 45,000,000 is deductable as that would have been incurred normally for the maintenance of the occupation troops at home.

Bank Robbery Was Work of Amateurs.

MOOSE JAW, May 10 (Canadian Press). — Everything points to the fact that the Dollard, Sask., robbery of the Bank of Hochelaga was the work of amateurs.

It was ascertained at noon yesterday that the charge of nitro-glycerine or other explosive used to blow the safe was greatly in excess of what was necessary.

In fact, a portion of the safe was blown through the side of the building and across considerable vacant space to the side of another building, which it damaged by impact.

RED LEADERS ARE HOT OVER MOSCOW NOTE

British Note to Russia Was More Strongly Worded Than Was First Announced.

IS NOW PUBLIC.

LONDON, May 10. Canadian Press —It is expected that not the least important result of the British note to Moscow will be its reaction on labor here. Even before the publication of the text, which showed a much more vigorous phrasing than had been anticipated, the independent Labor Party, the Communists, and the spokesmen of the Parliamentary Labor Party, let it be known that they would regard as deplorable a cancellation of trade relations with Russia, which step they believed the impending note foreshadowed.

Now that the communication has become public there is a general belief that it may lead to a break in the relations between London and Moscow, although it was pointed out in some quarters that this government only demands that Russia cease her anti-British tactics.

The Daily Herald, presenting the extremist view, prints an article signed by the paper's diplomatic correspondent, who says that the policy dictating the note was the exact parallel of Austria's attitude towards Serbia in 1914. "The object," says the writer, "was the same—to cause a war."

The Parliamentary Labor Party earnestly hopes that there will be no break with Russia and is prepared to use all the means in its power as the official opposition to prevent such an occurrence. It seems safe to assume, therefore, that the despatch of the note will find a lively reflection on the floor of the House of Commons.

Sir Adam Beck to Run For Office.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., May 10 (Canadian Press). — There is a growing feeling in Port Arthur that Sir Adam Beck will be tendered an invitation to represent this constituency in the next Ontario Legislature within the next few days.

Some of the most prominent Conservatives and Liberals are said to have come to an understanding that if Sir Adam will consent to represent the constituency he would have the support of the two parties, which would practically assure his election.

Port Arthur citizens generally freely admit being "fed up" with party politics, and are now out to get the best results by representation.

It is understood that Sir Adam would be asked to be an "Independent."

King George Reported Somewhat Indisposed

LONDON, May 10 (Canadian Press). — King George was somewhat indisposed yesterday in consequence of the exceptional heat in Rome and his crowded programme, and probably also the unaccustomed cooking, according to The Times' correspondent in that city.

It was rumoured yesterday, the correspondent adds, that King George was seriously indisposed, and that the day's programme would be cancelled, but he was able to make the effort, and appeared in his usual health at a garden party at the British Embassy yesterday afternoon.

A FIRE SCARE AT LAKEFIELD

Blazing Coal Oil Stove in St. John's School-Room Creates Sensation--News Nuggets.

LAKEFIELD, May 10—On Tuesday afternoon a blazing coal oil stove made a sensation for a little while. The stove was in St. John's school room and was being used to boil the kettle for afternoon tea at the W.A. The ladies were engaged in the larger room packing their bale and the stove was ablaze when noticed. Messrs. George Spence and Arthur Barker rushed in and at a good deal of personal risk seized the stove and carried it out; Fred Wannamaker making an attempt to smother the flames with an old coat These was practically no damage done excepting a bad fright for the ladies and some painful burns for the men. No alarm was turned in, as the promptness of the young men in a very few minutes removed the danger.

Packed Their Bale

The W. A. of St. John's Church packed their bale on Tuesday which represents a large amount of work and effort on the part of the women and also the expenditure of a considerable sum of money. The bale contained an outfit for an Indian boy in the Blackfoot Indian school near Calgary.

News Paragraphs

Several new cars have appeared in the village this spring. Hill and Sabatino, and Hunter and Webster have each added a new seven passenger car to their equipment. W. G. Morrison has purchased a Sedan and F. J. Burgess a touring car.

The annual Cadet Inspection of the Lakefield school is scheduled for Monday, May 14th.

Personal Mention

W. A. Nixon of Nairn Centre is spending a few days with his family in the village.

RUMORS OF CHANGE NOT BEEN STOPPED

In Spite of Official Denials Rumors Persist That the Control of Hollinger Mine is to Change Hands.

LONDON, May 10. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—According to rumors which have not been squelched altogether by official denials there has been a project afoot for the transfer of the control of the Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines Limited of Porcupine, Ont., to an English company with a capital of no less than £12,000,000.

The financial editor of Truth points out that the other two chief gold mines of the world, the new Modderfontein and the government areas South Africa, are valued in the market respectively at £11,200,000 and £7,700,000. "Hollinger may—as some believe it will—eventually outshine its Rand rivals," says Truth, "but to ask the home public to pay £12,000,000 for seventy or seventy-five per cent. of its share would be tempting fortune."

Truth asks: "If it is desired to interest the British public in Hollinger why not open a London office and make a freer market in the existing shares?"

GOVERNMENT IS MAINTAINED IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Now Has a Majority of Four With Six Government Strongholds to Be Heard From.

LOST DEPOSITS.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., May 10. Canadian Press. — With six of the 36 seats in the Newfoundland House of Assembly to be heard from, the government to-night had 17 members and the Opposition 13. The districts which had not yet reported the result of the voting in last Thursday's general election, are normally government strongholds.

There appeared to be liklihood that Premier Sir Richard Squires would be returned to power with exactly same majority in the Assembly as in the general election of 1919. At that time 23 followers of the government were elected and 13 oppositionists.

Minister of Finance Bonia was defeated in Placentia district where the count was completed yesterday. The Opposition made a clean sweep in this district which returns three members. Sullivan, Opposition, headed the poll with 2,963 votes; Walsh, Opposition, a former Minister of Agriculture, had 2890, and Sinnott, Opposition 2873. Of the three government candidates, Bonia saved his electoral deposit by a margin of 30 votes, while his colleagues, Browne and Bindon, polled so few votes that they will forfeit their deposits.

The districts that had not reported early last night were Twillingate, electing three, and St. Barbe, Fogo, and Bugeo, each returning one member.

Manitoba Bridges Destroyed By Floods.

WINNIPEG, May 10 (Canadian Press). — Between two and three hundred bridges have been destroyed in Manitoba through floods during the past few weeks, according to the Hon. W. R. Clubb, Minister of Public Works.

No official estimate of the loss has been made, but it is thought it will total more than $200,000, while thousands of dollars also will have to be spent in re-building roads and culverts which were washed away.

Twelve Men Killed, in Oil Well Explosion

CORSICANA, Texas, May 10 (Canadian Press). — At least twelve men were killed by an explosion of the G. K. Hughes Developing Company's McKie No. 1 well, ten miles south-east of here late yesterday.

There is a possibility that the number of dead will reach 25.

A spark from a hammer on a rock as the control valve was being changed at the well ignited the oil and gas from the gusher.

A crew of 20 men, who came from Mexia yesterday morning, have not been accounted for.

The crew was working near the well when it caught fire.

The bodies of five men have been recovered.

Travis Owen 32, of Kerens, Tex., died in the hospital here last night as the result of injuries, making the total dead thirteen.

Physicians held out little hope for Emmett Bird, another victim.

ONE OF THE BEST DANCES OF YEAR

Two Hundred Guests at the Catholic Women's League Function in Lakefield.

The At Home given under the auspices of the Catholic Woman's League on Tuesday evening in the Lakefield House, was a very great success. About two hundred were present and a very pleasant evening was spent in dancing and cards. Excellent music was provided by the Syncopated Trio ,and for the square dances by Messrs. Sullivan and McCabe. There were numerous guests present from Peterborough and also from Young's Point and other points, all enjoying what really was one of the nicest dances of the season.

About midnight a bountiful supper was served by a very efficient committee of ladies, after which the dancing was resumed and continued until the wee sma' hours. The reputation of the Catholic Women's League 'At Homes' has spread far and wide and they are steadily growing in popularity.

FRUITLESS DAY OF HOT DEBATE AT CONFERENCE

Ismet Pasha Wants Turkey to Pay Her War Debt in Depreciated Paper Money.

NO RESULTS.

LAUSANNE, May 10. Canadian Press. — Yesterday there was another day of fruitless debate in the Near Eastern Peace conference without decisions; both Turkey and the Allies rigidly maintained their positions on the disputed questions.

Ismet Pasha announced that if Turkey must pay the Ottoman public debt on a gold basis it would drive Turkey into bankruptcy. He argued that the Allies were about to ask for modifications in the concessions held by their nationals, and that both wages and raw materials have soared; therefore the Allies should take into consideration the world's financial disorder and authorize payment of the Turkish debt in the present day Ottoman paper currency.

Maritime Bloc Is Not to Be Formed.

OTTAWA, May 10.— (Canadian Press.)— That there was no likelihood of forming a Maritime Provinces party or bloc in the House of Commons, was the declaration of Hon. A. B. Cobb, Secretary of State to Canadian Press, yesterday. Hon. Mr. Copp stated that on arrival in Ottawa Wednesday of Mr. McMonagle and other members of the Moncton deputation, a meeting had been held in his office at which the railway rates question was discussed by the deputation and members of the two parties representing New Brunswick. There was a likelihood Mr. Copp intimated, that on matters of geperal interest to the Maritime provinces, many of which arose from time to time and which were without any political significance either way members from that part of the country would discuss the situation and perhaps act together to some extent, but nothing further was planned.

No organization was proposed beyond perhaps discussions from time to time on such matters as railway rates and service.

DEVELOPING NEW ONTARIO.

The Speech from the Throne at the prorogation of the Legislature draws attention to the provision made by the Ontario Government for continuing development work in the north and northwestern portions of the Province.

The Examiner believes that the Drury administration deserves the thanks of the Province generally for the interest it has shown in this matter, and the evidence it has given of a sincere desire to aid in the development of the northern section of Ontario.

The completion of the Provincial railway to James Bay means the opening up of a vast new field, offering varied possibilities for exploration and development.

Similarly, the extension of the Government railway through the Kirkland and Larder Lake districts will render accessible a large gold-bearing area.

These are enterprises in which the whole Province should be vitally interested, for it is as important to Old Ontario that the northern part of the Province should be fully developed as it is to Eastern Canada that the Prairie Provinces should be given every chance to expand.

Prosperity for New Ontario means prosperity for Old Ontario, more orders for manufacturers, more employment for workers.

That is why the people of the Province generally should feel grateful that the Drury Government has to a considerable extent visualized the needs of the northern part of Ontario and has made provision for development work that should prove of very material interest.

PETERBOROUGH, "THE EXCURSION CITY."

The action of Mayor Taylor in inviting General Motors of Oshawa to hold their annual excursion in Peterborough—an invitation which will bring at least one thousand excursionists to this city if accepted—suggests the advisability of paying more attention to the encouragement of such picnics.

Few centres in Eastern Ontario can offer so many facilities in this respect as can Peterborough, and there seems no reason why this city should not be the mecca for many outings each summer—in fact, become widely known as an excursion city.

Nicholls Oval and Inverlea Park, for example, could be much more widely utilized in this respect.

It is possible for an excursion train to be pulled in beside the Oval, and the two parks offer every accommodation for excursionists. The Oval itself is available for baseball, football, tennis and races, while immediately across the river Inverlea Park provides swimming facilities.

Hot water is available for meals, and there is an abundance of shade trees for picnic parties.

Jackson Park is also available for Sunday school excursions, with every facility for entertaining little folks, and here, too, it is possible for trains to reach the threshold of the park.

With its many other attractions Peterborough should have no trouble in drawing to itself excursions from all parts of Eastern Ontario, and it would be good business for the city generally if the question of calling attention to the facilities offered here were to be discussed with a view to action.

UNDERPRIVILEGED BOYS.

At the beautiful camp established by the Peterborough Rotary Club on Clear Lake some fifty-two boys, most of them of the class that has come to be described as underprivileged, were last summer given the unusual enjoyment of a two weeks' holiday under ideal conditions—a holiday that was a red letter occasion in the lives of these boys and that gave them a new viewpoint on life generally.

In taking care of so many boys the Rotarians were greatly assisted by the generosity of a number of public-spirited citizens who contributed largely to the commissariat of the camp by liberal donations of foodstuffs.

It is hoped that the plan will commend itself again to the citizens of Peterborough, and that many of them will be glad to help give half a hundred underprivileged local lads a real holiday—a vacation such as more lucky boys look forward to each year as a matter of course.

The facilities for such a camp have been provided by the Rotarians at a considerable cost, and the community should be glad to second the efforts of the organization along the line suggested.

Donations of bread, milk, butter, meat, sugar, flour, tea and coffee and other staple foodstuffs will be greatly appreciated by the Get-the-Goods Committee of the Rotary Club, of which Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie is the Chairman.

Citizens who would like to "do their bit" in this connection are asked to communicate with Mr. Gillespie, who will give them all the necessary information as to what is required.

The underprivileged boys of Peterborough are worth looking after and the present appeal affords an opportunity for the community to show that it thinks so.

THE CHEMONG SPEEDWAY.

Early in the season as it is, the authorities are receiving complaints of speeding and reckless driving on the Chemong road.

The six-mile strip between the summer resort and Peterborough has been for several years a veritable speedway for reckless drivers who try to set up new records.

Why they should select this particular piece of roadway as the scene of their recklessness—for it is not a particularly good road, it is more hilly than most of the highways in the district and there are several points on the road where fast driving is more than usually dangerous—has always been more or less a mystery.

Nevertheless the Chemong road, especially on the occasion of social functions at the park, has come to be the most perilous section of roadway in the district to negotiate because of the recklessness of a number of wild drivers who crash along at break-neck speed regardless of the consequences to themselves or anybody else who happens to get in their way.

It is time this crazy driving on the Chemong road was stopped.

Fatal accidents have been avoided only by a miracle on innumerable occasions, and it will be very much in the public interest if an early example is made of the most flagrant offenders.

The Examiner understands that it is the intention of the Provincial Police to see that condiions are made safer for those who have to travel along the road in question, and the reckless drivers would be well advised to accept this article as a warning.

The Chemong road should no longer be regarded as a speedway.

ANOTHER NEWSPAPER AMALGAMATION.

The Stratford Beacon and the Stratford Herald have been amalgamated, says the Toronto Star. Only the other day it was announced that the Renfrew Journal had sold out to the Renfrew Mercury. And these are merely the latest manifestations of a steady tendency towards elimination and consolidation which has been observed in Canadian journalism during the past decade.

Out of Ontario's two dozen cities, four have a population exceeding 50,000. Of the other twenty, there are only three, Kingston, Guelph, Belleville, which have more than one daily newspaper. Yet as lately as 1915, twelve out of the twenty were supporting two dailies, and there were others, such as Woodstock and Galt, which had been two-daily centres prior to that.

In the larger cities also there are journalistic "grave-posts." Toronto has four English dailies where but a year or two ago there were six. Hamilton and Ottawa have two instead of three. London has for many years had two, a third having at one time made a vain effort to establish itself. But the smaller centres are now single paper constituencies with the two exceptions already mentioned. In almost every case the population served by the one paper is larger than that to which rivals used to cater.

The process of amalgamation and elimination has been especially rapid since the commencement of the great war. In that time considerably more than forty Canadian dailies have been absorbed or have suspended. And a host of smaller papers have disappeared. Many of the "departed" were of considerable influence in their own constituencies. With a Provincial election approaching, some of them will be decidedly missed.

Elections, indeed, will lose some of their picturesqueness, and perhaps some of their interest, in ridings where a single independent daily now replaces the Conservative and Liberal newspapers which were accustomed, at such times as this, to go at it "hammer and tongs." But people do not take their party politics as seriously as they once did. An increasing number are thinking for themselves and voting as they think.

SINGAPORE.

The spectacle of the astonishing Mr. Woodsworth gravely asking the Canadian Government whether it had "acquiesced" in the policy of the British Admiralty for strengthening the defences of Singapore, is one that, we are told, made Parliament laugh, but it must also have made the angels weep. The British Government is spending its own money at Singapore. We are not contributing a penny. It is spending this money to establish a fortified base for the navy which, among other things, protects Canada, but to whose upkeep we make absolutely no contribution whatever.

Yet it seems to the woolly-minded Woodsworth that we ought to be invited to "acquiesce" before Great Britain dares to spend her own money on a naval base at a port she captured without an ounce of help from us where her own exclusive fleet is to find defence and succour when it is fighting for an Empire, the destruction of which would infallibly carry Canada with it. When Parliament laughed, it probably laughed at the Winnipeg member's modesty. If Mr. Woodsworth will stand up and urge our Government to help pay for the defences at Singapore, then he would be in a much more logical position when asking censoriously if it had been invited to "acquiesce."

* * * *

His worry seems to be that this strengthening of Singapore "signifies possibly strained relations with Japan." When we thoughtfully review recent history, this is really a remarkable objection to come from a Labor leader. Two years ago we had a Japanese alliance. There was no thought of "strained relations" then with Japan; but there was a very considerable amount of talk about this Japanese alliance constituting a menace to the United States and so threatening "strained relations" with that great democratic nation. Labor was then very much against risking a misunderstanding with the American Republic for the sake of "an Asiatic despotism" which they were wont to call "Prussian." But at Washington, the democratic policy, the Labor policy, triumphed; and the Japanese alliance was sacrificed to a closer friendship with the American people.

And now we find a Labor spokesman wanting to know whether Great Britain has permitted "strained relations with Japan" to become a possibility without consulting us. What we would have done, if consulted, he does not suggest Mr Meighen, our then Premier, was all for the abolition of the Japanese alliance. But it should be plain, even to Mr. Woodsworth, that if we have abandoned the Japanese alliance, at the bidding of Labor and idealists generally, it would be criminal and suicidal folly not to recognize the necessity of providing for the defence of the Empire in case Japan—having been dropped as an ally—might some day make the gap between us still wider.

* * * *

But, of course, the fortification of Singapore no more implies "strained relations with Japan" than the fortification of Portsmouth implies strained relations with France. The Empire is bound to provide defence against any possible enemy or combination of enemies, no matter how ardently we hope that all the world will always love us. The motto of far-seeing statesmanship must always be that nothing is impossible in the way of extraordinary international re-alignments. So we constantly take precautions against the "impossible."—Montreal Star.

PROMOTE SUMMER ART.

NEW YORK, May 10.—(Associated Press)—Community art centers in country school houses deserted during the summer vacation period, are advocated by David Mannes, a musician of this city, who urges the organization of art clubs with headquarters in the empty schoolhouses for more widespread knowledge and enjoyment of art. Such centers he says, would provide not only for the study of music, sculpture painting, etc., but also give opportunities for wider companionship.

"Students and teachers in the cities would be glad to direct such clubs for a nominal sum during vacation time," Mr. Mannes declares. "Benefit would result to the children of farmers and country folk, and to the parents themselves, whose hunger for art goes unsatisfied. The development of the artistic impulse latent in everyone and stifled, too often, in those who are far away from the cities, is of great importance to America's intellectual advancement and spiritual growth."

OBITUARY

MRS. CECIL TIMS.

On the evening of Thursday, May 3rd, there passed at Lifford one of Manvers' most respected citizens in the person of Adeline Cairns, beloved wife of Cecil H. H. Tims. Her death was not unexpected as her illness had extended over a period of three years. Despite all that medical aid could do and the constant, faithful nursing of kind friends, her health could not be regained and her young life was cut off in her thirties.

Besides her sorrowing husband there are left to mourn the loss of a devoted wife and loving mother her three children—George of Lindsay Collegiate Institute, Doris of Lifford Public School, and Baby Mary, scarce four years old. Her mother, Mrs. Alexander Cairns of Lifford, was constantly at the bedside of her daughter when her health would permit, as also were her only sisters, Mrs. N. Mills of Lifford and Mrs. W. Stinson of Janetville.

Perhaps no greater fortitude was ever shown by a sufferer, as all through her years of sickness no word of complaint was ever heard to pass her lips. She bore her suffering in silence.

Relatives and friends were present from Toronto, Peterborough, Lindsay and Port Hope, as well as those in the vicinity of her home. The high esteem in which she and her family are held was evidenced by the procession, one and one-half miles in length, that slowly followed her casket to its last resting place in beautiful St. Mary's Cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Bickel of the Methodist Church and Rev. Weir of the Anglican Church. Those two faithful ministers of Christ had been her constant comfort all through her trying illness and their kind and thoughtful words at both the house and the grave were most fitting and appropriate. Her seeming loss had been a victory, and she had now entered upon that larger life where her influence for good would increase rather than diminish.

She is not dead, the child of our affection,
But gone on to that school
Where she no longer needs our poor protection
And Christ himself doth rule.
Forever and forever within that blessed home
And there to wait a little while
Till all her dear ones come.

TOKIO, May 9.—The Tokio Electric Bureau, which operates the street car system of the city, has adopted new measures to relieve congestion at the rush hours. It has asked the banks and business concerns of Marunouchi, the Wall Street district of Tokio, to re-arrange the hours of their employes so that all will not arrive at and leave their offices at the same time.

A recent investigation revealed that about 200,000 persons employed in offices in the Marunouchi district ride on the cars between 8 and 9 o'clock in the morning, and between 5 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon. It is believed the present traffic jam will be eliminated if half of the workers arrive and depart half an hour earlier than the rest.

Say Wilful Burning Property at Lindsay.

LINDSAY, May 10.—The fire inquiry conducted by Provincial Fire Marshal Heaton into the cause of the destruction of the boathouse and launch of Mr. Thomas Massau about a fortnight ago was adjourned indefinitely at midnight Tuesday.

The Fire Marshal intimated that he was satisfied the fire was of incendiary origin and he would spare no effort to find the guilty party. Some of the evidence, he declared, was unbelievable, the stories told by two witnesses indicating that they had been carefully rehearsed for the inquiry.

The destruction of boathouses and contents has been going on for several years along the Scugog.

ELECTIONS ON JUNE 25 NOMINATIONS JUNE 14

Official Announcement to This Effect Made by Premier Drury — Asks Dissolution of Legislature.

TORONTO, May 10.—(Canadian Press.)—Monday, June 25 has been set as the date for the Provincial election, with nomination day on June 14, eleven days previous. The official announcement was made by Premier Drury last evening, following an afternoon meeting of the Provincial Cabinet. Writs for the election will be issued and dated today, May 10, and formal proclamation immediately made.

Yesterday, the Premier visited His Honor, the Lieutenant Governor, and asked him to dissolve the fifteenth session of the Legislature.

From the time of the proclamation, which will put the dissolution into effect until election day all Ontario's 111 members of the Provincial Legislature become ex-M.L.A.'s. The Government, of course carries on until the electors decide its fate, and even after that, if the decision is against the government, until the new government takes office. In the event of success at the polls, cabinet re-organization is said to be the intention of the Premier. Who is to go and who is to come, of course only the Premier and one or two others know. There was nothing new at Parliament buildings yesterday with regard to the situation of the Attorney-Generalship. It seems fairly well defined, however, that if Hon. Mr .Raney retires, Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., can have the post, but he is said to be intent upon remaining in private legal practice.

HUGE EAGLE ATTACKS MAN AT PORT ARTHUR

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., May 10 (Canadian Press). — Oakley Hall, pump manipulator of the Canadian National Railways at Horne Payne, two divisions east of here, was attacked on Monday morning by an eagle.

While he was walking along the track, the bird swooped down upon him, pinning its claws into his heavy mackinaw coat.

He struggled with the bird, and though bruised by the blows from its mighty wings, he managed to grip it by the neck which he twisted until life was extinct.

The cloth of Hall's coat had to be torn away to free the bird.

The eagle measured 6 feet 2 inches from tip to tip of the wings. It is of a type known as the American eagle.

SAYS SNOW WILL BE GOOD FOR ONTARIO

GUELPH, May 10. Canadian Press — According to Professor W. C. Blackwood, the head of the Physics Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, the snowfall of yesterday is the best possible thing that could happen to the farms of Ontario at the present time "The ground has been as dry as a bone," he said. "And the snow will do far more good than a rain fall, because it will melt and sink in instead of running off."

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Result of Field Crop Competition — Real Estate Transfers—Personals.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 10.—The field crop competition, which is held annually under the auspices of the Seymour Agricultural Society, is always an event which claims the interest of the farmers of this district. Although the entries for grain do not close until May 26th, and for corn on June 16th, a number of farmers have already sent in their names to Secretary J. N. Stone, and paid the required fee. The crops entered for competition this year by the local society are fodder, corn and oats. All contestants must be paid-up members of the society. The competition will and with the judging of the oat crops growing in the field as the society has decided against the threshed grain feature. The corn entered is of the fodder type and in the event of other than the standard type of either corn or oats being planted by any farmer the judge, in making his awards, will deduct two points from the total score.

Nearly all of the farmers who have already entered will compete in both classes. The contestants to date are as follows:

Corn—Ernest McCook, W. A. Wynn, Alex. Hume, William Rennie, Chas. Bonnycastle, Robert Innis, Henry McKelvie, W. J. Ross, Joseph Hoey, Garnet Curle, Thomas Weatherell, David Durran, Marshall West and Charles Bedford, all of Seymour township; Lorne Evans and Peterson Bros., of Norham, and Roy Walker of Rowdon.

The society will receive from the government at Toronto the sum of $100 to be given in prizes at these competitions and this grant must be supplemented from the funds of the society by $50. Seven prizes are offered in each class of $20, $15, $12, $10, $8, $6 and $4. All prize winners and those who score 85 points or over are eligible to show at the winter fair at Ottawa two bushel sacks of oats from the winning fields. Each winner of a prize for oats must show at the Campbellford Fair one sheaf of grain, not less than eight inches in diameter at the binder, provided the society gives prizes of $4, $3 and $2 for the best of such sheaves.

The unusually large number of entries indicate that only the growing interest of the farmers in these competitions but also the nigh standard of agriculture in this district.

Celebration on 24th

Arrangements have been completed for the celebration which will be held on May 24th under the auspices of the be divided as follows: $150 for the free-society. The sum of $400 is offered in prizes for the horse races, this money to be divided as follows: $150 for the free-for-all; $150 for the 2:20, trot or pace, and $100 in the 2:35 class. The purses in each contest will be divided, 50, 30 and 20 per cent. A large entry of the best horses in the district is expected, and the track, one of the best half-mile circuits in Centrol Ontario, will be in excellent condition.

There will also be a lacrosse game between Hastings and Campbellford players and the town's new baseball team, one of the members of the Northumberland league will open the home season here; their opponents on the 24th being Warkworth, one of the strongest teams in the league on the records of last season's show.

The Minstrels Again

In the evening another opportunity will be given the public to hear the Campbellford minstrels, whose performance recently was so popular that they filled Coles' opera house to capacity three nights in succession. They will be heard again on the 24th in the same theatre, and the public can accept the assurance that they will present several new features instead of conforming themselves to the former programme.

Orangemen to Celebrate

Some one started a rumor to the effect that the Orange celebration planned for July 12th had fallen through, but this report is officiely denied by Leonard Carr, master of the local lodge. Mr. Carr says that all arrangements have been secured, and lodges from Lindsay, Lakefield and other towns in the district have sent word that they will take part. It is 13 years since there was an Orange celebration in Campbellford and Mr. Carr says that the intention is to make the coming anniversary a day long to be remembered in town.

The procession will form in the open space near Dr. Macoun's residence and Coles' opera house has been secured for the accommodation of the brethren. The speeches and other exercises will be held in Beatty's Grove on the west side of the river.

Some time ago the town council granted the Orangemen authority to put up decorations and banners on the streets.

LATEST DOG FAD

LONDON, May 9.—Fashions in dogs change almost as rapidly as women's dresses, and the latest fad amongst dog fanciers here is the Saluki, or gazelle hound, which experts predict will become even more popular than the Alsatian.

So far about a dozen speciments of the Saluki are in this country, but they have played an important part in the championships dog show at Holland Park.

The Saluki is the grey hound of the East, his home being among the nomadic tribes of the Arabian deserts. The biggest breeder of Salukis in England is Mrs. Gladys M. Lance, whose husband, Brig.-General Lance, was presented with two of the dogs by an Arab Sheik in Damascus two years ago.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

(To Be Continued).

"In about a month," he replied. "I've got to fatten my steers and harden them on a special diet before we barbecue them. Don Nicolas Sandoval will have charge of the feast, and if I furnished him with thin, tough range steers, he'd charge me with modernism and disown me. Old Bill Conway never would forget it. He'd nag me to my grave."

"When do we give Panchito his try-out, Don Mike?"

"The track is ready for it now, Kay, and Pablo tells me Panchito's half-brother is now a most dutiful member of society and can get there in a hurry when he's sent for. But he's only a half thoroughbred. Shall we start training to-morrow?"

"Oh goody. By all means."

The long and patient methods of education to which a green race-horse is subjected were unknown on the Rancho Palomar. Panchito was a trained saddle animal, wise, sensible courageous and with a prodigious faith that his rider would get him safely out of any jam into which they might blunder together. The starting-gate bothered him at first, but after half a dozen trials, he realized that the web, flying upward, had no power to hurt him and was, moreover, the signal for a short, jolly contest of speed with his fellows of the rancho. Before the week was out he was "breaking" from the barrier with speed and serenity born of the knowledge that this was exactly what was expected of him; whereupon the others horses that Don Mike used to simulate a field of competitors, took heart of hope at Panchito's complacenc and broke rather well with him.

Those were long, lazy days on the Palomar. June had cast its withering smile upon the San Gregorio and the green hills had turned to a parched brown. Grasshoppers whirred everywhere; squirrels whistled; occasional little dust-devils whirled up the now thoroughly dry river-bed and the atmosphere was redolent of the aroma of dust and tarweed. Pablo and his dusky relatives, now considerably augmented (albeit Don Mike had issued no invitation to partake of his hospitality), trained colts as roping horses or played Mexican monte in the shade of the help's quarters. Occasionally they roused themselves long enough to justify their inroads upon Don Mike's groceries by harvesting a forty-acre field of alfalfa and irrigating it for another crop, for which purpose a well had been sunk in the bed of the dry San Gregorio.

The wasted energies of those peons finally commenced to irritate John Parker.

"How long are you going to tolerate the presence of this healthy lot of cholo loafers and grafters, Farrel?" he demanded one day.... "Have you any idea of what it is costing you to support that gang?"

"Yes," Farrel replied. "About ten dollars a day."

"You cannot afford that expense."

"I know it. But then, they're the local color, they've always been and they will continue to be while I have title to this ranch. Why, their hearts would be broken if I refused them permission to nestle under the cloak of my philanthropy, and he is a poor sort of white man who will disappoint a poor devil of a cholo."

"You're absolutely incomprehensible," Parker declared.

Farrel laughed. "You're not," he replied. "Know anything about a stop-watch?"

"I know all about one."

"Well, your daughter has sent to San Francisco for the best stop-watch money can buy, and it's here. I've had my father's old stop-watch cleaned and regulated. Panchito's on edge and we're going to give him a half-mile try-out to-morrow, so I want two stop-watches on him. Will you oblige, sir?"

Parker willingly consented, and the following morning Farrel and his guests repaired to the race-track. Kay, mounted on Panchito in racing gear, was, by courtesy, given a position next to the rail. Eighty pounds of dark meat, answering to the name of Alasandro Trujillo and claiming Pablo Artelan as his grandfather, drew next position on Peep-sight, as Farrel had christened Panchito's half-brother, while three other half-grown cholo youths, gathered at random here and there, faced the barrier on the black mare, the old gray roping horse and a strange horse belonging to one of the volunteer jockeys.

There was considerable backing, filling and some bucking at the barrier, and Pablo and two of his relatives, acting as starters, were kept busy straightening out the field. Finally, with a shrill yip, Pablo released the web and the flighty young Peep-sight was away in front, with the black mare's nose at his saddle-girth and the field spread out behind him, with Panchito absolutely last.

REV. J. A. MACKENZIE INDUCTED, GUELPH

Rev. J. A. MacKenzie Takes Up New Charge—Rev. J. R. Webb Present.

The induction service of Rev. James A. MacKenzie, former pastor of Knox Church, into the pastoral charge of Chalmers Presbyterian Church in Guelph, took place on Thursday, May 3, in the presence of a large congregation. Many local and visiting clergymen were present to welcome the new pastor, and the gathering was presided over by Rev. K. J. McDonald of Galt, assisted by Rev. M. F. Stewart of Linwood.

The Guelph Evening Mercury in referring to the induction ceremony says: "As a very forceful speaker, Rev. Mr. Mackenzie created a splendid impression when he conducted the service at Chalmers Church before being extended a call, and the congregation consider themselves very fortunate in obtaining a man of his scholarly ability as their new pastor."

The induction ceremony was carried out in accordance with the regulations of the Presbyterian church and was to a great extent formal. An interesting incident was the presence of Rev. J. R. Webb of Kitchener, formerly of Murray Street Baptist Church here Mr. Webb paid a glowing tribute to Mr. MacKenzie as a gentleman, a scholar, and a pastor.

Inaugural Sermon.

On Sunday last Rev. Mr. MacKenzie preached his inaugural sermon to a large congregation, taking as his text 1st. John, 3:2—"Beloved now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He shall appeared we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is."

HUSBAND DIDN'T DARE LEAVE HER ALONE HER HEART WAS SO BAD

Those feelings of faintness, those dizzy spells, the all-gone sinking sensations which come on from time to time indicate a weakened condition of the heart and a disordered state of the nerves.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

have no equal as a remedy to strengthen the heart, invigorate the nerves and build up the run-down system.

Mrs. C. Vanhorn, Eckville, Alta., writes:—'About a year ago I had heart trouble. My husband didn't dare leave me alone, and often I would just feel kind of faint and my heart would seem to stop beating. I would just faint away, and it would sometimes be an hour before they could bring me back to life. Someone told me about Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I got three boxes I took them and felt much better, so continued all Winter, and now I never feel any such faintness. I sure ly do appreciate the good they have done for me."

OMEMEE PLANNING A DEMONSTRATION

Will Celebrate May 24 in Fitting Manner—Recent Masonic Visitors.

OMEMEE, May 10.—On account of this being a busy season for the farmers, the concert put on under the auspices of the Tuxis' Boys of the Methodist church, was not as largely attended as was expected. However, the programme was excellent. The proceeds amounted to about $70.

Mr. Arthur Blight, who is well known by many in Omemee, has resigned his position as soloist and choirmaster at Trinity Methodist church Toronto and will devote his time to special Sunday work. Kept Her Vigil 30 Years

FLORENCE MARTUS.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 10.—Who is the waving girl?

Ask any sailor whose vessel has passed out of or entered Savannah harbor—he'll give you an earful.

Or if there's no sailor available, read this:

Her name is Miss Florence Martus. She's gained her title because for 30 years she's saluted every ship that's left or entered the harbor—with a flying bit of cloth by day, with a lantern at night.

Miss Martus, who lives at the entrance of the Savannah (Ga.) harbor, where her brother is in the light-house service, is probably the most famous woman in Savannah if not in the whole south.

Every vessel that goes by salutes her. The giant steamers send out their deep-toned message of greeting or goodby as they plough the waters of the river and the smaller craft either dips its colors or sounds its whistle as it makes the journey into or out of the port.

Romance Legend.

Miss Martus says she does this because she loves the sea and the men who roam it. There has been built up a legend of a lost lover who never returns, but Miss Martus and her brother George, who lives with her, do not confirm this pretty romance.

"The sailors are all my sweethearts," says the apostle of the light and of the waving signal. "I am pining for none in particular. I greet them all as friends.

"I greet the ships and the smaller craft because I find pleasure in it. I began the practice in the fall of 1887 and I have not failed since then to be on hand when a ship sails in or out.

"If I am away from home, I see to it that there is someone on guard to take my place."

Gets Many Gifts.

The waving girl has been the recipient of many gifts from admiring friends. She treasures each of them as she does the correspondence that has come to her from all parts of the world from those whom she has never known personally.

It is believed if a letter was mailed to her from the far corners of the globe merely addressed "The Waving Girl" it would come direct to her because she is so well known.

"Am I lonesome?" Miss Martus repeated a question put to her. should say not. Who could be with so many visitors to greet each day and night?"

Miss Martus is not merely a fair weather friend. She and her brother have rendered aid to a number of vessels in distress near their home in stormy weather.

Those who have been motoring through the county give it as their opinion that fall wheat in this district never looked better at this season of the year. It was well covered with a warm blanket of snow until the season was fairly well advanced, and now looks green and sturdy with every indication of an abundant crop.

Wright vs Wright Settled

In the county court here, before His Honour Judge Ward, the case of Wright vs Wright came up for hearing. The parties in the case reside in East Northumberland and it was an action between father and son, the latter bringing action to recover pay for some Alsike clover seed, which it was alleged the father sold, and upon which the plaintiff alleged that he had claim. After a part of the evidence had been heard the parties came to a settlement. M. K. Langdon, Brighton, was counsel for the son and G. Dreury, Brighton, for the defendant.

Local and Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Mann, Montreal have taken apartments here and will spend a part of the summer at least in Cobourg.

Would Help Boys.

Recently Lt.-Col. J. W. Odell, Inspector for District No. 2 Northumberland and Durham, gave an interesting and practical talk before the members of the Cobourg Rotary Club along educational lines, dealing with the worthy subject of helping the boy to secure a good education so that he will be qualified to go out in life and fulfil a position of responsibility. The indifference of parents as to whether a child received a good education or not was responsible for considerable failure along these lines. A boy loves to do things and by giving him manual training he can get away from the monotonous routine of school life, and be kept longer in our schools. Col. Odell considered it little short of crime to send a boy out into life unprepared for its struggles. The remedy lies in educating the parent to the truth that education is the best thing that a boy can have as a resource. Not half of our school pupils, he opined, get a better education than the public schools offered.

Make the Rinso liquid first

Do not put Rinso direct from the package into the tub. Mix half a package of Rinso in a little cool water until it is like cream. Then add two quarts of boiling water, and when the froth subsides, you will have a clean amber-coloured liquid. Add this liquid to the wash tub, until you get the big lasting Rinso suds. Then soak the clothes clean.

Rinso is as splendid for the regular family washing as Lux is for fine fabrics.

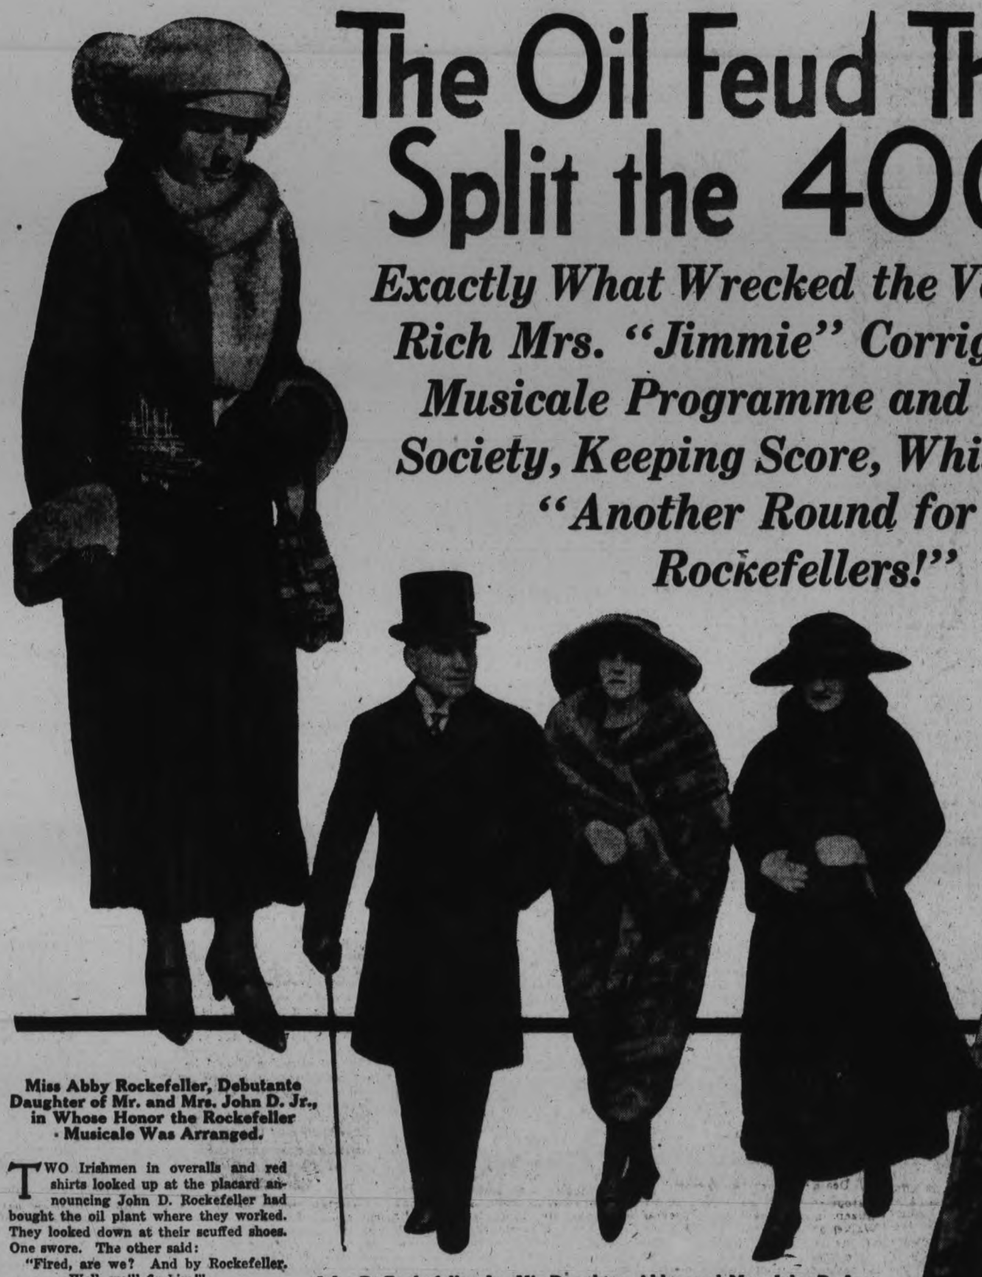
The Oil Feud That Split the 400

Exactly What Wrecked the Very Rich Mrs. "Jimmie" Corrigan's Musicale Programme and Why Society, Keeping Score, Whispers: "Another Round for the Rockefellers!"



Miss Abby Rockefeller, Debutante Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Jr., in Whose Honor the Rockefeller Musicale Was Arranged.

TWO Irishmen in overalls and red shirts looked up at the placard announcing John D. Rockefeller had bought the oil plant where they worked. They looked down at their scuffed shoes. One swore. The other said:

"Fired, are we? And by Rockefeller. . . . Well, we'll fix him!"

Two generations later a beautiful woman, married to the millionaire son of one of those Irishmen, reads in a newspaper that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will herald his daughter's debut in New York society with a musicale. And a musicale was exactly what she had planned to mark her own splash in the Manhattan Four Hundred!

The record does not say the beautiful lady did anything so plebeian as to look down at her slippered feet and swear. But the cables report that she has abandoned, at the eleventh hour, her plans for a society invasion and, rather than play second fiddle to the Rockefellers, will go to —India!

There, in a nutshell, are the first and latest chapters of a feud that started sixty years ago in a greasy oil refinery and will rage this Winter in Fifth avenue ballrooms.

Then it was a feud of red shirts, dirt, sweat and dollars. Now it is a feud of white shirts, orchids, perfume and social prestige. Then the principals were "Irish Johnnie" Corrigan, with his pipe and his pick, and John D. Rockefeller, just starting his fortune. Now the principals are Mrs. James Corrigan, chum of dukes and countesses, and little Abby Rockefeller, John D.'s debutante grand-daughter!

Is there anywhere, save in America, where such a changing drama could take place in half a century?

John and James Corrigan, brothers, emigrated from Ireland just about the time the high-wheeled bicycle was coming into its own, Garfield ran for the Presidency, Brooklyn Bridge was being built, oil was discovered in many parts of the Middle West, and John D. Rockefeller emerged from a clerkship in Cleveland to a junior partnership in Andrews, Clark & Co., oil operators.

The Corrigan brothers went to Cleveland. They worked with their hands. They got jobs in an oil refinery. They saved money. Some of it they invested in the business. They hoped and dreamed of millions.

And then, just as prosperity seemed to beckon around the corner, their small plant was absorbed by the newly organized Standard Oil Company along with dozens of other competitors, and the Corrigan boys found themselves jobless and all but "broke."

Those were rough-and-tumble days in the oil business. Old residents of Cleveland tell how the Corrigan brothers, "squeezed," as they claimed, by Rockefeller, fought back; and how a bitter feud developed until Standard Oil triumphed and the Corrigans went into steel instead.

In steel they made money—not as much as Rockefeller was making, but enough to rise to a place among Cleveland's pioneer millionaires. They still held some of their oil interests, however, and there is an old saying among Cleveland business men of the elder generation that John or James Corrigan would never turn down a tipster who offered a chance to take a flyer against Standard Oil.

James was the richer of the Corrigan brothers, but when his family was lost in a yachting disaster on the Great Lakes most of his fortune, along with John's, went to John's children. And James Corrigan, son of John, who eventually came into the bulk of the Corrigan millions, inherited them with those rankling memories of John D. Rockefeller.

James the Second became as high a figure in Cleveland society as his father and uncle had been humble in the days when they were newly landed from the old country. The spotlight picked him out in his youth, when he was sued for breach of promise by Georgiana Young, of Pittsburgh. And then, some years later, Cleveland society was startled when James brought home from Chicago a beautiful young bride.

Mrs. "Jimmie" Corrigan immediately cut a name for herself as the most glittering hostess in the Middle West. Dashing, lovely, ambitious, she made no secret of her desire to boost the Corrigan stock as high socially as the Corrigan millions would carry it.

And it didn't take her long to achieve that goal—in Cleveland. Which, as Mrs. Corrigan frankly informed her friends, was by no means the half of it. "Beyond the Alps lies Italy." And beyond Cleveland lay, for Mrs. Corrigan, that Italy of all American social climbers—New York.

There is, in New York, society of many kinds. There is society that will welcome any good fellow who will buy a drink. There is society that will admit any girl with a Southern accent and a grandfather who lived in Virginia. But there is only one society with Palm Beach villas and Newport cottages, with its box at the Metropolitan and its shooting lodges in Westchester County. And that society is like a safety-deposit box in a bank vault. Nobody can get in who hasn't the key.

It would appear that the vivid Mrs. "Jimmie" Corrigan, with the Corrigan millions and her own ripe beauty and her Cleveland conquests, had plenty of keys to try on the bank vault society of Manhattan. It may be that some of them fit. It may be that some of them didn't. Greater locksmiths than Mrs. "Jimmie" have tried to open the door to the Four Hundred—and failed.

Whatever her degree of success, the gossips held it significant when she suddenly resigned her suite at a New York hotel and sailed away to London. The folks back in Cleveland said that Mrs. Corrigan planned to repeat abroad her New York social victories. The folks along Fifth avenue only smiled.

But during the past season there seems to be little doubt that Mrs. "Jimmie" Corrigan stampeded British society. That is, if the society cable news whisking out of London is any criterion.

"Mrs. James Corrigan, of New York and Cleveland, has leased Mrs. George Keppel's house on Grosvenor street and plans to entertain extensively."

"Mrs. James Corrigan was hostess last night at an elaborate dinner dance. Her guests included Ambassador and Mrs. George Harvey, the Spanish Ambassador and his wife, Baroness Moncheur, the Duchess of Somerset, Lady Beatrice Pole-Carew and Viscount Churchill."

"Royalty honored Mrs. 'Jimmie' Corrigan's opening dinner of the season at her beautiful house in Grosvenor street, Wednesday night, Princess Mary Louise, who is regarded as one of her best friends, attending."

"Among the American women presented at the second court held at Buckingham Palace was Mrs. James W. Corrigan," etc., etc.

And then, on the heels of these announcements—already causing the New York Four Hundred to sit up and blink—came the news that Mrs. "Jimmie" was coming home!

"She will," added the cables, "take a town house for the Winter season and plans to launch an elaborate campaign to complete her conquest of New York society. Her opening affair, it is said, will be a musicale, for which she is now engaging distinguished artists."

A musicale! There was a certain old-fashioned novelty about the idea that intrigued the imagination of even the haughtiest blue-bookers. The prediction was freely made that if Mrs. "Jimmie" Corrigan carried out her plan—if her musicale was the first musicale of the season—she would conquer New York as she conquered London. Society prepared to succumb.

How Fate, looking back to the day when Mrs. Corrigan's husband's father stood in his overalls and stared at John D. Rockefeller's announcement, must have chuckled when, with the news about Mrs. Corrigan's musicale still bubbling among the gossips, the mails carried cards of invitation to a musicale at the town house of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., introducing to society their daughter, Abby!

The next cables from England were significant. Mrs. Corrigan was indeed planning a trip, they said, but she was not coming home. She was considering going to—India!

The Rockefeller musicale was a mere coincidence, but that didn't keep it from being exasperating. Mrs. Corrigan had planned to secure the costliest song-birds for her affair, but who can compete in hiring song-birds with the Rockefellers? She had been so sure she would give society an artistic event to talk about. But why should society talk when society was already talking about the artistic event for Abby Rockefeller?

What society really did was to snicker. And what it snickered was: "Another round for the Rockefellers! They won the first—over an oil refinery. They won the second—over a musicale. When and where can we see the third?"

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Mr. Burnham on Prohibition

To Editor Examiner:

Sir,—In my letters to the Examiner I have repeatedly stated that Mr. Drury sold the prohibitionists of Ontario out for t he votes of the grape growers of Western Ontario and that the wine made from grapes grown in Ontario and permitted to be sold under the O.T.A. was a highly intoxicating wine. That we were living in an atmosphere of lies in this Province, and that if we are to have prohibition by the will of t' people, we must have it honestly established and justly enforced. A few months ago a test case involving the alcoholic contents of this wine was taken to the courts, because if prohibition did not really exist in Ontario as alleged by Drury and the prohibitionists, then the enabling act of the Federal Parliament did not apply. The letters and analysis which I append to this letter speak for themselves. They are the analysis upon which the case would have been decided, and decided against the pretence that Prohibition exists in Ontario but for the fact that the Court said that since the Lieutenant-Governor had proclaimed Prohibition as in force in Ontario the Court took that proclamation as correct, whether it was or not. It will be seen from the letter following from Hellmuth & Co. and the report from Heys & Co., that the wine is even more intoxicating than I said it was. The reason for having apparent etaoin shrdlu cmm my apparent mistake is that the wine got was from a different maker, and I did not know the analysis of it, but simply that it was a very highly intoxicating, although excellent and wholesome, wine. If we are to have Prohibition, let us have it, but this deception and lying is intolerable. If people can make wine as strong as they like, provided it is made from grapes grown in Ontario, what sense is there in maintaining that we have Prohibition? The Prohibitionists have been fooled.

J. H. BURNHAM.

A Test of Strength.

In regard to the alleged alcoholic content found in Niagara grape wine, the following letters to Mr. Burnham speak for themselves:

J. H. Burnham, Esq.

Dear Sir,—Mr. Hellmuth had to go to Ottawa on Sunday, and asked us to try and obtain for you the information you asked for in your letter to him on the 4th inst. We are enclosing you a copy of two of the exhibits which were put in by the plaintiffs at the trial. They are exact copies, but there was no means by which we could get the clerk of the Court to certify same.

Hoping these will be sufficient,

Yours truly,

Hellmuth, Cattanach & Meredith.

FRUIT VIA AIRPLANE

DENVER, Colo., May 10.—(United Press).—Berries picked and packed in California in the afternoon and delivered in Denver for breakfast the next morning!

Bananas picked nearly ripe in Cuba, when they taste the best, and delivered in the States for desert the same day!

Loganberry juice squeezed from the finest berries in the Puyallup valley in Washington and served after the dance that night in the middle west!

Tropical fruits, such as loquats, too delicate to be transported by rail served in American cities!

All this is the vision of James S. Black, vice-president of the Bourk-Donaldson-Taylor Company, Denver's largest commission house Black thinks the railroads will be wise if they "watch their step," for air transportation of perishable food is at hand.

He points to the development of the automobile truck hauling as having cut in heavily on the railroads and predicts that the airplane will revolutionize the carrying of perishables.

Another thing in favor of air lines besides speed is that they are literally "air-cooled," Black says. Temperature lines will be plotted by the weather bureau, which may be followed by the air freighters through different altitudes, so as to keep the perishable cargo at the right cold storage degree.

ROBINSON CIRCUS HERE ON JUNE 6

Will Throw Up Their Tents on the East Half of the Exhibitiou Park

Wednesday, June 6th may be redlettered as circus day in the book of Peterboro's events especially for the younger folk. Robinson' circus will be in Peterboro that day showing in the east half of Exhibition Park. The contract was signed a few days ago assuring a circus for this season thereby making good the glaring deficiency of last summer, which with out a circus was almost as unnatural as if there had been no swallows. Since the Exhibition Board started their work of transforming the west half of the Park into an athletic field of twelve acres, which is now entirely seeded and rolled, no circus wheels will again be allowed to score and tear up its sod. The east half present many attractive features for the circus. There is Reg. Turner's forest of trees for the cumbrous pachyderms to lean against and rest and for the giraffes to feed in the succulent foliage on the top branches. And there is no extra charge for these special provisions.

TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS

A Letter from Mrs. Smith Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Trenton, Ont.—"I am writing to you in regard to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would not be without it. I have taken it before each of my children were born and afterwards, and find it a great help. Before my first baby was born I had shortness of breath and ringing in my ears. I felt as if I would never pull through. One day a friend of my husband told him what the Vegetable Compound had done for his wife and advised him to take a bottle home for me. After the fourth bottle I was a different woman. I have four children now, and I always find the Vegetable Compound a great help as it seems to make confinement easier. I recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. FRED H. SMITH, John St., Trenton, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers, and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire system, so that it may work in every respect effectually as nature intended. Thousands of women testify to this fact. G

PREPARING THE LAND FOR GROWING POTATOES

A friable loam soil is best suited for the potato. It should be fairly fertile and have good natural drainage. Potatoes can be grown successfully on soils of varying physical character if good preparation is given, ample drainage provided, and cultivation continued during the growing period to conserve moisture should the summer be dry. A sandy loam well supplied with humus gives the yielding soil texture desired; the humus retains moisture and prevents excessive soil temperature. The clover plant with its deep and extensive root system is best for turning an unyielding soil into a friable loam, and no plant so thoroughly stocks the soil to a good depth with vegetable or humus for the crop to follow. A clover sod is the best for potatoes. The best crops of clover are grown on limed lands, but an excess of lime tends to produce scabby potatoes. This is particularly true if stable manure is used, but if commercial fertilizer only is used the danger is much lessened because the acid phosphate in the fertilizer tends toward an acid reaction which does not favour one development of the potato scab organism. On the usual potato soils the sod is not very tough, but if it desired to grow potatoes on land having a tough sod it should be ploughed shallow soon after the hay is removed and disced to give the sod a chance to rot. This is followed by deeper ploughing in the fall. If this method is practised the sod will work up nicely the following spring.

Special attention should be given to the deep and thorough preparation of potato lands that are inclined to be close in texture and not easily pulverized. The preparation tillage should be to a depth of from six to eight inches, the whole soil being well pulverized by careful plowing when the land is fit to work to that depth, and by discing and harrowing afterwards. Before ploughing the land should be thoroughly disced, so that in ploughing this pulverized soil will be turned to the bottom. It is well to disc the surface soil when it is just dry enough to work well, and it is usually wise on many soils not toplough for some days after, thus giving the land time to dry to a depth of about eight inches. Then the plough will pulverize and not compact it, as will happen in the closer types of soil if it is not dried out sufficiently. After ploughing, exercise care to work it with the disc harrow before it dries to the point of being lumpy when worked. A few hours in a drying wind may be sufficient for discing; being left a day or two unworked may bake it so that working it into good tilth will be much more difficult.

Fertilizers applied are usually scattered broadcast and worked into the soil during the last cultivation. Some think better stock is obtained by applying the fertilizer in the drill when planting by means of the fertilizer attachment on the planter, than by applying it broadcast. In either case the fertilizer should not come into direct contact with the sets. Three hundred pounds of nitrate of soda, 500 pounds of acid phosphate and 200 pounds of muriate of potash will give 1000 pounds per acre of a fertilizer containing 4.5 per cent of nitrogen, 8 per cent of phosporic acid and 10 per cent of potash, which sould supply all requirements for a good potato crop under average soil conditions.

PLANTING TREES TO HONOR THE DEAD

The Sault-Sudbury Trunk Road Will Be Lined With Trees in Memory of Algoma's Soldiers.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., May 10 (Canadian Press). — Sixty members of the Soo Rotary Club began work yesterday planting trees on the Sault-Sudbury trunk road, thus beginning the movement to eventually turn the entire length of he road, 180 miles, into "The Road of Remembrance."

It is designed to plant a tree on this road for every Algoma soldier who fell in the Great War, keeping up the work every year. The name of a soldier and also the name of the citizen who plants and cares for the tree will be attached by a metal tag to the tree.

The club's appeal to the municipalities of Algoma to join in the work is being heartily responded to, and it is now suggested that the municipalities along the Provincial Highway from Sault Ste. Marie to Toronto should likewise join in this worthy movement.

Trees may safely be planted till 20th May.

The first twenty-five Algoma maple trees were planted on behalf of the lady war pensioners of the Sault in memory of their husbands.

Members of the club began digging on Tuesday evening, and by noon yesterday there was more than half a mile of the work completed.

The planting is being held up by the delay in the shipment of the first batch of 300 nursery trees which are to be planted 30 feet apart.

City Engineer Brown is staking out their location and the Rotary Club is being assisted generally by the citizens in carrying out the work.

The club's tree planting week will result in about 2,000 trees being planted, it is estimated. Every school and church is co-operating.

WOMEN TO BANISH VEILS

MOSCOW, May 9.—Communistic party workers say they now are at last having some effect in their cam paign to modernize the Moslem wo men of the Near East.

It took hundreds of communist 'missionaries" nearly two years in some localities to persuade the women to remove their veils and participate in politics. Now, in Adjerbijan alone, however, more than 22,000 women have been organized in industrial activity, while workshops for feminine Mohammedans, where they are taught that the role of woman is far different from that of the usual Moslem conception, have been established by hundreds in Turkestan, Bokhara, and elsewhere.

GRANTED A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

Decision of British Court of Appeal Will Have Far-Reaching Effect on Irish Situation.

LONDON, May 10.— (Canadian Press.) — The Court of Appeals, granting Art O'Brien's application for a writ of habeas corpus, which had been refused by the lower courts, yesterday made a decision which will, if confirmed by the House of Lords, bring about the release of all the British subjects deported to the Free State after the March raids and probably all the Irish. This will depend, however on the disposition of the Free State Government to accept the decision, as the British Government has no power over it in the matter.

The Court decided that an order of internment could be made only by the Chief Secretary for Ireland, whereas it was made in O'Brien's case by the Home Secretary; that, if the Home Secretary had possessed the power, the Free State Constitution Act passed by Parliament ended it, and that orders-in-council in support of the order for internment were ultra vires.

The decision appears to be in line with the bulk of legal opinion in Great Britain, where the deportations have been questioned by the lawyers and newspapers. One of the interesting points is that the court decided that only the Chief Secretary for Ireland would have had the power to order the deportations, whereas the office ceased to exist when the Free State was set up.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

INCREASING THE BREAST MILK

During the stay at the hospital or when at home, while the nurse stays, the nursing mother always has plenty of milk. In fact she is embarrassed by an oversupply, which is partly due to swelling and is not all milk. After she gets out of bed and becomes more active she finds that the suuply of milk is not so abundant and that the baby is dissatisfied and doesn't sleep at night—and cries. All little habits which keep the brand new mother in a state of worry and distress.

This is the time for all good mothers (one slips into these things unconsciously) to keep her very good senses about her. This stage is bound to pass, her nerves will be stronger, the milk supply will become stabilized and she will wonder what she has been fretting about.

In the meantime she can live and eat in such a way that the milk will have a better opportunity to increase in amount.

Nurse the baby on both breasts at every feeding. Eight minutes at each breast is a good time. This stimulate the breast oftener and increases the supply as the demand increases. You don't try to help the cows to give more milk by stopping milkings—it is the same principle with the mothers. Leaving an interval between feedings so that there will be more chance for the milk to come in defeats its own ends because nature sends less and less.

Drink at least a quart of milk a day. This may be in the form of buttermilk, if you don't like sweet milk, or in milk soups or cocoa—but milk you should have to keep up your calcium needs and those of the baby.

Eat three green vegetables daily, three stewed or raw fruits, very little meat, brown bread, brown sugar on your cereal and honey and figs instead of so much white bread and sugar. Worry causes a lessening of the supply of milk, so keep your disposition good and your mind at rest in spite of annoyances. It pays.

HEADACHES COME FROM GAS ON STOMACH

If you are bothered with gas, your system is poisoned, often causing headache, nervousness and weakness. Simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adlerika, expels poisons and gas and stops headaches almost INSTANTLY in many cases. Acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel. Adlerika removes matter you never thought was in your system, which poisoned stomach and caused gas. EXCELLENT to guard against appendicitis. McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne, druggists.

LOVE FORFEITED, DAUGHTER REVOLTS

FLORENCE JOHNSON.

By ROY GIBBONS.

CHICAGO, May 10.—No longer is the parent always right.

Filial rebellion, once love departs and respect can no longer hold, is both morally warranted and legally justified.

Such is the interpretation put on the decision of a Chicago court which permitted Florence Johnson, 17, to sentence her own father to prison by granting the daughter's request that such punishment be imposed because of the father's failure to discharge his parental duties while intoxicated.

Sociological students, pondering over possible effect of the unprecedented decree, say it sweeps away what little remaining authority attaches itself to parenthood.

"Right," Says Girl.

"And rightly so," says Florence. "I worked for my living and my father didn't. Just because he's my father I don't see why I should love and honor him.

"He got drunk constantly and often. My patience wouldn't hold out any longer.

"In Sunday school we were taught to obey our parents. But how is that possible when they forfeit your respect?

"In the world I'm of as much value as he is. I have proved my right to assert myself by earning a living, not only for myself but for my little brother and sister.

Pondered Problem.

"I thought a long time before I had father sent away. I did not act through anger or vengeance.

"He had a duty and he shirked it. That duty was pushed on my shoulders.

"My mother is dead. There were the two little ones to keep. Often he used to take some of the $18 I earned every week, and spend it for liquor.

"No! I don't see why I should be asked to love him just because he is my father."

Mothers and fathers what do you think of that?

Do you think any parent has the right to expect implicit obedience from a child when the parent has forfeited that child's respect?

What is your attitude toward your own children?

Has Florence Johnson turned the searchlight of truth on the secret of failure in so many homes where the offspring are wayward and the parents in despair?

Want Ad Tips by John T. Bartlett

"OUTSIDERS" WILL HELP YOU.

"The man we want will probably not see this Want Ad, of himself," a manufacturer seeking a credit manager advertised, "because he is now employed. He is not a restless man, and may look forward to years in his present position. Because he is that type of man, we want him.

"If you know him, you will befriend him as well as us, by speaking to him of this opportunity."

Then followed specific information concerning position, salary, working conditions, future prospects, etc.

This Want Ad plan, of enlisting the co-operation of friends of prospects is very successful. So far as direct replies go, it is as fruitful of the right sort of applicants as though not addressed primarily to the friends of possible applicants. These friends, when the suggestion is made directly to them, nearly always heed it, producing other desirable applicants.

The plan can be used to get an unusual office boy, a better-than-ordinary stenographer, a successful laundry superintendent. The special advantage of the plan is that it finds the high-class worker not engaged in searching for a job. The assistance of friendly outsiders is invoked, multiplying the chances of success.

The same general idea can be used effectively in other Want Ad classifications. A business chance advertiser describing a restaurant for sale, added "Tell that friend of yours, ambitious to get in business for himself about this." The owner of a five-acre tract used this:

"Dear Reader—If you have a friend who would make a first-class tenant, be sure to advise him to see me about this five-acre Strawberryvale tract." Following this came description calculated to show the reader the tract was very desirable.

Selling nearly anything, the Want Ad user can profitably include, "If not interested personally, please tell your friends of this."

Another adaptation is a reward offered to anyone who will find a buyer.

THE CUSTOMER'S CONVENIENCE.

(By John T. Bartlett)

Offering practically anything through a Want Ad, it pays the advertiser to heed the convenience of the public.

One of those numerous farmers who have roadside booths on main highways used the classified section. He quoted prices on several farm products, then though of the convenience of the public. The last sentence in his Want Ad, before address, was, "Paved road all the way." He knew that would be of great interest to many possible customers.

Two farmers with cherries to sell worked out the same principle in their Want Ads, but in quite different ways. One farmer was within a mile of the city's limits but off the carline and on a side road. He included in his brief Want Ad, which told the kind of cherries he had and the price, this sentence: "Free transportation to and from your home in my flivver." Then he gave his phone number. He did big business.

The second cherry grower wanted people to see the cherries he had to sell; if they saw, he believed, they would wish to buy. So he made it convenient for them to see the cherries. He made arrangements with a friendly merchant near the city's principal tranfer point, and had sample crates on display there. His Want Ad referred people to this display, then told them the carline to take to reach the farm.

Still another producer was exceptionally "close in." He heeded public convenience, too, but in a different manner. He calculated his fruit was worth more, because convenient. He set a higher price, and people gladly paid it. A producer with an inconvenient location priced very low, knowing people would go out of their way to save money.

Make it easy for the public to do business with you. If you can't make it easy, make it especially worth their while. If you advertise to show offered things to the public, make the hours of showing as convenient for people as you can. Give your phone number, as it will be easy for people to make inquiries.

It pays the Want Ad user to heed the convenience of possible buyers.

BUTTERSCOTCH PIE.

(By Bertha E. Shapleigh, of Columbia University).

Butterscotch pie may be made like the custard variety by putting the filling in a tin lined with pastry, or the paste may be rolled to quarter-inch thickness, and cut in three circles the size of a pieplate. Place the three pieces of paste on a baking sheet, prick several times with a fork, and bake ten or twelve minutes in a hot oven.

For the filling take:
Quarter cup butter
One-third cup flour
Two cups milk
Yolks of three eggs
One cup brown sugar
One-half teaspoon salt
Quarter cup caramel.

Cream the butter and flour together, add the sugar, mixed with the yodks of eggs and salt, pour into this the hot milk, mix thoroughly and return to the double boiler. Cook 15 minutes, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens. When cold, place between layers of pastry and cover top with meringue, made by adding to the stiffly beaten whites of eggs one-quarter cup each of brown and white sugar.

Or, instead of cooking the mixture in a double boiler, turn into a tin lined with the paste and bake in a hot oven 15 minutes.

NATIVE OFFICERS

DELHI, India, April 10.—(Associated Press).—The Government of India's plan for the trial "Indianization" of a section of the Indian army has been approved by the Legislative Assembly and is to be put into effect at once. This scheme, which represents a partial capitulation to demands made incessantly for several years in the Legislative Assembly and through other channels, calls for the "Indianization" of eight infantry regiments for the purpose of testing the ability of Indian officers. If the trial is found successful further concessions are to be made at a later date.

The plan has been drawn up by Lord Rawlinson, Commander-in-Chief of the army. In explaining it he says: "The Government considers a start should be made at once so as to give Indians a fair opportunity of proving that regiments officered by Indians will be efficient in every way. The eight units in question will be chosen judiciously so as to include as many representative types as possible.

"I hope the people of India will realize the importance of this step, and that it now rests with them to justify the decision of the Government. I hope no effort will be spared to make the measure a solid and conspicuous success. The responsibility which lies before the young men who will officer the "Indianized" regiments is not light. They will have in their hands not only the lives of their men, but also the task of maintaining untarnished the high and ancient traditions of the regiments to which they are appointed. I can assure them that in the new and wider career which will now open to them, they will have the active and generous support of the Government of India and of their British comrades in the army. Their success or failure will mean much to India. The initiation of this scheme constitutes an entirely new departure which, though limited in its scope, is one which may have far-reaching results."

SACRED WORDS

CHICAGO, May 10.—(Associated Press).—Ragtime and "jazz" may be working to the detriment of Young America but their syncopated strains are winning converts to Christian ideals in Timbuctoo, Tibet and Taihiti, according to Paul Rader, evangelist and president of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, the international conference of which here May 15-23 will bring missionaries from all parts of the world.

"American jazz music is used by our more than 100 missionaries to attract the attention of and assemble the most savage people in our fields to evangelistic services," Mr. Rader said. "Our missionaries carry no arms, but through musical instruments and their voices raised in song and prayer ply their work of converting the heathen. Sacred words are put to modern jazz songs, noble thoughts to popular tunes, and then sung with a spirit that attracts the black, yellow and brown faces.

"All sorts of hymns are sung, but we find that the rythm of ragtime tunes delights the simple mind of the savage, appeals to his tom-tom trained mind, and the first thing the missionary knows the wild man is singing Christian words, learning white religious theology and presently is converted."

A CHOICE RECIPE

1 pint thin cream
3-4 cup sugar.
1-8 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon gelatine
1-4 cup cold water
Whites of 4 eggs.
1 teaspoon vanilla
1-4 lb. soft marshmallows
1 cup candied of maraschino cherries.
Lady fingers

Heat the cream and add sugar, salt and gelatine, which has been soaked in the cold water. Stir until sugar and gelatine are dissolved, then place over ice or in cold water; stirring until it begins to stiffen.

Beat whites of eggs until stiff. Add vanilla; marshmallows, cut into small pieces and cherries, cut into quarters. Add this mixture to the gelatine and cream and thoroughly mix. Turn into an oblong mold, such as a small bread pan. Chill for several hours. Unmold on to the dish or platter to be sent to the table and over it place the lady fingers to look like a log cabin.

Marshmallow, held together with toothpicks, may be used to hold the roof so it may be pointed in centre, on top of which place one marshmallow.

At the four corners of the platter place a mound of stiffly beaten cream and from each mound have a tiny flag flying.

SUGAR FIRMS TO BE INVESTIGATED

Agricultutal Committee of Commons Seeking Origin of High Prices in Canada.

OTTAWA, May 10. — (Canadian Press).—If there is a "sugar trust" responsible for the increasing prices of this household necessity to Canadian housewives, the Special Agricultural Committee of the Commons, by questioning the heads of the sugar industry in Canada, intends to learn of it. General managers and presidents of five Canadian sugar refineries have been summoned to appear before the committee on Tuesday next to give evidence on the high sugar prices and their cause, and also to produce all their figures showing costs of raw material, manufacture, distribution and spreads.

SURPRISED AT RESULTS SN SUCH SHORT TIME

Another striking victory for Dreco, the famous herbal remedy—One bottle effects marked improvement in condition of Mrs. Wm. Bonaney.

Mr. William Bonaney, of Aldershot P.O., Hamilton, Ont., was greatly worried over the condition of his wife, who had suffered for years with stomach, kidney and liver ailments. These organs simply would not do their work properly, resulting in many distressing and weakening symptoms. How readily these symptoms yield to the corrective influence of Dreco is typified in the case of Mrs. Bonaney.

"For years my wife has suffered from stomach, kidney and liver trouble," declares Mr. Bonaney. "She was very constipated and had rheumatism in joints and muscles. She lost her appetite and found it almost impossible to get a good night's sleep. Everything she ate would sour in her stomach, causing gas. She had pains across her back from her kidneys, her joints ached and she would get stiff with rheumatism. She had a sallow complexion and at times would get dizzy spells.

"She tried almost everything, but nothing seemed to help and she continually became weaker, until she heard about Dreco and decided to try it. She has only used one bottle, but we are surprised how different she looks. It is doing worlds of good for her and she is much stronger."

When the digestive system gets out of order, it means that food values are not properly retained and distributed to nourish the system, nor is waste matter cast off. Such a condition rapidly undermines the strongest constitution. Let the corrective properties of Dreco, compounded from Nature's own medicinal herbs and roots, tone and regulate the organs to their proper functions. The end of a rigorous winter finds thousands in need of a tonic and restorative. This need is met perfectly by Dreco.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold in Lakefield by E .H .Northey, and by a good druggist everywhere.

OBEDIENCE

his audience, who joined in the vote of thanks moved by Mrs. W. R. Morris and seconded by Mrs. S. F. Touchbourn.

Mrs. S. T. Medd, who occupied the chair prior to election of new officers explained the progress of the Council's work during the year, and brought up consideration of new business. An oratorical contest for public school children will be held in Peterboro during the coming year for which Mrs. Medd promised the first prize, a silver medal. Mr. A. Mowat is making arrangements with the Agricultural Board relating to the holding of a school fair in connection with the annual Fall Fair.

Mrs. Medd gave a brief summary of the deliberations at the recent convention in Toronto of Home and School Councils.

Interesting reports on Home and School Association work were given by Mrs. J. E. Johnston for the Queen Mary Association; by Mrs. Karl Simpson for the Queen Alexandria; by Mrs. J. Barnes for May's School and by Mrs. J. Allen for the Prince of Wales. Mrs. Medd read Mrs. J. J. Pollock's report for the King Edward School Association and Mrs. W. R. Morris read that of the King George society. The reports of the various societies revealed activity in many ways, and included presentation of prizes, of sets of the Book of Knowledge, and of various kitchen conveniences to their schools, of co-operation and help in connection with school pic-nics, and of milk and boots and clothing supplied to children. The work of the societies in the line of relief assistance during last year were commended by Mr. Mowat.

The need of May's School for a proper lighting system was mentioned by its representative.

In this school the teachers and Home and School Society have cooperated for years in supplying the children with hot drinks and soups to supplement their mid-day lunches.

Elections for officers for 1923, which were mainly by acclamation, showed a decided increase in the number of masculine names added to the list, and resulted as follows:

Honorary President — J. A. McKone, chairman of the Supervision Committee of the Board of Education; Hon. Vice-President—Mrs. S. T. Medd; President—F. A. Dearborn; 1st Vice-President—Mrs. W. R. Morris (re-elected); 2nd Vice-President—A. Mowat; Secretary—F. H. Dobbin (re-elected); Assistant Secretary—R. J. Bolton; Treasurer—Miss Vera Knox (re-elected).

The Executive Committee is composed of the president and each affiliated association and another representative to be selected by each affiliated association.

A vote of thanks to the Chamber of Commerce for use of the board-room for annual meetings was carried by the meeting.

Those present at last evening's meeting were: Past President Mrs. S. T. Medd, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mr. A. Mowat, Secretary F. H. Dobbin, Mrs. S. F. Touchbourn and Mrs. Karl Simpson (Queen Alexandra Association); Mrs. J. E. Johnston (Queen Mary); Mrs. V. Hamilton (King George); Mrs. J. Barnes and Mrs. Pearson (May's School); Mr. and Mrs. G. Helson, F. H. Dearborn, vice-principal Queen Alexandra School; R. J. Bolton, vice-principal King Edward School; Mrs. J. Allen, Mrs. L. Brooks, Mrs. J. S. Peters (Prince of Wales' School).

KILL CALF FOR CONVICT.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10. — (United Press). — The Bergdoll Castle in Wynnefield is being made spick and span and colorful flowers are being planted around the grounds. The prodigal son is soon to return home.

Erwin Bergdoll is ending his four-year term in the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth for evading the draft. On June 24, his 33rd birthday, he will resume civilian life in the role of a farmer.

The deserted farm of Erwin and his half-brother, Charles A. Braun, at Broomall, is also being made ready for the reception. It was at this farm that Erwin dashed out of a rear door and slipped through the government net spread for him in September, 1920.

"Ma" Bergdoll is busy preparing for the return of her son. She still maintains that Erwin is innocent of dodging the draft and hopes that some day she will be able to prove his innocence.

Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the other millionaire draft dodger son of the Bergdoll family, is still an exile.

TOMORROW'S BUDGET TOPIC AT CAPITAL

Will Be Sixteenth Budget Speech Dellevered by W. S. Fielding.

OTTAWA, May 10.—(Canadian Press).—To-day, Ascension Day, there is a comparative lull in parliamentary activities. The House holds no sittings, although one of the parliamentary committees continues with the taking of evidence. Among members the one topic is tomorrow's budget speech with much speculation as to what it will bring forth.

In one respect, the speech will be especially notable. It will be the seventeenth delivered by the present Minister of Finance, Hon. W. S. Fielding, and in that regard, Mr. Fielding will probably hold the record among Finance Ministers of British Empire. In the days of the old Laurier Government, Mr. Fielding as Minister of Finance delivered fifteen budget speeches. The speech to-morrow will be his second as minister of Finance in the present government. Report has it that Mr Fielding this year will endeavor to balance his budget. In other words that he will propose to pay all classes of expenditures. In his last budget speech, Mr. Fielding expressed the need for making every possible effort in this direction and there will be keen interest in any announcement Mr. Fielding may make tomorrow in this respect.

Some increases in British preference are expected. There also is a suggestion that some concession may be made to producers of native wines.

Seven Years of Bad Health Ended by Restoration

"I never enjoyed better health than now, and for all the money in London wouldn't suffer like I did before I got Tanlac," is the striking statement made recently by Mrs. Gertrude Lupson, 286 Ridout St., London, Ont.

"Nervous dyspepsia for seven years, kept me racked with pain and misery, and pulled me down twenty-seven pounds, which was like a skeleton for me. I trembled like a leaf, could scarcely sleep a wink and was so dizzy and weak I had to have help in caring for my children.

"Four years ago a druggist suggested I tried Tanlac, and four bottles actually increased my wieght thirty-seven pounds, and put me in such splendid health I haven't spent a penny for medicine since. I just wish I could go from door to door and tell everybody about Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — And Curb Prices.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, May 10. — (Special.)— The general list opened strong on the stock exchange today, but later gave way under pressure. Steel Equipments and other groups lost some of yesterday's gains in addition, to the opening increases. The reaction was not unexpected due to the good rise of the past two days. Much of the appreciation was due to short covering, and with the bears pretty well cleaned out, new committments for the port side came into the market.

Speculative leaders of the industrial class showed the best tone at the opening. Gains were scored by Baldwin, Studebaker and American Locomotive, while Dupont jumped 2 1-2 points to 142 1-2.

Over night developments left the economic situation unchanged, so the attention of the speculative colony was focused on the contest in progress in the stock market between the interests favouring a resumption of the forward movement and the forces working for the decline.

Following announcement that the American Locomotive Common had been placed on a $10 annual basis and that the directors had recommended the exchange of two shares of no par value for each share of $100 par common now outstanding, the stock experienced considerable profit taking, receding from its earlier high of 139 to a low of 136 1-4 before 12 o'clock. In as much as this reported selling on the theory that the good news is out it had no effect on the general tone in the late morning. Steels experienced a sinking spell.

Baldwin at 128, off 3 1-4; Bethlehem Steel 55 5-8, off a 5-8; Crucible 68 1-2, off 2 1-8; Gulf States 85 1-4.

Clyde refiners have bought 30,000 tons of Cuban raw sugar at 3.18. 6d., an advance of 6d., equal to about 6.21 cents for Cuba. Call money is in somewhat greater request, but demand is not strong enough to affect the rate noticeably owing to considerable accumulation of funds from outside and lessened demand from other sources.

Recovery in stock exchange list and $12 million government withdrawals should, at another season, have a hardenng effect on the rate.

The money market continues quiet. Accommodation is to be had at 5 1-4 per cent. for all dates, up to four months.

A WOMAN'S RIGHT TO GOOD HEALTH

Most Troubles Afflicting Women Are Due to Poor Blood.

To every woman belongs the right to enjoy a healthy, active life; yet nine out of ten suffer from some form of bloodlessness. That is why one sees on every side pale, thin cheeks, dull eyes and drooping figures—sure signs of headaches, weak backs, aching limbs and uncertain health. All weak women should win the right to be well by refreshing their weary bodies with the new, rich, red blood that promptly transforms them into healthy attractive women. This new, red blood is supplied by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which reaches every organ and every nerve in the body. Through the use of these pills thousands of women have found benefit when suffering from anaemia, indigestion, general weakness and blood ailments from which women alone suffer. Among the many women who tell of the good Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for them is Mrs. L. Hicks Round Hill, N.S., who says:—"I became very much run down in health; my blood seemed weak and watery; my strength failed, and I was so easily tired that my work was a burden. I had often read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them, and I can truly say that after using three boxes I found myself gaining and under a further use of the pills all my old-time energy and vitality was restored. Out of my own experience I can strongly recommend this medicine."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

REAR WHEEL TIRES

It is good practice to place weak tires on rear wheels. A front tire blowout may cause the car to swerve dangerously. There is less danger in case of a rear tire blowout.

A Sleeveless Summer

Ud £TGGRo £Daw

NEW YORK, N. Y., May 10 (United Press).—

Though girls can't show their slender limbs
This year they're not alarmed,
There's always something up their sleeves; o
They're going to go bare-armed!

"If skirts must be long, sleeves must be short," say yje spring mannikens. And that's the long and short of it!

Already we see the influence of the short sleeves which are threatening to become so popular this summer. The little hip-band blouses which are worn with the spring jacquette suits are almost all sleeveless. Many of them are made of colorful batiks and printed linens which add color to the street suit and can be used as sport blouses with white pleated skirts later on. Sleeves are merely little caps which extend just over the shoulder. Sometimes they are set into fitted armholes and again they are just a continuation of the shoulder. In most instances they hug the arm snugly.

The summer frocks of organdies and voiles invariably have short sleeves, either tight and cap-shaped, or puffed and trimmed in tiny ruffles.

Even the newer sweaters often use the extremely short sleeve instead of the long tight-fitting ones. One sees many of them among the French imported sweaters with the borders of the tiny sleeves worked in embroidery of contrasting colors or outlined in cross-stitching.qq

Chiffon Velvet Sport Coats

Jacquettes of chiffon velvet are the newest thing in sports wear. They may be plain, embroidered in self-color or batiked in brilliant colors. When worn with a finely pleated white skirt they are extremely attractive and take the place of both sport and semi-dress wear. While some of them are made in the very short, flaring box-coat style, most of them are of the popular jacquette type fitting snugly about the hips and tying at one side with a sash of satin ribbon or self-material.

Colored pocket handkerchiefs with corner pockets made of contrasting color, the pockets holding tiny powder puffs, are the latest word in handkerchiefs. They come in linen, crepe de chine and silk batiks and should harmonize with the color of the frock with which they are worn if they are to be ultra smart. A tiny crocheted button fastens the pocket to the hander chief.

* * *

Bandana-shaped collars of net and lace are replacing the brilliantly printed silk bandanas. They can be worn with almost any summer dress and are easily adjusted to the neck.

* * *

Bead necklaces which fit snugly about the throat are considered a trifle smarter this season than the longer length chains. Amber, cornelian, jade and pearl beads are the most popular types at present.

TWO TORONTO BOXERS HERE

McGrady, of St. Helen's Club, Will Meet Tony Minicola at To-Night's Smoker.

Any doubt about the five bouts for to-night's boxing bill at the Lacrosse Club "smoker" in Victoria Hall were removed this morning by a wire from St. Helen's Club, Toronto, to Charlie Curtis, who is looking after the details of this part of the programme.

The telegram announced that not only would McTaggart, ofthe 135-pound class, arrive by to-night's C. P.R. local, but that he would be accompanied by McGrady, a 118-pound lad who will go on with Tony Minicolo. So that tucks down a bill that should please all kinds of tastes. Here's the programme in brief:

Overture by orchestra commencing at 8 o'clock; Knox Minstrels, under the direction of Vernon Morphet at 8.15 o'clock, running for a good full hour; with the following card of boxing:

Sims vs. Smith at 90 pounds.

Jordan vs. Thompson at 105 pounds.

Millard vs. Corbett at 118 pounds.

McGrady of St. Helen's Club, Toronto, vs. Minicolo, of Peterborough at 118 pounds; and McTaggart, of St. Helen's, vs. Combe, of Peterborough at 135 pounds.

MAGNESIA FINE FOR ACID STOMACH

Quickly Neutralizes Acidity. Stops Fermentation, Sweetens the Stomach

Nine people in ten, when food upsets the stomach causing distress, think they have indigestion. In reality, they are suffering from "acid stomach." An excess of acid in the stomach causes gas, heartburn, bloating and sourness.

To have a strong healthy stomach capable of easily and normally digesting three hearty meals a day you simply must keep these stomach acids neutralized and the stomach contents sweet. No artificial digestents necessary. Just ge a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any good drug store and take a teaspoonful of the powder or two tablets in a half glass of water right after eating or whenever the slightest pain is felt. The result is amazing and you will be delighted with the almost instant relief it brings. This famous stomach sweetner combines Magnesia and Bismuth in desirable proportion and is not only splendidly effective but perfectly harmless. Its regular use keeps the stomach sweet strong and healthy all the time.

Bisurated Magnesia is well known to druggists everywhere and is used annually by more than a half million people who now eat as they please, in reason with no fear of indigestion.

LOCATE HADES ON PLANET MERCURY

Astronomer Says Life Exists on Planets — Venus Like This Earth.

BERLIN, May 10 (United Press).—Life, vastly different from anything we mortals know, exists on the planets.

It is neither plant nor animal life, but there must be quaint creatures or creations dwelling in our neighbor worlds.

At least, so opines Professor Julius Franz, noted astronomer, who knows about all there is to be known at this juncture about the moon and planets.

And, his colleague Engineer H. J. Gramatzki joins in the view that "life can exist in forms which are not disturbed by such temperatures" as once afflicted this vale in which we live and which now sizzle in other planets.

Gramatzki is inclined to quarrel with his Swedish astronomical colleague, Svante Arrhenius, whose "pan-spermic theory" would account for life in the universe by attributing it to flying germs which fructify where they light. Gramatzki says it hardly coincides with our own feeling of greatness to believe that infinitesimally small germs landing on the earth were responsible for the formation of the complex life now existent.

Gramatzki sheds interesting light upon our neighbors.

Just Like Hell

The planet Mercury is, according to his viwe, just like hell. Mercury is a reddish-yellow planet next to the sun, receiving six times as much sunshine per square meter as the earth and apparently always showing only one side to the sun.

The planet Venus, he judges, has a life nearest approaching our own. The climate most nearly approaches that of the earth. Venus is about the same size as the earth, and is surrounded by a strong moisture-containing atmosphere which makes this world appear in the sunlight like a huge snowball. This cloud-covering conceals the surface of Venus from our gaze, but scientific investigations indicate that there must be on this planet a deep twilight continuously, accompanied by thunderous weather.

"Plant organisms," says Gramatzki, "cannot thrive in this darkness. But when we consider that there is upon our own earth a bacillus which without sunlight and chlorophyll (substance which makes leaves green) can live in the darkness of mud where it releases carbon dioxide, then this aphroditic life problem is already solved in principle."

Cold in Mars

Our neighbor Mars is the extreme opposite of Venus. It has a cloudless heaven and we know its surface with its so-called "canals." Mars, however, gets little sun-heat and has a bitter cold climate with an average temperature at the equator below freezing point. While the American astronomer William Pickering thinks the Mars temperatures aren't so bad as painted. Gramatzki avers that "a stay on Mars must nevertheless be terrible for humans."

"Life existing by such temperatures and in the midst of red deserts and mighty salt seas—if Arrhenius' theory is correct—can be little related to our own life. However, to put it on a lower plane than our own lacks any sensible basis, for who knows but what the higher phases of life are joined with a decrease battle for existence—a softer life than we humans have to lead."

As for Mercury, Gramatzki says, to picture a form of life "in this planetary hell is beyond our power of imagination."

Gramatzki thinks that Uranus, Neptune, Jupiter and others also have some form of life, even though it is not human or plant.

BAD ROADS HAMPER THE USE AUSTRALIAN AUTOS

It is expected that the Australian Government will introduce a main road bill for New South Wales at the next session, creating a board to take charge of and finance the main roads for that Province, says a recent Consular report. At present there is a lack of coherence and consequent inefficiency in the matter of road-building, because the control is divided among hundreds of shires and municipalities. Motor vehicles are already competing strongly with the railroads, but their successful operation is badly hampered by poor roads.

Marion Davies Central Figure in Pageantry of "When Knighthood was in Flower

Those who like musical comedies or circuses will especially enjoy the tournament scene in the big Cosmopolitan production "When Knighthood was in Flower," a Paramount picture starring Marion Davies which opens at the Regent Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Tiers of fancifully decorated boxes fluttering with flags and pennants and draped with garlands of roses; beautifully gowned women; court attendants; knights in armour and court jesters make of this brilliant scene one of the most sparkling events imaginable. The glitter and the splender of it all remind one alternately of a circus or musical comedy.

In the central box sit King Henry VIII and Queen Catherine while Princess Mary Tudor leans over the railing, enraptured at the vision of the gallant Charles Brandon, clad in armor, as he stops his coal black horse directly in front of the royal party and bows low. Miss Davies plays the part of Princess Mary and her charm was neveh set off to great er advantage than in the regal jeweled robes of the princess who was willing to forsake a throne for love.

Robert G. Vignola directel the impressive production. Lyn Harding plays King Henry VIII. He is one of England's foremost actors and he has played the part over two hundred times on the legitimate stage. Theresa Conover Maxwell is cast as the queen. "When Knighthood Was in Flower" is one of the most elaborate screen productions ever made in this country. Three studios were used in the filming and the costumes cost a small fortune.

ECZEMA

Hands Were Raw Would Crack and Bleed

Eczema or Salt Rheum, as it is commonly called, is one of the most agonizing of skin diseases. The intense burning, itching and smarting, especially at night or when exposed to heat, are almost unbearable and relief is gladly welcomed.

The pre-eminent success which

has met with in permanently removing a disease of such severity is due to its wonderful blood cleansing and purifying properties.

Mrs. M. R. Willard, Dudswell Jct., Que., writes: "For about three years I had eczema, in a very bad form, on my hands. They were all raw and would crack and bleed so that I could not do my housework. I tried everything I could think of without any results. As last I got a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and when I had it about all taken I could see it was helping me; by the time I had taken five bottles my hands were all well again and I have not been bothered since. I cannot praise Burdock Blood Bitters enough."

TRAFFIC RULES FOR BICYCLES

Riders Everywhere are Advised to Read, Mark, Learn and Inwardly Digest Code or Popular Regulations.

A code of universal traffic rules for bicycle riders in all cities has been framed. The special rules are timely and appropriate for present-day conditions and they serve to emphasize the point that the cyclist not only enjoys the privileges of streets and highways but also that he has responsibilities as well. The rules follow:

When riding a bicycle never take anything for granted. The other fellow may be deaf.

Do not believe that you own the whole road. Room for your elbows is all that you require.

Never attempt to pass on the right side of an automobile when you are overtaking it. The vehicle may turn suddenly toward the curb.

Do not try to show speed in crossing an intersection. You never can tell what will come next.

Riding along the wrong side of the road is a "foul." If you do so, you are liable to be bumped over to the proper side.

The traffic policeman is not in the centre of the street for an ornament. Watch him or he will watch you.

Do not annoy the unfortunate people who still continue to use street cars by riding through them as they struggle to get into a car. These people are in a bad state of mind anyway.

Handlebars are made for steering purposes. The stage is the place for fancy riders.

Come to a complete stop if you see a pedestrian dancing in front of you.

Use your brains with your bell and people will thank you.

Remember, you are riding a noiseless vehicle.

Many pedestrians suddenly become blind when they are crossing a street. Give them lots of room.

The bicycle rider enjoys more freedom on the streets than the owner of any other vehicle. Do not abuse the privileges which you enjoy.

Cutting a corner is the shortest way to the police court. Make it a wide swing and stay healthy.

It is not advisable for a bicyclist to ride closely behind an automobile. Bear in mind that the bicycle has no reverse gear.

A safe rule to follow is to ride only as fast as existing conditions would warrant. The cyclist can slip through traffic easily and can beat both the street car and automobile to a destination any old time, so take your time.

The bicycle with a low gear is more easily controlled than a high-geared machine. The low gear also saves energy in the long run.

The place for bicycling is the roadway. The sidewalk is reserved for those who have not yet realized the benefits of cycling.

As with other things, the proverb, "The more haste the less speed," applies to the average cyclist.

Side streets frequently make better riding than crowded main thoroughfares. Try the next street over tomorrow.

If you are expecting trouble and are disappointed, try coasting down a hill with both feet off the pedals.

If you hear an automobile behind you, the right thing to do is to keep to the right.

Bicycling is a healthful exercise if you use your head as well as your legs.

WHEN PASSING CAR AHEAD

The blowing of a horn by an automobile overtaking another car is a signal for the car ahead to pull over to the right to allow the car in the rear to pass on the left. Cars should not attempt to pass at an intersection, sharp turn, curve or when approaching the crest of a hill.

SIDEWALK TRAFFIC

Pedestrians will be under as strict control as autoists, if the suggestion of Police Commissioner Enright, of New York, is enforced. Enright would keep, York, is enforced. Enright would nerple moving and break up groups in congested areas. Traffic cops would be stationed on sidewalks, too.

Belmonts Won First Game-Rain in Major Leagues-Sport News

BELMONTS WON FIRST GAME OF SERIES FOR THE SOFT BALL TITLE

Came From Behind in the Ninth to Wrest Victory From Defeat — Fairly Good Game.

The Belmonts gained the advantage last evening in the race for the softball championship by defeating the Woollens by a score of 5 to 4.

This is the first defeat this season for the champions of the industrial section, and came after they had held the lead throughout the game.

The Woollens started off like a million dollars, and sent three of their runs across the scoring station in the first two innings, while they held the Belmonts scoreless.

The Belmonts gathered two in the third and tied the score in the fifth, but Legros' two-bagger in the seventh scored Turner, and again put the Woollens in the lead.

The Belmonts came to bat in the ninth, with the score standing 4 to 3 against them, and launched a rally that won the game for them. The first man up went out when he sent a hot grounder down the first base line. A bunt, a walk, and a hit followed to fill the bases, and Haskill came across with the necessary wallop to bring in the run to tie the score.

Holyman then came to bat, with a chance to win his own game, but drew a walk, again filling the bases, and Batten, the next man up whaled out a sizzling grounder, sending Lowe in with the winning run.

The game was late in getting started owing to some unfortunate incidents which occurred during the Gunners-Belmont game, but the difficulties were settled, and the game got under way at 8.30.

Though hard fought, the game was rather slowly played, for with the exception of the eighth frame, when the Belmonts went out in order, both teams had men on the runways every time they came to bat.

Dawson, who has taken Benny McLean's place on the mound for the Woollens, had streaks of wildness, but on the whole turned in a very good game. He has a pile of steam behind his delivery. He fanned four of the first five men to face him. He fanned seven altogether and walked six. Though he allowed fifteen hits, he kept them scattered until the ninth, when he weakened, and was touched for four hits and two walks.

Tommy Holyman, who was on the rubber for the Belmonts, was not up to his usual form.

The teams were:

Belmonts: Jobbitt, 3b; Stuart, 2b; Heckman, lf; Lowe, 1b; Haskill, c; Holyman, p; Batten, ss; Thompson, ss; Panning, rf.

Score by innings:

Woollens	2	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	4
Belmonts	0	0	2	0	1	0	0	0	2	5

Cold, Snow and Rain Cause Postponements

NEW YORK, May 10.— (Canadian Press.)— Rain, cold weather and snow yesterday played havoc with baseball schedules, causing the postponement of eleven out of sixteen games in the major leagues, International League and American Association.

Five major league games, two in the National and three in the American League, were postponed because of weather conditions. All of the International League teams were forced into idleness, while two American Association contests were also called off.

Snow caused postponements of the American League game in Detroit between the Tigers and Washington, and at Rochester between Baltimore and Rochester in the International League.

PLAYERS PINCHED.

The Leaside ball players showed more speed last Saturday on the Provincial highway than they did in the ball diamond at Peterborough. Officer Wilson occupied first base and he caught three of the Leaside cars, officiated as official umpire and tacked on a fine of ten dollars and costs on each car, and not one of George Peacock's men disputed the umpire's ruling.—Port Hope Guide.

INVESTIGATION OF CENTRAL LEAGUE?

Dedman Tells O. B. A. A. Fifty Certificates Have Been Held Up For Inquiry.

TORONTO, May 10.— The Ontario Baseball Amateur Association executive stood firmly to its guns on the January 1st residence rule. The matter came up Tuesday night when the Nickel Belt League asked for exemption from the residence rule this year agreeing to operate their league as usual, but waiving claims to participate in the Ontario championship series. They were desirous of retaining affiliation with the Ontario body no matter which way the decision was given. The committee decided that no exemption could be made.

M. J. Dedman of Lindsay, president of the Central League, made it plain that his organization was soundly amateur, reported that at his instigation 50 amateur cards of players in his league had been held up pending investigation of their status. He declared that every team in his league would have to live up to the January 1 residence rule. There would be no deviation by any branch or section of his league. Dedman started an argument by charging the Ontario branch of the A.A.U. of Canada with laxity in issuing cards. W. J. Smith warmly denied any slackness on the part of the Ontario branch.

James Lackey, who was recommended by the T.A.B.A. for reinstatement, was granted permission to play. D. A. Carey, jun., formerly of the Beaver Club of Toronto, was also recommended for reinstatement, but the committee were not satisfied with his activities in connection with the Milton Hockey Club last winter and his card was refused.

Until claims by the Stratford Club are satisfactorily cleared up the Aylmer Club stands suspended.

James P. Anderson, with Kincardine last year, was refused permission to play with the General Motors team of Oshawa this year because of the residence rule.

Questions.

ONE—If in swinging at a third strike, the ball touches the person of the batsman and goes to the grandstand, what happens?

TWO—Have base runners the right to advance on such a play?

THREE—Does the infield fly rule apply with a runner on first base and less than two out?

FOUR—If a base runner after reaching second, decides to run back to first, what is his status and how can he be retired?

FIVE—If a base runner in stealing second, reaches the base in safety, overslides, and is retired, does he receive credit for a stolen base?

Answers.

ONE—If while attempting a third strike, the ball touch any part of the batsman's person, he is out.

TWO—Base runners cannot advance on a missed third strike which comes into contact with the batsman's person, the ball becomes dead.

THREE—The infield fly rule does not apply with a runner on first only. There must be runners on first and second, or first, second and third and less than two out.

FOUR—He can be retired by being touched with the ball, or by holding the ball on the base that he was entitled to, which was second.

FIVE—If a base runner overslides a base that he is attempting to steal and is retired, he does not receive credit for a stolen base.

TEN HEAVIES ARE ON THE CARD

Stage is All Set For Milk Fund Bouts to Be Held on Saturday.

NEW YORK, May 10.— (Canadian Press.) — As the ten heavyweights entered in the elimination contests at Yankee Stadium Saturday for the Milk Fund began tapering off in their training yesterday and a score of battered sparring partners sighed relief, promoters made preparations for the greatest crowd that ever witnessed a pugilistic carnival.

Predictions of promoters, based on the advance demand for seats, were that close to 100,000 persons would be in the vast baseball amphitheatre when the voice of the announcer boomed to the spectators through amplifiers the identities of the performers in the first match. This would eclipse the crowd of more than 90,000 that saw Georges Carpentier bowled to the canvas at Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City, July 2, 1921.

Half a thousand members of New York's Police Department have been assigned to preserve order in the stadium.

The heaviest of the heavies entered in the show, Jess Willard, the Toledo tumbler, shook the heads of two sparring partners with vicious lefts yesterday in his final hard workout. Jess will spend to-day and Friday in exercises to improve the wind. He expects to go into the ring weighing 242 pounds and hopes to finish young Floyd Johnson within eight rounds. But, Johnson, as confident a youngster as ever battled in the ring, thinks he will be able to wear out the aged former champion in 12 rounds. Johnson suffered a slight cut over his left eye sparring with Alex. Hart, the Philadelphia lightweight, Wednesday, and will do more sparring. His trainer, Willie Lewis, said yesterday that Johnson was in superb condition.

Jack McAuliffe, 11., of Detroit, and Luis Firpo, the South American champion, principals in the other 15-round match, appeared yesterday to be the finest physical specimens of the lot. The massive Firpo, both in condition and fighting style, has improved wonderfully since his engagement with Bill Brennan. His opponent, while not so powerful, is younger and has had more thorough ring schooling.

Fred Fulton the Minnesotan, and Jack Renault, Joe McCann and Bill Drake, the Englishman; Al. Reich and "Tiny" Herman, matched for the preliminaries, reported themselves to be fit, last night.

DARK HORSE IN RACE FOR HONORS

Farrell Says Cleveland the Most Underestimated Team in the American League.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, May 10.—(United Press).—Hot summer suns of mid-June and July provide the first real tests of a ball club's strength, when age begins to falter and youth starts to fade. Until the first quarter of the race begins to slip up on the half mark, pre-season predictions cannot be held up for accurate comparison.

Thus early, however, it is apparent that the Cleveland Indians were the most under-estimated club in the major leagues by the prophets who dared to outline the destinies of the sixteen clubs when they started three weeks ago.

Not only were the writers led astray, but Miller Huggins, manager of the Yanks, admits that he was mistaken in appraising the strength of the 1920 American League champions.

"The Indians are the dark horse in the American League race. If the dope bucket is to be spilled, it looks like Cleveland will provide the upset," Huggins said recently.

He still considers his Yankees as the favorite for the pennant, because of his faith in the value of pitching and for the same reason he figures the Detroit Tigers are next to him on paper form. The Yankee manager said before the season started that the White Sox were being overrated and that they lacked sufficient pitching strength. His judgment, so far, has been shown to be as accurate as any that can be ventured on a fickle game like baseball.

Summer suns, in the same connection, prove the big test for rookie ball players. The chill of spring, which ties up veteran arms and limbs, gives youngsters the inspiration and the opportunity to play miles over their heads. They always look good in the early games, but when the veterans get going, they fade away in droves. Figuring the fawof averages though, it seems that more rookies are up to stay this year than for many years in the past.

The Cleveland Indians certainly have two sticks in Outfielder Summa and Third Baseman Lutze, and the work of these two youngsters might mean a pennant for the Indians.

U.S. GOLFERS ARE STILL IN RUNNING

Ouimet the Favorite, But British Players Have an Excellent Opportunity to Win Title.

DEAL, England, May 10.—(Canadian Press).—The elimination of E. W. E. Holderness, present champion, and the victories of Cyril Tolley and Roger Wethered, featured tthe third round of play for the British amateur golf championship yesterday. The weather was fine and the course of the Royal Cinque Ports Club was in the best of condition. Francis Ouimet, Boston, the United States star, held the interest of a large gallery while he won his match.

To-day half of the fortunate 32 who are still in the running will be eliminated. The fifth round will be played in the afternoon, so that only eight will remain in the struggle by sun-down to-day Friday morning the sixth round will cut them to four and the semi-finals will be played Friday afternoon.

W. B. Torrance, British crack, won his match again yesterday and has taken a prominent place as a favorite to come through to the finals. He defeated G. L. Mellin, Addington, in a comparatively easy fashion, 4 and 5.

Roger Wethered, another of the favorites, had a harder tussle in opposing of his opponent, J. J. Murray, Romford, 3 and 1.

The match in which Cyril Tolley conquered Maxwell R. Marston Philadelphia, provided the thrills of the third round and drew the attention of the largest gallery that has followed any match since the tournament began.

WISEACRES OF THE RACING SEASON

The Eastern racing season is on. Binoculars, black-and-white checked suits, "dope sheets," mysterious conversations, wise expressions, strong cigars and wrong information are the order of the day. From now until the first frost people who know less and talk more about horses than any other persons on earth will festoon themselves about the various tracks and prove themselves all wrong if it takes all summer, regardless of cost.

A race-track fan is always willing to prove himself mentally deficient if he can do it at his own expense. He would rather be right than be Prime Minister, but he'd rather be wrong than be either.

Verily the pony follower is a weird onion. He wouldn't bet you 2.00 that the Imperial Limited, running ahead of schedule with a brand new engine and the road's most reliable engineer, would get in on time, but he'll wager the bank roll and his baby's shoes that an asthmatic twelve-year-old nag with an artificial leg will hang up a new record for speed and punctuality.

He lives on high signs and low whispers. Especially whispers. Everybody whispers at a race track. No information is accurate unless it comes out of the corner of the mouth with the noise of a slow leak in a pneumatic tire.

The idea evidently is to keep the horses from overhearing what they're saying about them. No horse can laugh and do his best work at the same time.

Whispering gets to be such a habit with a hornless-reindeer follower that he whispers the answer when you ask him what time it is.

He gets so he writes his query on a slip of paper when he wants to ask a friend if he has a match. And if the friend answers in the affirmative he cautions him not to let anybody else know it.

Everything is confidential. One of the impressive sights at any track any afternoon is that of 20,000 men furtively whispering to one another something the delicatessen dealer's boy got direct from the towel-supply man whose wife's cousin knows a sister of the man who airs J. K. L. Ross' dogs.

They play the races entirely by ear. After two or three months of following the galloping crowbait a man develops ears like an army mule. And they look well on him.

What the race bug needs more than anything else is ears that are son-refillable. An earless man always picks the winning horses. He can't hear the dope and is obliged to use common sense.

The horses are saddled and a number put on them fifteen minutes before each race. Numbers are put on race horses so that the bettors may designate after the race which ones they want poisoned.

The hard-boiled race-horse fan believes in signs. If a horse sweats before the race it is a sign he's in good condition. If the owner sweats it's a sign he isn't.

There are six races a day and all the participants are thoroughbreds. A thoroughbred horse is a horse whose ancestors never delivered milk, ice, coal, vegetables, or bananas.

AMERICAN LEAGUE JINX FOR BOEHLER

A First-Class Moundsman But Failed to Deliver in the Majors.

PITTSBURGH, May 10.—Manager Bill McKechnie of the Pirates is banking on George Boehler to add much strength to his pitching staff. Thereby hangs an interesting tale.

Boehler was purchased from the Tulsa, Okla., club of the Western Association for a fancy figure. With that team Boehler won 38 games last year, a most remarkable record.

The St. Louis Browns of the American League needs pitching as much as any club. The St. Louis Browns had the inside say on Boehler, yet failed to take him, because Boehler didn't care to pitch in the American League.

Boehler has twice served in the Johnsonian organization. Detroit carried him for about three years, hoping he would arrive. After a few years in the minors the St. Louis Browns picked him up held him for a time, then sent him to Tulsa.

Boehler has a world of stuff, as much as any star in the majors, yet his two trials in the American flivvered because of lack of control.

At the close of the season it was hinted that the Browns would take on Boehler once again. Boehler said he would much prefer staying in Tusla than going to the American League, but he would like a whirl at the National. His wishes were respected.

Boehler felt he was jinxed in the American, believes he can make good in the National. It will be interesting to watch his showing.

PITCHERS AFTER M'GRAW'S SCALP

Marquard, Toney and Benton Have Vowed Vengeance Against the Giants.

NEW YORK, May 10.—When Manager John McGraw of the New York Giants turned Rube Marquard over to Brooklyn, the Rube then and there vowed vengeance against McGraw.

Since Marquard joined the Dodgers he has trimmed the Giants a number of times and always seems to derive much satisfaction therefrom.

There are those who argue that McGraw is simply getting his just deserts for consigning Rube to a place like Brooklyn, Marquard always being very partial to the spotlight.

This year Marquard will be joined by two other pitchers in the plot to overthrow the Giants. Rube Benton and Fred Toney, former New York pitchers, complete the trio.

McGraw sent Rube Benton to the minors, when Benton was still some pitcher. Now he comes back to the National League as a member of the Cincinnati Reds. Benton says he is going to convince McGraw what an awful mistake he made by handing him a ticket to the bushes minus the return trip coupon.

After Fred Toney had flivvered against the Yankees in the 1921 world series McGraw traded the big pitcher to Boston. Toney refused to report, insisting he wouldn't be in the league if he joined Boston. The Braves finished such a bad last that Toney had close to the right dope.

Toney comes back to the National League a member of the St. Louis Cardinals. He is doing a comeback because he believes the Cardinals can win, and because he can help such an event by trimming the Giants four or five games, which he says he will positively do.

Looks like an open season for McGraw.

LACROSSE

A dozen of the intermediates and juniors turned out last night in spite of the rather unfavorable weather, and were put through a fast forty-five minute practice by Lou Lebarr, senior. Among those in line were: Ranger, Miller, Ald. Johnston, O'Toole, Brown, Simms, Donovan, Jack and Lou Lebarr, and three or four of George Mein's young athletics of last year who are breaking into the game in fine style.

All the players are expected to show up for to-night's 'Smoker," a term which inspires the moral that some of the squad might be far better off if they ran out of matches for the next five months.

Friday night's workout at Central Park will find the nets up and every thing all set for a full house. Fred Goodfellow is looking after the arrangements for the nets. It is hoped that all the candidates will report. It is generally felt that there is material enough here for three teams, but it is essential that something like a complete showing be made before the club is committed to juveniles, juniors and intermediates.

MODERN GOLF

By W. J. & Frank Thompson

NOTED CANADIAN GOLFERS

This is the first of a series of ten articles by W. J. Thompson, medallist and semi-finalist in the 1922 Canadian Amateur Championship, and his brother Frank Thompson, Canadian Amateur Champion, 1921. They are known to golfers all over America as players of great ability, and as enthusiastic propagandists of the Royal Game.

No. 1

FOUNDATION EXERCISES

The winter schools have lessened the long tedious winter months from the golfer's viewpoint somewhat. But although these schools are certainly helpful and instructive, they are a poor substitute for the game out of doors. As the season will soon be upon us it might be wise for the beginner as well as the seasoned player to pause and consider the best method of improving his game.

I would strongly suggest that each player make it a point to play as many games as possible with better players and especially those who undoubtedly possess good form. Example has always been considered more efficacious than precept, and this holds true of golf as well as of ethics. The imitative faculty of man has always been his chief means of development. The child uses it almost solely. Indeed, throughout life man never loses entirely his apish tendencies. Most of the star players of to-day learned their games as caddies by mimicking the styles of the best players in their locality. For the most part, caddies acquire their fames unconsciously, and so long as one plays unconsciously he usually plays well. Most of them can play every shot in the game. I know of one who could place a ball on the shop floor, chip it into the air with a mashie and catch it with his left hand, a trick that would make even Kirkwood green with envy. This boy, so far as I know, never saw any one do this particular stunt. There are a great number of things that boys learn by accident and experiment. Most boys can play a high ball or low one without knowing the science of the shot. Chic Evens was well on in his career as a golfer before he knew his best iron shot was called the push shot. He testifies himself that he was somewhat surprised to learn that he was considered a master of the push shot when he did not even know what the name meant.

Often times we forget that analysis comes after and not before the thing. The English language was spoken before any grammar of it was prepared, and golf was played before any science of it was written. In everything, but especially in golf, the acid test of theory is its workability. Too many, I think, try to learn exclusively and separately the theory of the game. I think better results would be obtained by blending theory and practice, and for this reason I think the ideal method is to play around the links with the instructor. In this way the player sees a living representation of the theory in motion. Much can be learned in this way, and, if the pupil is alert, among other things he will doubtless discover that the instructor does not always practice what he preaches.

It must be remembered that the caddy serves rather a long apprenticeship. He does not learn his game in one day, but gradually acquires a style. Someone has said that the first seven years are the worst. Although many have found this only too true, it need not be so, for one can make great progress in a season, depending of course on the practice given to the game. The caddy is always toying with a club, wagging it or making phantom swings, mimicking the best players of the club and burlesquing the worst. Some of the members would be not a little surprised and more chagrined to see how fiendishly accurate their swings and mannerisms are reproduced by these caddies. The exercises of the caddy are not without benefit. They serve very much the same purpose as pianoforte exercises for the pianist. They limber up and make pliable all the muscles. A beginner would, therefore, do well to copy the caddy in this respect and practice small chip shots or putting, for it is useless to try to develop the complicated movements of the drive before the simpler movements of the chip shot are learned. These small shots can be developed up to 100 yards or less, and are to be considered the foundation exercises of the game.

Prior to any exercises, the beginner should be taught a good grip, which is undoubtedly a finger one, even if the overlapping one is not used, although this method perhaps has advantages over all others. The underlying mechanics of the swing should be explained carefully, and then the player cannot get too much of the ground work exercises. After a certain amount of this work, the shots can be lengthened until the drive is reached. I do not think it wise to keep the player driving balls by the half-hour from the same place. One tires of this sort of practice very quickly and the muscles are very apt to become tensed and taut. There is also the danger of becoming careless, as one is not limited to one shot nor aiming at anything in particular. In the initial stages of the game for the purpose of developing golf muscles these shots are all right, but then the beginner should see that he aims at something definite, so as to reproduce the conditions of the actual round as much as possible.

A better method of practice, in my opinion, for the player who has graduated from the drudgery work, is to play around the links as a singleton, playing two balls, one against the other, with occasionally an extra shot thrown in as the player's fancy demands. In such cases it is less tiresome and more agreeable to have two caddies, one to carry the clubs and the other to watch and mark the ball and collect the occasional extra one. The player should play as many games as possible for he will soon find that there is a competitive element with all its emotional states in the match game that is absent in the practice round. It is easy to flick the dasies but quite a different thing to hit the ball. One should get accustomed to playing under fire, and the only way I know to feel at home with a gallery, or under strain, is to play often under such conditions.

Everyone should be allowed to develop his own individualities. It should not be possible for anyone to point out a player and say from his style that he took lessons from so and so, and yet this is a very common occurrence. The reason why I recommend learning the chip shot first is that it develops the waggle or the preliminary movements which are the beginning of every long swing. What a common sight it is to witness a player, and one who has taken scores of lessons, trying to drive without the faintest idea of the movements of the wrists! If the club is held properly and the chip shot practiced enough, these movements will follow naturally. Unless such movements are acquired first, I do not hold much hope for successful driving, as the drive is made up of these movements on a more extended scale.

NETHERLANDS INTERESTED IN MOTORIZED TRAMWAYS

The motorizing of interurban tramways is attracting considerable attention in various parts of Western Europe. A small interurban tramway leading to one of the suburbs of Amsterdam is operating successfully by the adaptation of a low-priced car as a tractor. This car, equipped with rubber tires, travels on the pavement and pulls the tramcar along the rails by means of a steelrod coupling.

TO MAKE RESORT DRY.

GRANDON, Wis., May 10.—(United Press.)— Miss Lulu Shaw, the first woman mayor in Wisconsin, is starting a campaign to clean up on liquor enofrcement in this northern town of 1,600 population.

Mayor Shaw was elected last month after a house-to-house canvass against "silk stockings" who, she said, had raised taxes and allowed the Eighteenth Amendment to go unenforced.

Crandon is not far from the Canadian line.

Two of her candidates of whose election depended the control of the city council, were defeated, but she will carry on her campaign to which she pledged herself.

Mayor Shaw is wealthy, her father having purchased large tracts of timberland in the early days of this district. She is now owner of the land and a summer resort, which she manages.

BLAME HAIR NET

NEW YORK, May 10.—Fancy a lowly hair net "working havoc" with medical missions in China!

One could better appreciate how a boll weevil singing a lullaby on a bald man's head in Atlanta, Ga., might cause a thunderstorm in Hotelgense.

According to an official bulletin of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, that's exactly what the hair net is doing to China.

American women demand hair nets by the tens of thousands. Oodles of 'em, despite our bob-haired young women. To turn them out factories work overtime in China, and these workshops employ many girls. They pay good wages too; better wages than the missions' hospitals can afford.

The entire staff of nurses of Temple Hill Hospital, Chefoo, walked out recently, and some of their successors followed suit a bit later.

The Board of Foreign Missions remarks that the only optimistic thing about it all is that no difficulty is being experienced in having men fulfill the places vacated by the girls.

DISCOVERY ANNOUNCED

Discovery of the long-sought fertilizer that will grow grass and kill weeds is announced by the experiment station of Rhoda Island State College, U.S.A., as the result of twenty years of research.

The realization of the dream of gardeners the world over, a weedless lawn, is possible without trouble or expense, according to the official college statement, merely by the us of ammonium suphate instead of nitrate of soda in the annual application of fertilizer. "Slowly but surely the weeds will disappear and the lawn become the even, velvety green that is the envy of very neighbor."

"Gardeners have almost universally advised supplying nitrogen, the chief element in the plant food of grass, in the form of nitrate of soda" says the statement. "This gradually tends to create an alkaline condition of the soil which is especially favorable to the growth of weeds. Soon the grass is crowded out and the lawn has an uneven appearance.

"By using ammonium sulphate, which is not more expensive, in the same quantities as the nitrate of soda, the required amount of nitrogen is furnished and the soil kept in the acid condition under which the grass develops best.

WEATHER INFLICTS NO SERIOUS DAMAGE

TORONTO, May 10.—(Canadian Press.)— This city was visited by another snow storm early this morning and for some hours after daybreak it resembled a winter morning.

During the night the temperature dropped to 27, or five degrees below freezing but the market gardeners and fruit dealers this morning expressed the opinion that no serious damage had been done. Sault Ste. Marie registered as low as 26 degrees, Toronto being the second lowest in the list of temperatures announced this morning.

PRIZE FIGHTS ATTRACT

(By Frederick G. Neumeier.)

MEXICO CITY, Mexico. (By Mail to the United Press.) — Record crowds are attending the prize fights in Mexico City.

At the Langford-Balsas fight for the championship of Mexico, held in the large bull ring, twenty thousand people attended.

Joe Brown, who hails from San Diego, Cal., won the title, when Montes, who is a San Antonio, Texas, boy, quit in the 18th round.

Promoters are planning regular weekly battles and it is expected that a boxing commission will be organized here shortly.

Rules of the New York Boxing Commission are being translated into Spanish and will be used as a basis for the operation of the Mexican commission.

Many Americans attend the fights here and it is believed that several of them will be official in the boxing commission.

WOMAN PROPHET ARRESTED

BERGEN, Norway, May 10.— Thes latest "dream preacher," one Maria Akerblom, has been arrested in Finland. The woman caused such a furor among the working classes that the authorities felt forced to take action.

Going from place to place on horse-back, with flowing hair, Maria foretold the immediate end of the world. She declared that in view of this to own a house or land to save money or do any kind of work, was useless. As a result of her preaching all of her large following of peasants, it is said, have been economically ruined.

AGED NEGRO

WASHINGTON, May 10.— (Associated Press.) — The oldest employee on the retirement rolls of the government is Mark Thrash, a negro, of Rossville, Georgia, who, according to the Bureau of Pensions is 102 years old and has been in the federal employ for 28 years. He was retired last year as a laborer in the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park, at Chattanooga. He claims December 15, 1820, as his birthday.

Way back in the "forties," Mark was sent with a gang to clear land on a plantation bought by his master in Meriweather County, Georgia, and there had many encounters with the Indians. After the Civil War Thrash went to Arkansas but returned again to Chattanooga about the time the Central of George Railroad was under construction, and there he got a job.

Later he became a watchman in the old "Park Hotel" in Chickamauga, afterwards joining the government service as a laborer in the park. He was carried on the payroll for 28 years before his retirement.

Six years have passed, since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away

The world may change from year to year,
And friends from day to day,
But never will the one we loved
From our memory pass away

MONSTROUS SPECIMEN DESPOTIC LEGISLATION

Sir John Simon Declares League of Nations as Operating at Present is a Fraud Run by French for the French.

THE SAAR DECREE

LONDON, May 11.—(Special.)—The pungent criticism of the League of Nations Commission governing the Saar region, of which former Mayor Waugh of Winnipeg, is the Canadian representative, which was made last night in the House of Commons by Sir John Simon and former Premier H. M. Asquith, is the subject of some editorial comment in the British press this morning.

During the discussion, which was raised by Sir John Simon moving to reduce the Foreign Office vote, Mr. Asquith said that "in all the annals of despotism in the worst days of the Russian history there can be found no more monstrous specimen of despotic legislation, no more suppressive action of the ordinary rights of free citizenship, than this step. It is the greatest blow struck against the honorable authority of the League of Nations. The League as constituted at present is a farce, a fraud, run by the French for the French.

Suggest Inquiry.

Mr. Mackinnon Wood in defending the issue of the order, suggested the holding of an inquiry into the administration of the Saar Valley through the machinery of the League.

The action of the commission, which derives its authority from the League, will undoubtedly give the enemies of the League some powerful ammunition for further attacks.

It seems incredible that the Council should authorize the decree without further investigtaion, says an influential journal this morning. Unless the decree is rescinded the matter will undoubtedly be raised at the meeting of the League Assembly next September, and the Commission will likely be severely criticized.

Threatens to Resign.

It is known in London that Mr. Waugh vigorously opposed the decree, even threatening to resign from that body unless it was withdrawn, but the French representatives were adamant and secured the support of the other four representatives.

Unless this policy of aggressive militarism is immediately changed the resignation of Mr. Waugh from the Saar Commission will be tendered in the next few days.

QUEBEC INSANE ASYLUM BURNED

Heroic Efforts of Sisters Saved Two Hundred and Fifty Patients From Injury.

QUEBEC, May 11. — (Canadian Press).—Baie St. Paul Insane Asylum was destroped by fire early this morning. Two hundred and fifty imbeciles or others mentally deficient made their escape without panic. No one is said to have been seriously injured.

The destroyed building, which was of brick construction, five storeys high, was erected three years ago. It was operated by Les Petites Soeurs Franciscaines de Marie. The fire, which started at two o'clock, was discovered by one of the inmates shouting at the top of his voice, "I am burning Sister, I am burning."

Sixteen Sisters who have charge of the wing rushed into their clothing and proceeded to release patients and muster them out. The patients were marched down stairs to the first floor given clothing and conducted outside. Though they were all mental defectives and ranged in age from three years to seventy-five not a single casualty occurred. This was attributed as much to fine behavior of the vast majority of the patients, as to the heroic efforts of Sisters.

HYDRO SURVEYS POSSIBILITY OF NEW RESERVOIR

Engineers Are at Work Between Belmont Lake and Trent River—May Build Canal.

TAP BIG AREA

Surveys of the water resources in East Peterborough and of the problem of tapping them to augment the flow of the Trent through the main power plants at Healey Falls and below Campbellford are being carried forward by Hydro-Electric engineers on a project that has been mooted at times as a probable development of the Trent power system.

The waters on the eastern boundary of the county drain an extensive area and comprise a reservoir which, if accessible, would in all probability, remove the power worries of this district. In Belmont Township there are Round, Belmont and Crowe Lakes, with connections reaching north and east practically to the northern limits of both Hastings and Peterborough counties. It is understood that the levels now being taken between Belmont Lake and the Trent River are for the purpose of ascertaining the possibilities of a canal through that section The conservation, use and control of the waters that reach away to the north and north-east of Havelock has been suggested as a project that should not entail too heavy a cost while opening up an exceedingly extensive watershed.

Engineers have been working during the past winter in the vicinity of Belmont Lake and are now reported taking levels between the Lake and the Trent.

SCHOOL TEACHER HAS "TALKING SICKNESS"

PARSONS, Kansas, May 11. — (United Press.) — Talking almost continuously since last Thanksgiving and still going strong, is the unique record of Miss Mildred Spencer, 20-year-old schoolmam of this city.

Miss Spencer while visiting her home in Baldwin for the Thanksgiving vacation, prattled incessantly of "cabbages and kings," but the family thought she was only overjoyed to return. But when she awakened her mother night after night to continue the talk-fest, the family became alarmed.

Several weeks ago the patient was brought to a local sanitarium, where physicians diagnosed her malady as "talking sickness."

Miss Spencer is widely read and has a wealth of material upon which to enlighten attendants. She rarely repeats herself.

ENGLAND AND ITALY AGREE IN REPLIES TO GERMANY

Both Notes Follow the Same General Lines and Will Be Presented to Berlin Simultaneously—No Advance Copies to U. S.

LONDON, May 11.—(Canadian Press.)— The British note to Germany regarding reparations, probably will be delivered to the German Ambassador here to-morrow or Sunday, copies meantime being transmitted to France and Belgium as an act of courtesy.

As already indicated, Italy's reply follows the same general lines as the British response, and will be presented to Berlin simultaneously.

As the United States is not directly concerned with reparations, the British Government has not entered into conversations with Washington regarding the reply to Berlin, and no advance copies of the Cabinet's note will go to the United States.

W. S. FIELDING'S BUDGET REFLECTS IMPROVEMENT IN TRADE AND FINANCE

But the Minister of Finance Announces Heavy Increase in the Net National Debt.--Effort to Make Budget Balance is Intimated.

TWO CENT POSTAGE ?

OTTAWA, May 11.—(Special). —In the House this afternoon, the Budget, the most important government statement of the year was delivered by Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance.

For the most part of yesterday the Cabinet had its proposals under review and its secrets were closely guarded until they were disclosed to day by Hon. Mr. Fielding. Intimations and rumors which usually precede announcement of the annual financial statement were that the Finance Minister would declare his intention of making his budget balance during the financial year, that he would increase British preference reduce customs duties in certain lines, restore the two cent postage on letters, and that certain concessions would be granted to producers of native wines.

The budget reflected an improvement in trade and financial conditions, at the same time announcing a heavy increase in the net national debt.

Revenues again have failed to meet the total expenditure, and here was where Mr. Fielding 's greatest task lay. Estimating revenue on a basis of last year and basing expenditure on estimates now before the House, Mr Fielding has a gap of roughly speaking fifty millions to fill if he is to make his budget balance.

In this, his seventeenth budget, Mr. Fielding holds the record for budgeteers in the British Empire.

APPLAUSE FOR MINISTER

The Hon. W. S. Fielding, veteran Minister of Finance, was loudly applauded when he appeared in the House this afternoon to deliver the second budget of the present Parliament, and the seventeenth of his career.

Mr. Fielding rose to begin his speech at 3.25 after the House had dealt with several routine items of minor importance.

The revenue had been $351,922,386 and the ordinary expenditure had been $347,560,690; as surpluses had been calculated in the past, there had therefore been a surplus of $34,391,696 Capital expenditure had totalled $16,295,332, so that with ordinary and capital expenditure taken together there had been a surplus of $18360,000.

The other fire was in J. H. Morin and Company's building, paint and varnish manufacturers, Colborne Street. The damage will run about twelve thousand dollars.

Poincare Expects To Have Peace Soon

VICHY, France, May 11.—(Canadian Press.) — Premier Poincare yesterday delivered an address at the Congress of the National Union of War Veterans. He declared that the latest German proposition failed to hide the German Government's purpose of disavowing the Versailles Treaty and wilful failure to fulfill her engagements. He added, however, that in the combat now being waged by France to obtain her due courage, patience and confidence were needed only a little while longer. Then the colouds would dissipate and France would have a just and equitable peace.

R. L. DOBBIN IS NEW CHAIRMAN ENGINEER CLUB

Reports at the Annual Meeting of Engineering Institute Last Night Show Progress..

OFFICERS ELECTED

"If we look into the conditions as they existed, financially and industrially, a year ago, we have all reason to believe that we are now facing prosperity," is the opinion Mr. P. P. Westbye expressed in his closing address as chairman of the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institution of Canada at the annual meeting in the Chamber of Commerce last night. Mr. Westbye pointed out that the barometer of business is the iron and steel production, and, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the production of iron in Canada in February showed an increase over 1922 of 32 per cent.

The increase has not been in the form of a boom, but has been steady and healthy. The pulp and paper industry, one of the most important in Canada, shows a very large increase in production and export. Water power developments are being made, and the mining industry is opening up. These activities, Mr. Westbye said, make an opportunity for the professional engineer to take a part in the world which belongs to him.

Reviewing shortly the important engineering achievements which have been made in the city during the year of his office, the speaker mentioned the new home of the Western Clock Company, the layout of the new transformer station, the layout of the sewage disposal plant, and others, in which members of the Peterborough branch E. I. C. took a prominent part.

Mr. Westbye expressed his appreciation of the services of all the members of the branch, especially the work of the secretary and other officers, and the executive.

One of the Best.

Fraser S. Keith, secretary of the Engineering Institute of Canada, was expected to address the meeting, but was unable to be present. In a telegram of regret he referred to the Peterborough branch as one of the best branches of the Institute.

Mr. E. R. Shirley, in reporting for the Meetings Committee, remarked on the number of expressions of thanks from members of the general public who had taken advantage of the practice of the Engineers to throw open the meeting to citizens when subjects of public interest were being discussed. There was an average attendance over the year of 80 to 90 per cent. of the members.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are: Hon. Chairman, P. P. Westbye; Chairman, R. L. Dobbin; Vice-Chairman, E. R. Shirley; Secretary, R. C. Flitton; Treasurer, A. B. Gates; Executive: A. L. Killaly, R. B. Rogers, B. L. Barnes, D. L. McLaren, A. H. Munro and H. O. Fisk.

During the evening several films depicting the beauties of Canada from coast to coast were shown, and at the close of the very successful meeting refreshments were served!

CONSERVATIVE WOMEN PREPARE FOR THE FRAY

Organize West Peterborough Forces, Elect Officers and Plan for Provincial Elections Campaign.

MRS. FALLIS PRESIDES

Conservative women of West Peterborough gathered in goodly strength at the Empress Hotel last evening, and organized into a combative force for contesting this riding in the Provincial elections. United co-operation with the men's organization in behalf of the Conservative candidate for the Legislature, whoever he may be, featured the meeting, while utterances by the women's leaders reflected whole-hearted loyalty to the cause of Liberal-Conservatism, and unshaken confidence in the death of Drurvism at the polls on June 23.

Capable Organizer

Miss Constance Boulton, president of the Women's Liberal-Conservative Association for the whole of Toronto, made an exceedingly capable and interest-stimulating organizer, whose enthusiasm found ready response from her audience of the fair sex.

Mrs. S. T. Medd officiated as provisional secretary of the proceedings, which resulted in the following executive being elected: President, Mrs. W. Fallis, of North Monaghan; 1st vice-president, Mrs. S. T. Medd; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. F. A. Miller; permanent secretary, Mrs. Roland Denne; treasurer, Mrs. George G. Evans.

By ananimous vote the name adopted by this women's political organization is the Women's Liberal-Conservative Association of West Peterborough, and both the city and rural districts were promisingly represented last night. The above named executive were empowered to appoint chairmen for the several wards and districts, each chairman to select official heads for the 87 subdivisions into which the riding is divided for campaign purposes.

Stirring Address

Miss Boulton, in a stirring address preliminary to organization, urged upon her hearers to realize the importance of the occasion, when the country is faced by Provincial general elections. She also stressed the need of an aggressive campaign to put into administrative effect a policy founded on those splendid traditions and high ideals of Liberal-Conservatism which she extolled as embodying principles for government in the best interests of the people, individually, nationally and imperially. Claiming that it is inequitious for any man or woman to declare a lack of interest in politics, thereby implying that they care not how their country is governed, the speaker warned her audience that unless Canadians exercise their franchise at the polls the country may eventually fall under the administration of the ignorant, Bolsheviki and Socialists. We women, she emphasized, having gained our franchise after a struggle are duty-bound to rise to a sense of our responsibilities, not only in election campaigns and at the polls, but also by inculcating in our boys and girls and newcomers a knowledge of and interest in Canadian politics.

An Active Body

Continuing, Miss Constance strongly advised this nucleus of what she anticipated would be an active Conservative organization of women to cultivate en-

TENANTS AND OWNERS MEET

But Programme Slated Postponed Owing to Small Attendance—Civic Expenditures Were Reviewed..

A smaller attendance than anticipated caused the postponement last evening of the projected meeting of the Owners' and Tenants' Association in the G.W.V.A. Hall. Counter attractions and a "peculiar lack of interest in civic problems" were the causes blamed for the small attendance, which numbered only about thirty men.

The president, M. J. Maher, prefaced his announcement of postponement of the meeting and election of officers until a later date, with the recital of a few figures which he thought might well be the subject of consideration by those present

"In the last four months," said Mr. Maher, "current civic expenditures have amounted to $162,890.61, of which total an amount of $78,917.15 has been paid out for educational purposes alone, or, in other words, almost fifty per cent. of the city's expenses in the last four months have been for education.

"The Trust Commissioners' demands for this year amount to $288,086.76. Of this amount, the Waterworks and Hydro take care of $84,536.40, leaving a balance of $203,560.36 to be supplied by the citizens generally.

"In the first four months of the year 1921, police expenditures amounted to $8,333.91. In the first four months of 1922, they were $8,263.73. In the corresponding period of this year, which is supposed to be a year of retrenchment and economy, police expenses are $9,232.55."

Assist Cochrane.

Before adjourning, Mr. G. H. Giroux rose to ask that the association take some action towards assisting the town of Cochrane, scourged by a catastrophe in which 800 of its people, about one-third of the population, have been stricken with typhoid fever. On motion of J. W. Fraser, seconded by W. H. Lytle, a committee to approach the Mayor and the executive of the Red Cross Society, with regard to this matter, was appointed, composed of Messrs. M. J. Maher, W. H. Bradburn and G. H. Giroux.

C. P. R. HAS NEW POLICY FOR COLONIZATION OF WESTERN FARM LANDS

Will Re-write Present Contracts to Spread Indebtedness Over Period of Thirty-Four Years.

30,000 AFFECTED.

MONTREAL, May 11.— (Canadian Press.)—In a statement of a new land colonizing policy of the Canadian Pacific Railway and their public here yesterday by E. W. Beatty, K.C. president of the company, the indebtedness of farmers who now have contracts with the company will be taken over by the Canadan Pacific Railway and their contracts will be re-written and the indebtedness spread over a period of 34 years, the farmer to receive title to his land upon completion of the thirty-fourth payment. No annual payment of interest and principal combined shall exceed seven per cent. of the farm. Thirty thousand farmers in Canada are affected by the proposal.

"The Canadian Pacific Railway is at all times, accurately apprised of the tenor of the national mind because it is in itself, one of the largest land owners in the west; because as a national organization it is vitally interested in preserving prosperity throughout the Dominion and because it knows that in the western provinces increasing farm costs together with low prices obtainable for farm products have seriously affected those farmers not definitely and firmly established in the operations.

"The present position is due to several causes. During the war the high prices realized for farm produce and bountiful crops obtained in 1915-16 induced expenditures by farmers for extra equipment, and increased land holdings, which since the decrease of farm produce without a similar decrease in wages or cost of living together with crop failures in some districts has resulted in a rapidly increasing burden of debt, and in the case of some 30,000 farmers holding land under contract for purchase from the company—through no fault of their own—they find themselves behind in their payments and a certain amount of discouragement and depression has resulted which if unchecked and unremedied must inevitably spread wider, breeding a spirit of pessimism, with its many attendant evils.

"The Canadian Pacific has always been the pioneer in providing favorable terms for the colonistaion of its lands in the west, particularly in connection with the terms under which their lands have been sold, in the preparation of ready-made farms, the advance of live stock to settlers, loans made to them and the aid granted through its agricultural and development departments. It is that the new plan will do much to re-establish confidence in the west, retain settlers who are now proposing to leave and stimulate immensely the immigration of desirable agricultural colonists.

"Briefly the plan is to take the indebtedness of the farmer who now have contracts with the company, re-write their contracts and spread the present indebtedness over a period of thirty-four years on an amortization plan. The settler will pay the same amount annually for thirty-four years and upon completion of the thirty-fourth payment receives title to the land; he is assured that no annual payment of interest and principal combined will exceed seven per cent of the cost of the farm. The plan will absorb his total indebtedness in easy payments, allowing him sufficient from profits to provide both the comforts and enjoyments of life for his family.

"The future of Western Canada, in fact of Canada as a whole is dependent upon greater population. If farmers were even fairly well satisfied with their conditions it would greatly facilitate the securing of more desirable settlers. There is at present a considerable exodus from the west which is practically nullifying the efforts of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Government to encourage new peoples to come in. The loss of people to the country is a loss to Canadian business in general, affecting manufacture, commerce, transportation, etc. To get desirable immigrants we must have fairly well satisfied settlers.

"Under the new Canadan Pacific plan, farmers will now be able to be successful upon their holdings, and the government and the railroads be in a position to encourage prospective settlers to take up unsold or unoccupied farm lands. In Great Britain, the United States and other countries from which desirable immigration is ready to flow, a marked stimulus to land settlement will without doubt, result from the introduction of the new policy as outlined."

Snowplow Replaced Town Water Wagon

PARRY SOUND, May 11. — (Canadian Press.) — Instead of the town water wagon, which was in operation here on Monday morning, we had the snow plow in operation here yesterday morning, and sleighs replaced wheels for a time. Snow covers the whole north country, in places many feet deep, but the last snowfall gave us six inches to a foot on the level. Early gardeners, who have been using their green rhubarb and onions were not able to find them for the accumulation of snow.

Not in the mmory of man has snow fallen to so great a depth at this time of the year.

NO COMPROMISE WITH THE REBELS

Cosgrave Refuses to Deal With De Valera Till an Honest Effort to Obtain Peace is Made.

DUBLIN, May 11.—(Canadian Press).—In the Dail Eireann yesterday Tom Johnson, Labor leader, again urged the Government to endeavor to compromise with Eamon De Valera; he suggested that the Republicans' question could be met without weakening the Government's position, while peace with repression would leave 12,000 prisoners in Ireland, whom it would not be safe to release. He advised the Government to announce the cessation of raids and arrests for one month.

President Cosgrave refused to recede from his previous position. He declared that the irregulars would only accept peace if guaranteed a lease of political life and the Government would not guarantee that. When there was an honest peace effort the Government would not be found wanting, but in the meantime it declined to withdraw a single soldied from duty.

Predicts Coal Mining From Under the Sea.

SYDNEY, N.S., May 11.—(Associated Press)—Engineers in time will be able to take coal and iron ore from under the sea at distances of five miles or more from shore, according to F. W. Gray, an executive of the British Empire Steel Corporation. Workings already extend two and a quarter miles to sea at Sydney mines, and 70 per cent, of the coal produced in Nova Scotia comes from beneath the ocean.

The cost of bringing deposits to the surface rather than failure of the seams, will place a limit on submarine mining operations, Mr. Gray thinks.

Although coal is being taken from under the sea at several points in Great Britain, Australia, Japan, and China, the Nova Scotia coal areas and the iron mines at Wabana, Newfoundland, are the scenes of the largest undersea mining workings in the world. According to Mr. Gray, they are capable of indefinite expansion, some of the Wabana seams being 35 feet thick.

Inundation is the greatest danger added to the usual hazards of land operations. Engineering skill, however, has reduced the number of these accidents, the chief of which occurred at the Takashima colliery in Japan, where many lives were lost, and on the Cumberland coast in England in 1834, where 36 men were drowned.

STOCKS AND BONDS

At the present time there is a great boom in the mining industry. I have had many years experience in practical mining, both in Cobalt and Porcupine, and have a wide connection there. I am therefore in a position to get early and reliable information in both camps. I have made a profit for every one of my clients up to date, and shall be pleased to advise any one interested. There will be a strong market this summer and now is the time to get in.

COMMITTEE IS TOLD COSTS OF FARMING TOOLS

Binders Were Sold Last Year at a Loss of $68 Each — Working One-Third Capacity.

INTEREST CHARGED.

OTTAWA, May 11. Canadian Press. — That binders last year were sold at a net approximate loss of $68 each was stated by Thomas Bradshaw, general manager of the Massey-Harris Co., giving evidence yesterday afternoon before the Special Committee enquiring into agricultural conditions.

Conditions during previous year he said were hardly less satisfactory. The company's plant had only been operating at one half of capacity, while the expenses remained in many respects as high as when the full output was being produced.

Mr. Bradshaw was given the understanding by Chairman, A. B. McMaster of Brome, that detailed figures would not be published inasmuch as the witness claimed that this would be unfair to his company. Evidencing the greatly advanced price of production, the witness said that factory expense has increased some 400 per cent. since 1915 while the cost of administration also showed a very large increase.

The rates of interest charged by his company to amounts owing, he said, was 8 per cent. in Manitoba and Alberta, and 9 per cent in Saskatchewan. After maturity the rate was 10 per cent, in the first two named provinces and 9 per cent in Saskatchewan

Thomas Sales of Saltcoats insisted upon the committee's attention being drawn to the fact that Saskatchewan did not set the rate of interest on notes but merely stipulated the maximum legal rate.

Mr. McMaster said that this heaping up of interest reminded him of the saying that the "destruction of the poor is their poverty." He said it appeared to him that the discouragement of the debtor by this means might easily offset the additional interest.

Mr. Bradshaw said that his company was greatly concerned about the west.

Thomas Sales struck in with: — "You have got to withdraw that 9 per cent interest. That is the first question."

It was most unfortunate, continued Mr. Bradshaw, that so much had been said about the so-called depression in the west. The depression, he held, was not greater than it had been in the other provinces. Furthermore it was not local but was noted in the east as well as in the United States. Publicity of such kind did the country a great deal of harm. A business man would not publish abroad his financial difficulties

OPTIMISTIC REPORT EXPECTED IN BUDGET SPEECH BY FIELDING

Increase in Trade and General Optimism Throughout Dominion During the Past Year.

REVENUES INCREASE.

OTTAWA, May 11.— (Canadian Press.)—To-day Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, will make his seventeenth budget speech. His statement will reflect a year much more encouraging than that on which he had to report a year ago.

Last year he had to report a decline in trade and in the revenues of the country and a big increase in the national debt. This year he can tell of growing trade, of increased revenue, and of a lessened rise in the net debt of the country. He is able too to report that the Dominion is materially nearer to a return to a gold basis for our currency.

Mr. Fielding must budget again for an expenditure that is in excess of the revenues of the last year, but on the other hand he can fall back on the fact that the expenditures of the year just closed were much lower than the estimates voted for that period.

The revenue of the financial year just closed was $384,000,000, an increase of over twelve millions over the year previous. The estimates for that twelve-month were $497,000,000 but the expenditures reported up to the end of March were only $321,000,000.

For the coming year the estimtaes brought down so far are $433,000,000 as compared with revenue last year of $384,000,000. This leaves fifty millions roughly to be made up; but it is open to the government to bridge the gap by cutting expenditure as well as by increasing taxation.

During the year just closed there was a decrease of $21,000,000 in the gross debt but an increase of $45,000,000 in the net debt. The decrease of $21,000,000 in the gross debt was made possible by a surplus on current account of some $77,000,000. The balance of the surplus went in payments to railways and other extraordinary expenditures. The same class of expenditures explain most of the increase in the net debt, though there was a falling off of some $25,000,000 in the miscellaneous and banking assets which do not include railways.

The increase in the net debts during the last year of $45,000,000 compares favorably with an increase in the net debt during the year previous of $73,000,000. The net debt of the country now stands at $2,430,202,551.

Trade during the last fiscal year has grown encouragingly. There was an increase of nearly $250,000,000 in the value of our gross foreign trade during the twelve months. The total for the year just ended was $1,748,000,000 as compared with $1,501,000,000 for the year previous. Both exports and imports increased but muhc the larger increase was in the exports of our domestic products. The rise in imports was from $747,000,000 to $802,000,000; while in exports the increase was from $740,000,00 to $932,000,000.

The approach of Canada toward the gold standard during the year has been remarkable. A year ago March the percentage of gold to Dominion notes was 33.4. At the end of the fiscal year just closed it was 51.7. In January it was as high as 54.7.

During the hearings of the Commons' committee on banking and commerce opinion has been twice expressed by bankers that Canada could to-day afford to go back to a gold basis.

RUSSIAN DELEGATES SHOT AT LAUSANNE 1 KILLED AND 2 DYING

Assailant of Soviet Delegates Seized By Police—Vorovsky Killed Outright.

WERE AT DINNER.

LAUSANNE, May 11.—(Canadian Press).—M. Vorovsky, head of the Russian Soviet delegation at the Lausanne Peace Conference, was assassinated last night. He was shot several times and killed outright.

M. Ahrens, head of the Soviet Press Bureau in Lausanne, and M. Didwilkowski, another Russian, were wounded, the former seriously.

Vorovsky and his party were dining at the Hotel Cecil. A young man seated a few tables away arose after he had finished his dinner, and after leisurely partaking of coffee calmly walked over to the Russians' table and opened fire without warning. Vorovsky was the first victim and the assassin then turned the weapon on Ahrens, who was struck by three bullets, twice in the thigh and once in the shoulder.

Ahrens, nevertheless, managed to draw his revolver on his assailant, but a waiter rushed forward and knocked up his arm. Meanwhile the assassin shot Didwilkowski in the body.

The assassin was seized as he attempted to escape from the hotel. His name is Maurice Alexander Conradi, and according to the police, who subjected him to a severe grilling, belongs to the Canton of Grisons.

Conradi is 38 years of age and was born at Anders. He expressed no regret and admitted that he had formerly served in the Russian army. He returned recently from Russia and came to Lausanne yesterday from Zurich, where he had been residing.

Conradi refused to state the motive for his act or whether he had accomplices. However, nothing yet has been fouad to connect him with the Fascisti, who had warned Vorovsky to get out of Switzerland.

An examination of Didwilkowski by surgeons disclosed two bullets in the abdomen, which they were not able to extract. Late last night his condition was alarming. He is twenty years of age and was Vorovsky's secretary.

It is declared that the fact that the position of the Russian delegation has never been properly defined may have contributed to bring about last night's attack on the Russians.

AGAINST COMBINES.

The main thing about the Federal Act to investigate combines in Canada, as the Examiner sees it, is that the machinery is made available for use in case there is any necessity for delving into the operations of any particular industry that is apparently exploiting the public.

The legislation may not be perfect and doubtless particulars in which it can be improved may suggest themselves from time to time, but at least it affords a better opportunity for the correction of such concerns as have clearly shown that they are combines against the public interest, than has hitherto existed.

Any business in Canada that is content with a reasonable profit, and that is not preying upon the public, has no need to fear the new legislation, which does not seem to contain anything that should create a feeling of alarm among such enterprises.

There will be no attack upon legitimate business concerns which are not exactng exhorbitant profits.

It may follow too that even concerns which are operating along lines that call for a maximum of profit may also be kept unmolested.

In other words that the law although on the statute books may not be evoked.

But at least the machinery will be there—and that at least is something.

ALBERTA COAL.

The drive to secure for Ontario, if possible, a supply of Alberta coal in sufficient quantity and at a low enough price to make the province more or less independent of the American mines, seems to be centering upon the question of freight rates.

That appears to be the wrong way to go about it.

Sir Henry Thornton has announced a freight rate of $9 a ton on Alberta coal, and instead of following his example and announcing a minimum rate for their product at the mines the Alberta operators are contenting themselves with attacking the head of the Canadian National Railways for not fixing a lower rate.

There will have to be concessions made by everybody if there is any hope of the Alberta coal supply being utilized, and just at this stage of the proceedings, an evidence of a desire to co-operate would have a more helpful appearance than does the criticism directed at the only man who has yet done anything to bring the possibility of western coal nearer.

It should be accepted as an axiom that the Canadian National Railways cannot be asked to carry Alberta coal at a loss.

The figure announced by Sir Henry is possibly a little high, and if it is found feasible, there is no doubt he will consent to a lower rate.

But, in the meantime, let us have from the other interested parties an evidence of their willingness to do their part in promoting the success of the scheme.

The Examiner feels that it is the turn of the coal operators to say what they are prepared to do.

THE FIGHT IS ON.

With the date of the election announced as June 25th the campaign in Ontario may now be regarded as officially launched and for the next few weeks the province will more or less give itself over to politics.

The fight promises to be one of the most interesting in the history of political campaigns in Ontario, inasmuch as the situation is complicated by the number of aspirants for election.

In most of the ridings three-cornered contests are inevitable, for both Liberal and Conservative parties seem to have adopted the slogan of "a candidate in every riding", while in the rural and semi-rural constituencies there will be U.F.O. standard-bearers and in urban ridings Labour will throw its hat in the ring.

In addition, the candidature of a number of independent seekers after political preferment may be taken for granted, so that the ridings in which only two candidates will enter the lists will be very much in the minority.

The situation in West Peterborough is typical of conditions generally in the province.

Three starters, Liberals, Conservatives and Mr. Tooms are certain in this constituency, and the entrance of a Farmer candidate is still a possible development of the situation.

The sitting member Mr. Tooms, has already announced his candidature, the Conservative convention is advertised for May 16th and the date of the Liberal convention may be expected almost immediately.

STRICKEN COCHRANE.

The wisdom of making sure of a supply of pure water is demonstrated by the experience of the town of Cochrane where more than one-quarter of the citizens are ill with typhoid fever—the epidemic being caused by an infected water supply.

Had not Peterborough taken the precaution of installing a modern filtration plant this city might have had a similar experience.

There were times before the filtration plant was built when the danger was great and when the water had to be very heavily chlorinated.

The conditions in Cochrane are now so bad that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, has found it necessary to endorse an appeal to the people of the province for funds—an appeal that is being made by the Ontario Red Cross.

For many weeks the municipality of Cochrane has endeavoured to take care of the sick, but the funds are now exhausted and financial assistance is urgently needed.

Money is required for the temporary support of an emergency hospital and for food and equipment.

The situation has got beyond the control of local effort and the people of Ontario are asked to come at once to the aid of families who are no longer in a positon to help themselves.

With more than one in every four citizens in Cochrane stricken—in many cases the bread winner of the family laid low—the plight of the Northern town is critical.

The response to the appeal of the Emergency Committee of the Red Cross should be instantaneous and ample.

The need is great—and assistance to be of any avail must be proffered at once.

"VOX POPULI"

"The will of the people shall prevail."

It is significant of the trend of the times that the party leaders who will contest a provincial election during the next few weeks take refuge behind this common battlement whenever the question of prohibitory liquor legislation is raised, says the Hamilton Spectator. Premier Drury differs from his opposition only insofar as he sings the refrain in the past tense. Messrs. Ferguson and Hay apply it to the present. The Ontario Temperance act will undoubtedly be much in the limelight during the campaign. It will be held up to ridicule and it will not lack for defenders But it is an issue so fraught with political dynamite that seasoned old gladiators may well be pardoned if they talk all around the subject and leave the answer to "their own dear public."

The premier and his followers, having ridden into office on the "water-wagon," naturally have no intention of deserting that vehicle for a more peppy equipage. It served its purpose once, they reason, and they will depend upon it to again transport the party to Queen's park.

The Ontario Temperance act, however, has proven itself to be one of the most contentious pieces of legislation ever inscribed upon the statute books of the province. Prepared in haste to meet an emergency, it would be surprising indeed, if it had emerged a perfect document. Its most ardent supporters admit it is not that. The fact that the present government has refused to remove the contradictory features of the act and now declines to give the people a further opportunity, through the medium of a referendum, of passing an opinion, based upon a four-year test, is what the opposition benches are protesting.

The attitude of Messrs. Ferguson and Hay is, quite apparently, that the venerable old "water-wagon" should be of sufficient strength to carry everybody. Their concern seems to be that its weak spokes should be repaired, to ensure that the trip across the arid desert may be negotiated in safety.

MIGHT MAKE A TEST CASE.

(London Advertiser)

There is need for greater simplicity and directness in the framing and wording of some of the legislation describing the functions of civic boards. For instance, there is hardly a municipality that has not had a controversy in an effort to find out where the powers of a police commission end and those of the city council begin.

Can the city council control the expenditures of the police commission? Can the council cut the estimates of that board? Attorney-General Raney made the statement in the legislature that the council had the power to "prune" the estimates of the police board, and that view seems to have given rise to the belief in many quartres that the council in any city is in control of the situation. Mr. Raney may have meant that the council had the right to eliminate any expenditure that did not come within the authority of the police commission. He could hardly have meant that a city council had a right to trim the estimates with a view to controlling the extent or operation of the police force.

Mr. R. R. Hall, K.C., Peterborough, gives his opinion on the matter, and states in the first place that section 298 of the municipal act shows that it is the positive duty of the council to provide money to maintain the police force.

Under section 354 a board of police commissioners for cities is duly constituted, and under section 359 the board have exclusive power to determine the number of policemen that are absolutely necessary for the city in which the board acts.

Under section 361 the board have power to make regulations "for rendering it (the police force) efficient in the discharge of its duties, and under section 362 the members of the police force are "subject to the government of the board and must obey its lawful directions."

Under section 363 "the board shall on or before the first day of March in each year prepare and submit to the council for its consideration and approval its estimates of all moneys requred for the ensuing year to pay the remuneration of the members of the police force and to provide and pay for offices, watch-houses, watch-boxes, arms, accoutrements, clothing and other things for the accomodation, use and maintenance of the force."

The city council of Peterborough has evidently cut the police estimates, and by so doing Mr. Hall believes the members have laid themselves open to a serious penalty. To back up this view he quotes from section 164 of the criminal code, that "every one is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to one year's imprisonment who, without lawful excuse, dissolves any act of any legislature in Canada by wilfully omitting to do any act which it requires to be done." Mr. Hall advises that the matter can best be brought to a head and settled by having aldermen who "illegally sought to prune the board's estimates duly indicted under section 164 of the criminal code." His contention is that if the aldermen were allowed to prune and hack away at police estimates they could reduce the police force to a point where there would be no protection to the citizens, and the blame would rest with the aldermen themselves.

No city wants to see Peterborough aldermen gazing through prison bars for a year, but at the same time it would be highly beneficial to have a test case made of the Peterborough situation. It is probably the only way in which a definite ruling could be made that would give a verdict on the combined clauses dealing with the matter in the Ontario Municipal Act.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It is explained that the present cold wave comes from the Arctic. Surely there was no suspicion that it originated in California.

If the eagle which attacked a man near Hillsport the other day was an American bird, it is hoped the incident will not cause any international complications.

The changes in the hours of operation of the Lift Lock should prove of great convenience to tourist motor-boat owners and add to the popularity of the Trent Waterway.

Yesterday's snow was about as welcome as the receipt of income tax papers. Canadians have seen as much of the beautiful as they want to see for some time, and the May exhibition was entirely unsolicited.

OSKIGMONG NEWS.

OSHKIGMONG, May 11.—Tom Taylor is back from Christian Island and brought back with him a young wife whose maiden name was Miss Annie Sunday.

Messrs. Jacobs and Prat of Burleigh Falls were here last Thursday on business.

On Arbor Day, instead of the regular afternoon session in the school, the children turned out and made a general cleaning up both inside the building and in the grounds.

Mrs. Jacobs who has been visiting Alderville, has returned home.

Messrs. Jerry Monague and John Sunday of Christian Island are here, the latter visiting his daughter Mrs. Tom Taylor.

Mr. Dan Whetung, Sr., is starting a little store in the village. We wish him a success.

Mr. Hawley of Peterboro preached here last Sunday morning from the words found in Matt. 7:22-23: "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name and in thy name cast out the devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity." The evening service was conducted by Payapetwawedong of Christian Island. His text was, "Come for all things are now ready." Luke 14:17.

Mrs. D. E. Whetung is spending a couple of days with her parents at Buckhorn.

ANNUAL MEET CHEESE BOARD CAMPBELLFORD

Robert Innis Elected President and G. A. Kingston Secretary-Treasurer — Honor For Late Member.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 11. — Cheese sold on the Board here yesterday at 17 5-16 cents, an increase of one cent and the fraction over the price obtained at the meeting two weeks ago. There were seven buyers present and bidding was brisk.

The number of boxes boarded was 232, produced by factories as follows: Brae, 40; Empire, 55; Prince of Wales, 50; Stanwood, 37; Trent Valley, 30; Kimberley, 20. The cheese from the latter factory was white, all the remainder being colored.

Cook and Son, of Belleville, took the output of the Empire and Prince of Wales; J. A. Kerr of Belleville and Thos. Thompson, that of Stanwood and Trent Valley.

Officers Elected.

As this was the annual meeting of the Board, officers for the current year were elected as follows:

Robert Innis—President.

William Peterick — First Vice-President.

George Van Volkenburg — 2nd Vice-President.

G. A. Kingston—Secretary-Treasurer.

Auditors— S. H. Neale, manager of the Union Bank; J. A. Stewart, manager of the Standard Bank; and G. Nicol, manager of the Bank of Montreal.

It was decided to place the membership fee at $1.

Honor For Late Member.

It was reported that a floral wreath had been sent to the home of the family on the death of Robert D. Rutherford, who for over 25 years had been one of the most active members of the Board. This action was approved by the members yesterday and a letter of condolence signed by the secretary and president, will be sent to the bereaved family.

Prospects Are Bright.

John Murray, dairy instructor, made a short address in which he stated that the cheese prospects for the year are favorable and that the best place to deliver milk is at the factory. The market is bare and there is at present a good demand for the output.

Keep Business at Home.

Thomas Thompson, one of the successful bidders, who is member of Parliament for East Hastings, said that the tendency of the government was toward centralization, giving the large centres the best of it. Sometimes those in authority swung around to the other extreme and advised people to leave the big cities and towns and get back to the land. Mr. Thompson advised the people of Campbellford to fight shy of centralization and keep their affairs in their own hands, another form of argument against the co-operative selling of cheese.

Hour of Meeting.

Meeting in the daytime on Thursdays is inconvenient for the majority of the members of the Board, and on motion of Alex. Hume and W. M. Stephens it was decided to hold the session at 7 o'clock on every alternate Saturday evening. There was considerable discussion before this change of date was agreed upon. The buyers opposed the move, but an amendment by Mr. Cook that the meetings be held on Thursday evenings was voted down.

SAAR DECREE IS CAUSE TROUBLE IN BRITISH HOUSE

Saar Valley Commission Has Imposed Heavy Fines and Imprisonment on the Inhabitants.

CANADA OUTVOTED.

LONDON, May 11. Canadian Press —In the House of Commons yesterday Sir John Simon moved a reduction of the foreign office vote in order to draw attention to the decree promulgated by the Saar Valley Commission imposing heavy fines and imprisonment on the inhabitants for criticizing the Versailles treaty or any administration thereunder including the League of Nations.

H. H. Asquith, leader of the Independent Liberals, supporting the motion, challenged the legality of the decree which had gone forth in the name of the League of Nations. "A more despotic piece of work than anything in the annals of Russia," declared Mr. Asquith, "and the greatest blow ever struck against the League's authority."

He expressed the opinion, as he said, regretfully, that joint Anglo-French action was henceforth impossible in view of the last French note.

J. R. M. Butler (Independent) referring to the Saar question thought there was nothing more pathetic than the figure cut by the Canadian representative on the commission, ex-mayor Waugh of Winnipeg, who had accepted the post at great personal inconvenience, chiefly out of loyalty to the Canadian government, and was trying to make the Saar concern a success. But on every important question he had been voted down by the other four commissioners. He had thought that a great deal of important might have been attached to the efforts of an absolutely impartial Canadian citizen who had no axe to grind.

Ronald F. MacNeill, under secretary of state for foreign affairs, replying agreed that the decree itself had no defender in the House of Commons, but he doubted the wisdom of immediately bringing the decree before the League of Nations by uncomprisingly denouncing it. The minister through the actual procedure of the French administer had been immensely exaggerated. He declined to make a broad statement regarding the Ruhr situation pending the despatch of a reply to the German note, but stated that the bed rock of British policy was still the maintenance of the Anglo-French alliance. Simon's motion was rejected by 238 to 143.

NOTE — By the Treaty of Versailles, France secured the output of the coal mines of the Saar basin (area 220 square miles) as compensation for the destruction of part of her coal fields by the Germans. The basin is administered by a commission of five elected by the League of Nations. After a period of 15 years a plebiscite will be taken to determine its political status.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK GROWING BRIGHTER

Report of Manufacturers' Association Notes Great Improvement in Industrial and Business Conditions.

WINNIPEG, May 11.—(Canadian Press.)—A brighter outlook of forecast in a review of industrial conditions and a report of activities of the prairie division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association during the past year prepared by Major E. G. Rogers, chairman of the association, and read at the annual meeting here late yesterday afternoon.

Major Rogers' report expressed confidence that the turning point not only has been reached but passed and that now there is every cause for optimism. There are plenty of indications of improvement in industrial and business conditions, he believes. The past few weeks have brought an extensive loosening up in building activities. That alone he believes, is a substantial indication of improving conditions.

A recommendation that a meeting of all manufacturers of the prairie provinces be held at some point outside Winnipeg in the near future for the purpose of thoroughly reviewing industrial conditions in the west, as made by Major Rogers.

OBITUARY

MRS. H. M. DUFF.

LAKEFIELD, May 11. — Mrs. Hugh M. Duff (nee Ray) has passed away in Goderich after a prolonged illness. The deceased was a sister of the Misses Ray, and spent the winter of 1922 with them in the village, where she renewed acquaintance with old friends and made many new ones. Though always rather frail in health she possessed a bright and cheerful disposition, which endeared her to all who knew her. Her husband, who was a brother of Miss Duff and Mrs. A. Quinn and Robert Duff, of this village, predeceased her a couple of years ago. An older sister of Mrs. Duff's (Mrs. Caulter) died a month ago in Toronto.

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to Misses Mary and Fanny Ray in their double bereavement.

Spoonful for a Penny Brings Quick Relief

Splendid laxative properties of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin proven by test

A SCIENTIFIC test has now proven what Dr. Caldwell of Monticello asserted many years ago, that constipation will slow you up fully 25 per cent. The test was made by Dr. Donaldson of Lona Linda upon four men in the prime of life who deliberately went without a bowel movement for four days. Within 48 hours the men had coated tongue and foul breath, cankers in the mouth, no appetite, restless sleep, indigestion, headache, depression, nervousness, cramps. The blood pressure was up 28 per cent. It is just this that Dr. Caldwell has preached to his patients in private and to the public through the printed word ever since he began the practice of his specialty, diseases of the stomach and bowels, back in 1875.

After observing for years the satisfactory effect of his prescription for constipation, he placed it in drug stores in 1892, a simple vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, now known as Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin. That was 30 years ago, and today over 10 million bottles are bought annually the largest selling family laxative in the world. You will find it in any drug store you enter, a generous-size bottle costing you less than a cent a dose.

Every member of the family from the infants to the grandparents can use it with safety. It is gentle and mild. The formula is on the package. Miss Gertrude Steeves of St. Stephen, N. B., says her mother will use no other laxative for her little sister, who is two years old, and Miss Jennie McDonald, of Parkhill, Ont., declares it is just what her mother needed. Try a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin for constipation or any of its symptoms. The results will delight you. And the cost is only one cent a dose.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try my Laxative Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an ordinary test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 23 Caldwell Building, Toronto, Ont. Do it now!

Black Bass Fry For the Kawartha Lakes.

LINDSAY, May 11.—At a meeting of the Bobcaygeon Fish and Game Protective Association on Wednesday arrangements were made to place 65,000 black bass fry in Pigeon Lake when they arrive in June. The Department in Toronto will bring parent black bass in tanks from the northern lakes and deposit them in the Kawartha Lakes to help restock these waters. Fishing with nets for bait will likely be prohibited in Martin's Creek on account of the brook trout placed there last June.

Thought Murrell Bros. Had Invaded Lindsay.

LINDSAY, May 11. — A report was circulated yesterday morning to the effect that the Murrell brothers, the noted desperadoes and jail breakers, were in Lindsay, having arrived here in an auto. The report, of course, spread like wild fire, and several amateur sleuths, with visions of a tidy reward, started out on a round-up. It was ascertained later that the two strangers dubbed as the Murrells were merely visitors in town, and were accompanied by their wives.

REDUCE TRADE WITH U.S.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, May 10.— A regular tri-monthly steamer service between France and Tahiti and New Caledonia will be instituted in the near future by the French company, Messagerie Maratime according to recent announcement.

It is expected here that this will greatly reduce importations from the United States, since direct steamer service with France, where lower prices prevails and on whose goods heavy import duties are not charged, will turn trade away from America.

INSPECTION TOUR AT CAMPBELLFORD

Council Looks Into Street Improvements Asked For By Residents.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 11. — Members of the town council went on a tour of inspection yesterday with a view to making certain improvements that have been asked for by different residents. The first place visited was the sawmill of McKelvie and McCook. This firm asks that Simpson street be opened and that a bridge be built over Trout Creek, to give them a roadway over which to carry the output of their plant to the railway yards for shipment.

The Councillors, headed by Mayor Meyers, appeared to favor the request which will be finally dealt with at a subsequent session. It has been proposed to construct a bridge with concrete abutments and wooden floor. The building of the bridge and the opening of the street would not only be an advantage to the sawmill firm but to the residents of the entire district as it would afford all a short cut to the depot. Reeve Anderson and Councillor Cole, chairman of the Committee on roads and bridges, will ascertain the probable cost of the proposed improvement.

McKelvie and McCook are a young and enterprising firm who are building up what promises to be a flourishing industry. Their output of lumber this year will be over half a million feet and their present weekly pay roll amounts to nearly $1200.

On Ranney Street

The council next visited Ranney Street where one of the residents, J. C. Birmingham, has asked for an improvement in the roadway opposite his property. It is estimated that the proposed charge would cost in the neighborhood of $2000 and it is likely that the matter will be held up for another year.

The Council also motored to Oliver street, where a culvert has been asked for by John Perie, one of the residents. This matter was taken under advisement.

Joseph Caillaux Assaulted By Mob.

TOULOUSE, May 11.—(Canadian Press).—Joseph Caillaux, former Premier was assaulted with canes and blackjacks by members of a crowd which surrounded him yesterday in front of the Chamber of Commerce Building here. He was injured about the head and was taken to a hospital but later returned to his hotel, where it was stated his condition was not serious.

There has been much feeling in France against Caillaux since the war. He was leader of the defeatist element in 1917-18, and in 1920 was found guilty of having commerce with the enemy, for which he was sentenced to three years imprisonment, five years residence in certain country districts, during which period he could not enter Paris, and ten years loss of political rights. Special despatches from Toulouse last November told of his being hooted from the dining room of a fashionable hotel.

The witness said that retailers were not supplied with these shoes if they cut the prices. The policy of the company was to make a standard price, as they found that price cutting had an adverse effect upon their business.

Advertising Lindsay As the "Great Oil Town."

LINDSAY, May 11. — "Lindsay, Ontario, the Great Oil Town." According to a commercial traveller lately returned from New York, signs on which these words are emblazoned, occupy prominent positions on buildings in different parts of the city. He expected when returning to Lindsay to see several wells in operation, and of course, was disappointed. Just who was responsible for advertising the town in this manner in the great American metropolis is what is puzzling the citizens here. The question is asked: Has it anything to do with the operations being carried on in Emily township? Those connected with this venture answer in the negative.

It is interesting to listen to the varied opinions expressed by those who visit the scene of operations. On Sunday quite a number motored from Lindsay and also from Peterborough to the Perodue farm where the drill is being placed in position. Some claimed that oil would be struck and that in the course of a short time Lindsay would far outstrip Peterborough.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Women's Liberal-Conservative Association of Millbrook and Cavan Prepare for Elections.

MILLBROOK, May 11. — The Women's Liberal-Conservative Association of Millbrook and Cavan, held a meeting in the council chamber on Wednesday at 8 p.m. when quite a number of the Men's Association, which was also called to meet at the same hour, gathering first with the women while Mr. P. L. Brown, of Port Hope, one of the organizers of the Central Conservative Association. addressed them briefly on the issues of the present campaign.

At the request of the president, Mrs. W. S. Given, who occupied the chair, Mr. Jas. H. Paul, made a few opening remarks, explaining why the local Association is some what late in calling their convention for the nomination of a candidate, and emphasizing the importance of united effort for the campaign which must, of necessity. be short and "snappy." Mr. Brown was then called upon and expressed his pleasure in speaking to the company, urging especially that as the women control fifty-one per cent of the vote, their help is undoubedly needed and the men will rely upon them for a large amount of the work to be done before the election. The speaker stressed the great value of organization, but felt that this matter has been well attended to in Millbrook and Cavan, though a source of weakness because of its neglect elsewhere. The extravagance of the Drury government was strongly criticised, one or two examples being cited, particularly the increase in the provincial debt.

That the Conservative party will be returned to power was the speaker's firm conviction. but all must work to bring this about. Mr. Brown also urged the nomination of a suitable condidate, stating that an able man is needed, one who can speak in the House and command attention and respect, who can serve with ability on committees, and represent worthily the interests of East Durham. The ability of Mr. Ferguson as a leader of the Conservative party was favorably commented upon; indeed the speaker appeared satisfied that he is the most able leader the party has had for some time. Having sat himself in the House during the recent session when redistribution was the subject under discussion, Mr. Brown said he had repeatedly noticed Mr. Ferguson's clever handling of the situation when "obstruction" tactics were being carried out; he believed his leader's suggestions were almost invariably agreed with by the leader of the Liberal party, and had the respectful attention of Premier Drury also.

Date For Convention

After considerable discussion as to the best date for the convention, it was moved by W. S. Given. seconded by G. L. Fair, that Friday, May 18th, be the time for holding the gathering at 1.30 p.m. the nomination to be followed by addresses by speakers secured for the occasion.—Carried.

Mr. Brown promised to attend to the matter of securing speakers for that date, W. H. Price, of Parkdale and Major Lewis of Toronto, being amongst the names suggested. A lady speaker will also be present and address the gathering.

The men then adjourned to complete their business and the women held their own meeting, the chief business being the appointment of delegates to attend the Convention. those so chosen having the right to vote upon the candidate nominated. Five were appointed from each of the five wards, and twenty-five including the five officers, from Mill brook. Upon motion of Miss F. Burnham, seconded by Mrs. Chas. Thorndyke the names submitted were appointed to act as delegates.

Moved by Mrs. S. Fallis, seconded by Miss M. Whyte, that Miss Constance Bulton of Toronto, be secured at some date convenient to her self to address a public meeting in the interests of the candidate to be chosen at the Convention on the 18th insant.—Carried.

Moved by Mrs. J. A. Vance, seconded by Mrs. J. H. Paul. that the meeting adjourn to convene again at the call of the president. — Carried.

British Immigrants Fear Cold Shoulder.

WINNIPEG, May 11.—(Canadian Press).— British settlers want to Canada but they are afraid they will not be welcomed by government authorities here, according to Bishop G. Exton Lloyd, of the diocese of Saskatchewan. who passed through here yesterday on his way home from Great Britain. He lectured 147 times while overseas, he stated, and impressed upon intending settlers that they would receive a warm welcome.

Reports that new settlers are not desired in Canada are turning the current south to Australia and every ship to the Antipodes carries emigrants, Bishop Lloyd declared. The Australian government, backed by shipping companies is straining every nerve to keep the tide turned south, he said.

ANOTHER PHASE OF SCHOOL QUESTION AT CAMPBELLFORD

Attempt to Be Made to Have Council Issue Debentures for Another $20,000.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 11. — Another phase of the High school question has developed and now an attempt is to be made to have the Council authorize the issue of debentures for another $20,000 so that a building may be put up as originally designed. A special meeting of the Council will be held to-night to discuss this question the call for the session having been issued yesterday by Mayor Meyers. There is every prospect that the proposition will be put over, although the vote will not be unanimous by any means ,as Reeve Anderson and other members have already signified their opposition.

When the Board of Education received an unconditional grant for the year asked the Council for this was deemed by the Board sufficient for the purpose in view, the estimate being based on plans drawn up by Architect Coon, of Toronto, early in 1919. When tenders were called for it was found that in the time between the completion of the plans and the final granting of the money, the cost of building and labor had so increased that the new High school, the price of the site and architect's fees included, would cost $95,000, and that an additional grant of $20,000 was needed before the Board could proceed with the building.

The Board of Education early in the year aske dthe Council for this extra allowance, but the request was practically tabled. It was then decided by the Board to proceed with building operations with the money at their disposal, $68000 being left of the original grant after the site had been paid for and other expenses met. The plans were revised so as to fit the appropriation by cutting out the gymnasium and the assembly room, the former at least, not being a part of a High school insisted upon by the Department. The revised plans were sanctioned by the Department and the contract has been let ,the lowest and successful tender being $67,350. Then Monday night the Council, by a vote of five to three, complied with the requisition of the Board and $68,000 will be raised by the issue of 30-year debentures.

That is the situation to-day. It is now proposed that another $20,000 be granted and that a complete building, one that will serve the educational needs of the community for years to come, be put up now, the contention being that it would cost less to finish the building now than to put up an addition two or three years hence.

The advocates of a $90,000 building wish to impress upon the taxpayers the fact that although the total expenditure may appear as a charge upon the municipality, Campbellford's share of the liability will not be more than 60 per cent., according to the present ratio of attendance ,the county having to pay the balance. This law was passed by the present legislature under pressure from the urban centres. The Act is liable to be amended again, in the event of a change in government and this principle eliminated. In that case towns would be required to bear the entire burden of erecting High schools and Collegiate Institutes. The proposed addition would cost the town less than $10,000 now. Two years or more hence it might mean an outlay in excess of $20,000.

BOTH PARTIES GET DAMAGES IN SUIT

Unique Verdict After an Hour's Deliberarion by Jury.

TORONTO, May 11 (Canadian Press). — After an hour's deliberation, the jury returned a verdict at nine o'clock last night which was unique in that damages were awarded to both parties.

Dr. George Foster, who sued Harry G. Stubbs for $5,750 damages, was awarded $1,500.

Stubbs, who laid a counter claim for $250.00 damages, was awarded $50.00.

The action arose out of a collision between cars driven by both men, in which Stubbs' car was slightly damaged. Stubbs was said to have mounted the footboard of the doctor's car and leaned over the steering wheel, with the result that it crashed into a post

Assured That Prospects Bright For New Post Office—Amateur Theatrical Organization to Entertain.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 11. — Reeve Anderson yesterday received a letter from M. E. Maybee, M.P. for Northumberland County, which contains the cheering assurance that the prospects are bright for a new post office building for Campbellford. It will be remembered that Post Office Inspector Strange, of Kingston, was here recently looking over the situation on behalf of the Department, and that he left without giving any inkling as to the nature of the report he would submit to his superiors.

Mr. Maybee informed Reeve Anderson that he was permitted to see the inspector's report, and that it is in effect a strong argument for a new building. Conditions as they exist here are clearly stated, and the urgent necessity for a new building is also set forth.

Mr. Maybee says that while he is not yet warranted in making a definite statement, Campbellford's prospect sfor a new post office building are brighter than ever. One assurance that can be given in that it will be one of the first new public buildings to be put up by the Department.

Mr. Maybee adds that in his report Inspector Strange speaks of the courtesy that was shown him by Reeve Anderson and others on the occasion of his visit here, at which time he was also the guest of the Chamber of Commerce.

Harris, Mrs. F. Linton, George Goffins, Miss Eva Runions and Mrs. E. E. Cassan

The other play has a French title, "Ici en parle Francais," which means "French Spoken Here," is a study in the difficulties of people who profess proficiency in a language other than that of their native tongue In this cast the following well known amateurs will be seen: O. Those chosen by the Labour Party are John G. O'Donoghue, K.C., the counsel for the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, who has handled many briefs in labour disputes; James Simpson, secretary-treasurer of Labour Temple Company; and James T. Gunn, secretary of Canadian Electrical Trades Union.

In choosing its candidates, the Labour Party followed the policy of the British Labour Party of bringing into its ranks intellectuals, according to chairman Andrew Glen.

The Fryer was accordingly condemned to pay half the damages and half the costs and the Westmount to pay the balance. The damages have not yet been assessed.

HOW TO KEEP FIT AT 72

Sprightly Old Man Reveals the Secret

"I am 72 years old, and much more vigorous and active than most men of my age. I know that my excellent condition is due to the fact that I take two or three doses of Wincarnis every day, because I never felt as well before I began taking it. I used to tire very quickly and suffer from wakefulness and had to bundle myself up whenever it was damp or drafty. But since I began taking Wincarnis I have had the energy and endurance of a middle-aged man, sleep soundly and withstand the severest of weather. I have noticed that Wincarnis keeps my appetite keen and that it strengthens my nerves and heart. If my fingers tremble and my heart flutters or I feel symptoms of depression or weakness, a dose of Wincarnis gives me relief within a few minutes."

The majority of farmers are well on their way with their spring seeding Tuesday's rain has done untold good to spring-planted seeds, as well as to wheat, grass and clover. Much of the grain is already sprouted and several fields in this vicinity are green. But very few fields of fall wheat have been killed out during the winter and spring, and farmers declare it is years since wheat and clover have wintered as well as they have this year.

FEARS FOR SAFETY OF THE PRISONERS

"They Threaten to Kill Us" is the Cry from Bandits' Stronghold.

PEKING, May 11. — (United Press).—The diplomatic corps delivered an ultimatum to China today, demanding that the Chinese Government obtain the release of all foreign prisoners held by bandits in the Shantung hills by midnight tonight, Peking time. Otherwise, a heavy progressive indemnity will be imposed.

"For God's sake, take away the troops, they threaten to kill us all." This message of despair came this afternoon from J. B. Powell, American newspaper captive with other foreigners in the camp of the Shantung bandits, who wrecked and looted the Shanghai-Peking express on Sunday morning and carried off its foreign passengers. The cry from the hills to which the brigands now close, pressed by Government troops have withdrawn, caused consternation here. Grave fears are felt for the safety of the undetermined number of foreigners still held.

APPOINT NEW CHAIRMAN U. S. SHIPPING BOARD

WASHINGTON, May 11.—(Canadian Press.)—The appointment of Edward P. Farley, of Chicago, former Vice-President of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, to succeed Albert D. Lasker as chairman of the Shipping Board, was announced late yesterday at the White House. The appointment will become effective on June 12.

THREE KILLED

CINCINNATI, O., May 11.—(Canadian Press).—Three persons were killed at Hartwell, a suburb of Cincinnati, when a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad passenger train, south bound, struck an automobile containing seven persons, according to a report received here to-night.

SHOOTING WAS ACT VENGEANCE

Assailant of Russian Delegation Lost Brother and Uncle in Bolsheviki Terror.

LAUSANNE, May 11.—(Canadian Press).—Conradi, who last night shot to death the head of the Russian delegation and seriously wounded two other members, told the police that his brother and uncle had been tortured and murdered by the Bolsheviki during the terror in Russia. His act in shooting the Russians was one of vengeance, he said.

By some the murder of Vorovsky is regarded as a tragic sequel to his attacks on the Swiss Government for refusing a vise for the Russian courier to Berlin. The recently organized Fascisti warned him and his colleagues to leave Lausanne, but he ignored the warning. Leaders of the Fascisti, however, disclaim responsibility for the crime. The only plan they had in view was to kidnap Vorovsky and escort him over the Italian border.

The hotel manager states that when Conradi surrendered to him he told of the murder by Russians of his brother and uncle, and said he was happy to have had revenge. "Davel, the great Swiss patriot, who saved the Canton of Vaud, saved one Canton," he said, "but I have saved all humanity."

VIEW IN ROME.

ROME, May 11. — (Canadian Press).—The assassination of M. Vorovsky, head of the Russian delegation at the Lausanne Conference, is producing a profound impression here. He was the Soviet representative at the Italian capital. It was recalled to-day that Vorovsky's arrival in Rome in April, 1921, as head of the Russian commercial mission, was marked by a lively conflict over his many trunks, which Vorovsky refused to have opened, saying that he enjoyed diplomatic immunity. Vorovsky was known as a member of Foreign Minister Tchitcherin's school of "mild Bolshevism," and after living here a while his views became still more moderate.

FASCISTI DEMONSTRATION.

BASEL, Switzerland, May 11. — (Canadian Press).—The Executive Committee of the Swiss Communist party has called upon all workers, regardless of their political affiliation, to join in a great demonstration of protest against the assassination of Vorovsky. The call characterizes the murder as a "signal for Fascisti terrorism in Switzerland."

SWITZERLAND ANXIOUS.

LAUSANNE, May 11.—(Canadian Press)—The murder of M. Vorovsky, head of the Russian Soviet delegation to the Near East Conference, by Maurice Alexander Conradi, a Swiss, who once served in the Russian army, has stirred Switzerland as has no single event since the assassination of Empress Elizabeth of Austria at Geneva in 1898. Conradi, who was seized by the police in the Hotel Cecil after he had killed Vorovsky and wounded two attaches of the Russian delegation, continues to maintain that he acted alone.

The general impression in the Near East Conference circles is that the excitement caused by last evening's events will not directly affect the course of negotiations.

Switzerland, however, keenly feels the position in which Conradi's act places her, and fears that world opinion may hold the local patriotic associations morally or materially responsible, inasmuch as the Swiss Fascisti organization recently ordered Vorovsky to leave the country or take the consequences.

Up to the present the police inquiries have failed to connect Conradi with the Fascisti at Lausanne.

Russians in Lausanne, however, were quick to place the responsibility for the crime on the local agitation against Vorovsky.

RETURN TO HEMP FIELDS

MANILA, May 10. — Japanese farmers who abandoned their hemp plantations two years ago in Davao province, Island of Mindanao, are returning to that region on account of the firm hemp market, according to N. H. Duckworth of the Mindanao Planters' Association.

Not only the Japanese plantation owners, but many Japanese laborers are returning to the hemp fields which they abandoned two years ago because they could not make a living stripping hemp.

Four years ago when hemp brought high prices, it was estimated that 12,000 Japanese laborers were in the province of Davao alone.

The Eiffel Tower Wireless Is Down.

PARIS, May 11.— Canadian Press —The Eiffel Tower wireless transmitting station was put out of commission by lightning yesterday when a bolt struck the antennae, a thousand feet above the ground, and the entire apparatus crashed to the earth.

The officials expect to have the repairs finished by Saturday. Meanwhile the tower is silent and thousands of radio fans will miss their daily broadcasting programme and evening concert as well as the time signal which is given every hour.

BRITAIN URGES GERMANY TO MAKE NEW OFFER

LONDON, May 11.— (Canadian Press.) — Brevity and incisiveness are features of Great Britain's newest note to Germany on the reparations question which is now complete. The document, consisting of two typewritten pages, avoids technical details points out in simple language the inadequacy, from a British viewpoint, of Germany's proposals and urges her to try again.

DRINKING WOOD ALCOHOL CAUSED DEATH OF TWO

QUEBEC, May 11. — (Canadian Press.)—Drinking wood alcohol in mistake for medicine, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Guay died at their home here yesterday. When neighbors rushed into the house in response to the alarm raised by four young children of the family they found Mrs. Guay dead, but Mr. Guay lived long enough to receive the last rites of the Roman Catholic church.

HOME REMEDIES OF OUR ANCESTORS

Almost every man and woman in America can remember the botanic recipes of our mothers and grandmothers for the treatment of disease, and they were wonderfully dependable too. Every fall there were stored away in the attic thoroughwort, pennyroyal, catnip, sage, wormwood, rue, etc., for treating ills of the family during the winter months that followed. In 1873, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was first prepared from one of these botanic recipes, and the demand for it increased to such an extent that hundreds of tons of roots and herbs are now used annually in its preparation. It has recently been proved that 98 out of every 100 women who try it have been benefited by its use, which is a marvelous record for any medicine to hold.

FORCE DOWN SUGAR PRICE BY NOT BUYING

NEW YORK, May 11.— (Canadian Press.)—The only way to force down the price of sugar is not to buy it, President Edward Dieriks, of the New York Sugar Exchange, told a delegation of women who appeared on the floor of the Exchange yesterday and demanded to know "how it works." We speculators are not to blame for any unfair action, he said.

The Afternoon Tea is Social Function Now.

Mr. Gordon Selfridge, the Chicago merchant who invaded and conquered London, is revisiting the United States, and touches on some piquant contrast between his native and adopted countries. He has the advtange of a double standard of comparison, of seeing the British through American eyes. To an interviewer he lays amusing emphasis on an English social rite, afternoon tea, which is the subject of mild derision on the part of visitors to the Tight little island—until they succumb to it. Mr. Selfridge thinks that if Americans would similarly relax in the middle of the afternoon's work they would gain a poise and calm they really need and lose none of their famous "pep." When he opened his departmental store on Oxford Street thirteen years ago it was the custom of his salespeople to snatch tea as best they could. Instead of discouraging it he accepted it as a national institution, and gave a tea interval to each of his 3,000 employees, and "since everybody else in the country does it, no time or business was lost." He is quoted further:

Tea is brought around at matinees and movies on railway trains and boats. Lords and commoners pause for it in parliament. You cannot enter any office, editorial den, public library, factory or shop in Great Britain between four or five without stumbling over cups and tea things.

Mr. Selfridge confessed that, personally, he did not like tea, but he likes what is stands for—a friendly getting together, a relaxing pause in the days' work, a slowing down of the American's relentless push; not to a point of becoming less active, but more balanced. The American has a breakdown at 50, he added, but the Englishman was swinging a wicked golf club at 65.

Afternoon tea has become a social function on this side of the Atlantic, but it has not seriously penetrated the market place. After all, it is not the tea hour that gives the Briton poise and calm. It is merely one expression of his unhurried habits and ways of living and of looking at life. Before work slows down in offices, factories and shops on this continent in the presence of the tea-cups, there will have to be a radical change in the mental as well as the physical habits of the business community.

BRITISH GUNBOAT WILL PROTECT FISHING BOATS

HULL, Eng., May 11.—(Special.)—The owners of the trawler, James Johnson, seizure of which recently occasioned a protest from Great Britain to the Russian Soviet Government have received a telegram from the skipper, Neilsen, stating that he has been released by the Bolsheviki ,and is now at a Norwegian port, expecting to sail homeward.

Gunboat Despatched.

Some time in the night the British gunboat Harebell steamed away for Murmansk, where it is assigned to the duty of protecting British fishing trawlers against attack and seizure by Russian war vessels.

BEST I EVER FOUND SAYS THOMAS HEURTHER

Happy experience of Hamliton man with Dreco, the famous health builder. Found wonderful relief in two bottles.

Thomas Heurter, of 62 Clyde Street, Hamilton, Ont., put in a mighty tough time of it until he discovered Dreco. This famous health builder went to the root of his troubles with amazing rapidity and put him on his feet again, a sound, healthy man. Let Mr. Heurter tell you his story.

"My trouble was mostly with my stomach and liver, caused, I think, by constipation, as I always had trouble in keeping my bowels in shape. I always had a good appetite but was afraid to eat anything, as the distress afterwards was terrible. Gas would form, causing me to bloat and belch and raising a sour, bitter taste in my mouth. I had pains around my heart. At times my joints pained and cracked when I walked. Had dizzy spells and spots floated before my eyes, caused from my liver, which was sluggish and many a night I could not sleep, but would roll and toss all night. I have only taken two bottles of Dreco, but it has made a big change in me. I can eat most anything now without being troubled afterwards. Have no more dizzy spells and I sleep fine and the rheumatism in my joints is gone. Dreco will always get a good word from me and I have recommended it to several of my friends. It's the best I ever found."

Dreco acts quickly and naturally on the organs of digestion, purges them of acids and gasses, and stimulates them into normal functioning. This is the secret of the wonderful benefit all sufferers receive from Dreco, for most every-day ailments can be traced to a run-down digestive system. Dreco is a splendid regulator and blood purifier, the ideal spring tonic. Let it help you as it has helped thousands of others.

Dreco contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs.

Dreco s being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, and by a good druggist everywhere.

Fill Your Wants Through Examiner

Do you remember the old school-book poem about the grandmother who lost her spectacles and hunted the house over, to finally discover them on her forehead? There are plenty of Peterobro people like that. They are in search of some needed article, and never think until the last minute of the likeliest spot to find it; in the advertising columns of The Examiner.

For instance, this is house-cleaning time. Do you know anyone who will take down your storm windows and wash the permanent glass ones? Where will you get a man to beat your rugs What about the lawn mower that need sharpening or repairs Or do you want to buy a good second-hand one? What about a handy man to clean the furnace pipes?

The tone of the butter market is steady and there is only a limited demand for cheese.

WINNIPEG CATTLE.

WINNIPEG, May 11.—(Canadian Press)—Receipts 580 cattles and calves, 640 hogs and 3 sheep.

There was a brisk enquiry for the moderate offerings on the cattle market yesterday. The general run of killing classes have strengthened from 25 to 50 cents from the opening of the week with butcher she-stock showing the meat advance. Stockers and feeders have sold on an active market at firm prices.

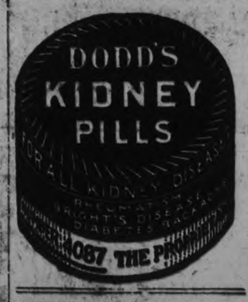
The hog market was unchanged: thick-smooths, $10.15 and select bacon $11.16 1-2.

Sheep and lambs unchanged.

COTTON PRICES DROP.

NEW YORK, May 11.—(Canadian Press).—The cotton market weakened again yesterday and prices broke 135 points below the opening and closed 83 points below Wednesday's closing quotation. July sold up to $25.70 at the opening, but soon weakened, dropping to $24.35 in mid-afternoon.

Reports of increased demands for spot cotton and cotton goods failed to stimulate buying of futures, and the market yielded readily under selling on prospects for fair and warmer weather in the South and nervousness over general conditions.



Russia Claims More Territorial Rights.

LONDON, May 11. — (Canadian Press).—The Soviet Government of Russia in a note replying to the British protest against the seizure of the trawler James Johnson, claims the right to fix her limit of territorial waters at twelve miles from shore, but offers to submit the matter to arbitration, provided there is no question of any infringement of Russian Sovereignty and independence.

My liver bothered me a great deal; I was drowsy and tired all the time and didn't feel like doing anything, let alone my housework, I tried everything, but your Pills seemed to do the work for best than anything I had ever taken."

Four Gold Properties Under One Management.

The property of the Matachewan Canadian Gold Limited, on which additional development work is to be proceeded with at an early date, comprises 22 mining claims of 840 acres, which were brought together under one management on a valuation basis fair and acceptable to all owners interested, according to a statement issued by the President, Senator G. D. Robertson. The price paid, he added, was equitable from the standpoint of acreage and development work done.

The properties now included under the one management are 80 acres owned by Matachewan Gold, 440 by Matachewan Rand Gold, 160 by a syndicate of which Joseph Qualey was the manager and 160 acres owned by H. H. Sutherland.

If these various properties had retained separate entites it would possibly have meant four different companies operating with a total combined capital of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 each of which would have to go through the same process of financing to carry development work to the point where production could be attained. It would also have meant separate staffs and duplication of overhead cost and effort.

The merger has a capitalization of $5,000,000, of which $1,700,000 remained in the treasury for future development work. The various interests which entered the merger received 3,250,000 shares for their property le is considered, taking into account the amount of property involved and the amount of development work already done, that this is one of the most reasonably capitalized propositions in the mining field.

Fourfold Protection— for a Family Man

THE Mutual Life of Canada has acquired an experience of over half a century of life insurance. It has studied the results of thousands and thousands of policies. Our experience convinces us that for the average family man the most useful and economical form of insurance is the profit-participating, long-term, endowment policy. This policy matures at a specified advanced age, but is of course payable at prior death if that age be not attained.

Annual dividends are paid to holders of these policies and results will surprise those who have not realized what Mutual profit-participation can accomplish towards lessening the cost of life insurance. On some of these long-term endowment policies, taken out in youth, policyholders at maturity have actually received in cash 100% more than they have deposited with the Company as premiums!

This form of insurance provides against both premature death and helpless old age.

Accident and Disability Clauses

For a small additional premium, the Company will add the provision that should the assured at any time be overtaken by permanent disability no further premiums shall be payable, and furthermore, the Company will pay the assured a monthly income during the continuance of such disability. And if desired a still further privilege may be secured—namely, a double indemnity in the event of death by accident—that is, the Company will pay the face value of the policy.

Mutual Long-Term Endowment thus furnishes fourfold insurance protection—first against death, second against old age, third against disability, and fourth against accident. At the same time profits so reduce the cost of insurance as to make this policy an investment yielding not only all that it costs, but all the way from 25 to 100% more according to age and length of the endowment term.

Fill in and mail the coupon below and we will send you particulars about this policy.

THE LURE OF THE CANADIAN WILDS

You Will be Thrilled and Charmed by The Experiences of a Long Cruise Through Waters That Have No Equal.

By CHAS. F. SMITH.

In all the world no cruise like this. You of the fraternity who have heard and heeded the Red Gods' call, to whom the scent of the pine and the balsam, and the sheen of the sparkling water are the breath of life; to whom the throb of the motor is fine music, the rush of the wind and tilting decks the poetry of motion, sit and take notice. Whether you are a seasoned veteran or a rank novice at this royal sport, you will be charmed and thrilled as never before, when you experience the pleasures of this 800-mile cruise that has no equal.

There is enough open water to give plenty of thrills, and much of the way is through protected inland waters where the cruiser can be tied up most anywhere in safety and comfort. This is especially true of that part of the cruise from Trenton on the Bay of Quinte to Port Severn on the Georgian Bay, known as the Trent Waterway.

This is a succession of beautiful rivers, lakes and canals extending for 236 miles. The controlling navigable depths are 8 feet 4 inches from Trenton to Peterborough and 6 feet from that point to Washago. Larger boats can make the run from Trenton to Washago and as far as Swift Rapids on the Severn River, but at present only boats not exceeding 35 feet in length and 9 feet beam can pass over the marine railway at that point, and again at Big Chute 8 miles farther down the river. It is reported, however, that the Canadian Government is considering increasing the size of the cars to carry boats 50 feet in length over the railways which are electrically operated and at no trouble or expense to boat owners. No tolls or fees are charged anywhere on the trip, but lock masters and bridge tenders are human, and a cheery greeting and a good cigar will help to make friends everywhere. You meet with kindness, courtesy and prompt service from every Government employe, many of whom are returned soldiers. A good map of the Trent Waterway can be obtained free from the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa. All waters as far as Washago are fairly well buoyed, but charted only from Trenton to Peterborough. A set of these charts can be obtained for $3.50 from the Superintendent of the Trent Canal, Peterborough. They will be found valuable, especially in Rice Lake, which is shallow and weedy and crossed by an old railway causeway having only two navigable openings, buoyed, but not any too easy to find. At Peterborough we obtained from the secretary of the Board of Trade, a descriptive pamphlet containing several maps of sections of the waterway from Peterborough to Orillia. We found the maps quite useful, but rather insufficient as they show courses only in a general way. No charts of the waters from Orillia to the Georgian Bay are obtainable at the present time, but valuable information about the courses can be obtained from maps in the possession of the manager of the power plant at Swift Rapids. The buoys below there are rather infrequent and insufficient. Courses are taken mainly from shore markers and must be carefully watched for and followed. We were told that the Canadian Government has in course of preparation charts of the waterway from Peterbrough to the Georgian Bay, and possibly they may be obtainable this summer; but with the maps, charts and information now obtainable, the careful navigator will have no difficulty in making the cruise without accident.

The ultimate purpose of the Trent Waterway was and is, to provide a shorter route for the transportation of grain and other commodities from the West to the St. Lawrence River, but its present condition must confine its use to smaller craft used mainly for pleasure. The Canadian people invite and urge everyone to use it for that purpose. The chief value of the enterprise today, is the use of water power from the many dams, in generating electric light and power which is distributed all over that part of the Province of Ontario. There are hundreds of summer cottages, located seemingly in every beautiful spot along the lake shores and on the islands, and the fisherman will have no difficulty in finding all of that sport he may desire. Food supplies, fresh milk and ice can be obtained all along the way. One of the most enjoyable features of the trip, is the spirit of hospitality you meet with everywhere; the kindly interest in your welfare and the offer of friendly service and information, that touch the heart and make you feel at home among the Canadian people.

The beauties of the Georgian Bay country are too numerous to set forth in this short article, but to the lover of nature who winds his way in and out among the thousands of islands for 265 miles, there is a never-ending charm that lures him onward to new scenes and new experiences. He will leave it with reluctance, and a desire and determination to see it again.

Charts of Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and the Georgian Bay can be obtained at a nominal cost from the Hydrographer, Department of Naval Service, Ottawa.

It's a far cry from Southern California to the Georgian Bay, but our little family of three, the middle aged writer and wife and twelve-year-old girl, have spent many summers on our Belle Isle in Canadian waters near Sault Ste. Marie, and have learned to love the country and the people. For years we talked of cruising the Georgian Bay and Trent Waterway. In the fall of 1921 we definitely decided to go, and to make the start from Buffalo, N. Y. Our new cruiser Wananishe, built by Richardson at North Tonawanda is a Hand V-bottom 30 feet in length, 8 feet 6 inches beam, equipped with every up-to-date convenience, including a glass front to the cockpit awning which we found to be invaluable. The power plant is a Kermath 20 h.p. with electric starter and generator, which we found to be thoroughly dependable. It never failed to respond to every demand made upon it, carried us safely through the various experiences of our long journey without trouble of any kind, and averaging 8 to 10 miles per hour, which is plenty for a cruiser.

We left Buffalo early on the morning of July 2, facing a rather stiff west wind that kicked up quite a sea, but our Kermath was doing fine, steady work and we easily made the run in three hours to Port Colborne, where we secured a pass for the Welland Canal. Being Sunday we met very few boats, passed quickly from lock to lock, often so close that you run out of one into the next, there being twenty-six in the last eight miles. Evening found us just below Lock No. 2, where we tied up for the night. Early the next morning we ran through Lock No. 1 to Port Dalhousie, made a short stop there and then for Toronto, setting our course by compass across Lake Ontario. Reports had prepared us for some rough water, but were agreeably surprised with a light wind and long rollers that made it a delightful trip. The navigator was also pleased by hitting the harbor entrance squarely in the eye, and noon found us tied up at the dock in front of the Harbor Administration Building. We spent the afternoon in the city, and then ran across and tied up for the night at a pretty place among the islands near the Royal Yacht Club. The next day's run with pleasant weather and rather quiet water, with the usual long rollers, brought us 60 miles to Port Hope, a quaint old town between two hills. Leaving there at eight the next morning we had another delightful run down the lake and through a shallow bay, by a well-buoyed passage that twisted and turned, but finally brought us to the west end of the Murray Canal. At the second of four swing bridges we were asked to register and informed that there were no locks. We found it a very pleasant run between low banks and through cultivated fields with frequent houses close by, and soon after noon ran out of the canal into the Bay of Quinte and across to Trenton about a mile away.

We landed there, but finding it a holiday decided to run on up the canal. At the first lock we secured a pass from the lock master, Michael LaFrance, a fine fellow and the right man in the right place to give information about the waterway. Here we picked up our dinghy, which proved to be a nuisance, as we found little use for it in the waterway, and most of the time carried it on the forward deck. We passed up six locks, through a beautiful rolling country and tied up for the night on the side of the canal near a big dam at Frankford. The next day we ran for a time through a section of swamp and lowlands with lovely water lilies along the way, and some fine hilly country; through five locks and reached Campbellford, a busy little manufacturing place. We tied up at the town dock, where a charming lady surprised us with a gift of flowers, and told us that it was their regular custom with boats passing through. An early start the next morning brought us at noon to Hastings, and as the wind was blowing pretty hard from the S. W. we decided not to cross Rice Lake that day. We ran on and anchored for the night in a small bay near the lake. About 9 P. M. the wind shifted and blew a gale with rain from the N. W. We got our spare anchor, eased up the strain occasionally with the motor, and rode it out all night. At daybreak, the wind being some lighter, we pulled up the hooks and ran out into Rice Lake. Picked up a lot of weeds in a shallow place, had some trouble finding the entrance to the Otonabee, a narrow, crooked river, running through lowlands, and reached the thriving manufacturing city of Peterborough at noon. We tied up at the town dock where the harbor master kindly attended to our wants. Took the street car up town and met Mr. Fraser, secretary of the Board of Trade, who furnished us with charts of the upper waterway. At mid-afternoon we were lifted 65 feet in the wonderful hydraulic lock, passed through Stoney Lake with its beautiful rocky islands and hundreds of summer cottages, where great care must be used as the buoys are confusing. Then on through the beautiful chain of Lovesick, Buckhorn and Pigeon lakes, arriving at Bobcaygeon. Here, much to our regret, we were obliged to part with our roustabout, Mr. Rand, a fine, companionable young man and able seaman, who joined us at North Tonawanda, N. Y. The rest of the waterway trip was made alone with our little family of three. A high wind the next day gave us rather a rough passage through Sturgeon Lake, a pretty sheet of water. At the north end we ran into a small river with steep rocky banks, and just before noon arrived at famous Fenelon Falls, which charmed us so that we remained below the lock until the next morning. That day's run took us through Cameron and Balsam, two lovely lakes with summer cottages along the shores. Then on through the canal to Kirkfield, where we made our first drop of 48 feet in another big hydraulic lift lock. Five more locks down brought us to Gamebridge, where we tied up just below the last lock before reaching Lake Simcoe. A big storm with high wind and rain came up in the night, but the morning was clear, which gave us a quiet, pleasant trip across Lake Simcoe, past Orillia and through beautiful Lake Couchiching. By following the canal course we missed Washago and passed through the lock into the upper Severn River. At this point we ran a little way up the river to a sleepy little village called Severn Bridge, which we found so quiet and restful that we laid at the dock there for two days.

Leaving early in the morning we ran down the beautiful, winding Severn River for some miles, then on through Sparrow Lake and the river again, soon reaching Swift Rapids. There we found only a few houses, a big dam and power house, an uncompleted lock and marine railway. Mr. Paige, superintendent of the power company, gave us valuable information about the lower river. The next morning Mr. Fountain, manager of the marine railway, took our boat in charge and in twenty minutes had it safely in the water below the dam. This very efficient service is operated by electric power, and also at another railway eight miles further down the river at Big Chute, where the drop is steeper and the service not quite so efficient. About a mile below there, and around an elbow bend, is a dangerous place with swift water, and fearing that it might be a wrong channel we narrowly escaped an accident. The run beyond there is by courses and shore markers that must be closely followed through the drowned lands. At noon we passed the last lock at Port Severn, were out in the bay and following the buoyed channel, soon tied up at an old dock on Green Island in the Georgian Bay.

The trip from Buffalo to the Georgian Bay, which we made in two weeks, can be easily made in ten to twelve days. We were three weeks loitering along the way in the Georgian Bay, but the run from Port Severn to Sault Ste. Marie can be easily made in good weather in six days. We fully expect to make this cruise again, as everyone will who has made it once and caught the inspiration.

The size limitation at the present time is 33 feet in length and 9 feet beam at the railway at Swift Rapids. By July 1, however, new facilities will be in operation which will permit boats of 56 feet in length and 13½ feet in beam to be handled on this railway. The maximum weight which can be accommodated will be about twenty tons gross.

FASHIONS FOR MEN

Here's the style in men's clothes, as set by the Prince of Wales:

HATS: He is most frequently seen with his silk topper or with a black derby which they call a "bowler." In either case, he sets it atilt on the side of his head. The prince rarely wears a felt hat.

COLLARS: He infrequently wears what we call a turn-down collar. When he does it is the very low collar of about one inch high. He is most addicted to a stiff linen collar with wide tabs and rather open at the throat, making it fit comfortably around the neck.

TIES: He is fond of the batswing ties tie the thing being drawn so that there is only a single loop visible on each side. He likes bright colors when he wears four-in-hands.

SHIRTS: In most instances, he favors white shirts with colored stripes and occasionally wears a collar made out of the same material.

STREET SUITS: Preferably gray or tan. The coat is a one-button affair, because he is slim and has found that such a coat looks well on him. His vests are single-breasted. His morning coats are heavily braided.

EVENING WEAR: Here the prince has made a decided innovation. It used always to be the rule to wear a black vest with a Tuxedo coat and also a black tie. The prince often wears a white vest and a white tie, similar to what is worn with a full dress coat.

SHOES: He is very partial to black and tan low cuts He is not fond of spats, so that the Broadway dudes who spent two days in London and have worn spats ever since are quite out of it.

OVERCOATS: He wears them about two-thirds length. He likes the cuff on the sleeves. He also likes three buttons on his overcoats and buttons them all.

CANES AND UMBRELLAS: The prince affects canes and umbrellas with the hook handle which he can swing over his arm. He is fond of a Malacca cane. On both his canes and his umbrellas he has a silver band down on the stick and this band carries his engraved monogram.

Release the clutch when rounding a corner.

"I Was Terribly Weak After Baby Was Born"

Mrs. H. McClure, Norwood, Ont., writes:

"After my baby was born, I was terribly weak and run down, with pains across my back. I had heard so much of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that I decided to try it. Three boxes proved enough to make me quite strong and well again. I also used Dr. Chase's Ointment for a rash which broke out on the baby, and the rash disappeared completely in a short time."

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

THE NORMAL BABY.

Young parents spend a lot of time gazing at their new treasure. They are apt to note many more things than the most experienced physician has ever seen and almost everything indicates something frightfully wrong. It might be well to put some parents out of their misery and assure them that the baby isn't going to be cross-eyed because his eyes insist on slipping inward occasionally, neither is he going to do any permanent damage to himself by looking up over his head—a question by the way which comes to this column frequently from worried mothers. There are conditons which indicate perfect health and if the baby has these signs the mother may disregard other of these apparently alarming "nothings."

The well healthy baby has a moist, warm pink skin, smooth and with firm muscles. Flabby muscles indicate something wrong with the feeding.

The baby should breathe through his nose quietly. If there is a snuffling sound when the mouth is closed or the mouth habitually hangs open in sleep adenoids should be thought of—unless of course the baby has a cold.

The expression of the face is calm. If the baby makes wry faces in his sleep or little whimpering cries he is usually suffering gas pains. If the fists are tightly clenched and the sleep restless one can be sure that the baby is not as comfortable over his last meal as he should be.

The breathing in babies is not always regular. Unless there are other indications of fever, such as a highly flushed face and hot skin one need not worry about a slight irregularity in the breathing.

Also one need not be distressed if the baby's eyes are not always tightly closed in sleep. He'll learn that little trick later.

Plan to Regenerate Prisoners

By MAURICE HENLE

COLUMBUS, O., May 10.—Governor A. Victor Donahey of Ohio had been talking earnestly for a half hour, telling the remarkable story of Jim, Bill and Ed. Finally he leaned heavily on his desk, involuntarily extended an arm, and in a voice that trembled slightly with emotion, said:

"And let me tell you, that I would rather trust those three boys, and I do, than many men who come to me in this office, seeking this or that, speaking honeyed words, free men, who sit in that very chair in which you are seated."

The remarkable story of the redemption by the governor of Jim, Bill and Ed! Ed, who tried to pass a worthless check! Jim and Bill who killed——

* * *

All through the uphill struggle in life of the present governor of Ohio there took form a deep-rooted conviction that many men who "slipped" were not hopelessly lost to society—that perhaps in some way or other there was a chance for them.

He vowed that should the time come when he would be in a position to do his share to bring about the realization of his dream, that time would not find him shirking.

* * *

Soon after he was inaugurated, Donahey slipped down to the Ohio penitentiary.

"I want three servants for the executive mansion," he told the warden. "Let me see some prisoners who have good records.

Donahey—the governor—talked long and confidentially to Jim and Bill and Ed—the convicts—(those names will do as well as any). He knew he had found the three men to show the world the truth of his theories. He placed in them his complete trust—a man's greatest gift—and brought them away from the gray walls, to live again with free men, as free men.

"Those three would die for me," said Donahey. "I call them my boys. Technically they still are serving terms, Jim and Bill for life, Ed for a number of years. But I intend that some day they will be pardoned. And when they go again into society, they will be different men.

"We talk freely to each other. They bring their little troubles to me. Nothing is held back. It is difficult sometimes to make yourself understood; all I can tell you is that I trust them fully. Can I say more? I am not afraid to leave Mrs. Donahey or my daughter in the house with them. True, there are civilian employes too, but that would make no difference.

* * *

"I mention this because in a small way—an experimental way, if you will—it is exactly what would happen if society itself would do the same with all men who come back who really deserve a second chance.

"I do not allow my three boys to delude themselves. They know they are going back some day into society. 'You have committed crimes, boys,' I tell them. 'There's no use denying that. What you have to do is be big enough to look the world in the eye and make good. I'm sure the world will return such treatment in kind.'

"Some men in prison, of course, are too far gone. They are hopeless. The only place for them is behind walls. But the one thing that is deepest in my heart is a longing to help those poor fellows who slipped once.

"Separate them from the hopeless ones. Don't keep them in dirty cells and behind walls all day long. Get them out on the farms. Give them a place to breathe the sunlight, to work with God's tools, to prepare themselves to come back.

* * *

"What leads to most of the crime among this class of so-called criminal? Passion. Anger and jealousy. Case after case may be seen over there behind those walls. Punish them, of course. But not in a way that it is impossible for them to be decent men any more.

"The crying need of the world today is old-fashioned discipline in both public and private life. We need officers to administer the laws who understand not only the letter of it but the spirit as well. We need discipline in the family. You can remember when almost all families said 'grace' before meals. How many families do that now? Those little things count in youth.

* * *

"The other night they electrocuted a man here. I went out of my way to find some thread of excuse to give him another chance. I don't want to have a man killed. It is only when there is no other thing to do that I let it go ahead."

* * *

One thing the governor insisted upon was the appointment of a special clemency board, two men trained in that work who could devote all of their time to this sifting the hopeless ones from those society may reclaim.

And some day—well, Donahey has his dreams not unmixed with hard practical common sense.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

At the quarter-pole Kay had worked her mount easily up through the ruck to contend with Peep-sight. The half-thoroughbred was three years old and his muscles had been hardened by many a wild scramble up and down the hills of El Palomar; he was game, he was willing, and for half a mile he was marvelously fast, as Farrel had discovered early in the tryouts. Indeed, as a "quarter-horse" Farrel knew that few horses might beat the comparatively green Peep-sight and he had been indiscreet enough to make that statement in the presence of youthful Allesandro Trujillo, thereby filling that young hopeful with a tremendous ambition to race the [illegible] Panchito into submission for mere sport of a race.

In a word, Allesandro's Indian blood was up. If there was anything he loved, it was a horse-race for money, chalk, marbles or fun. Therefore when a quick glance over his shoulder show Panchito's blazed face at Peep-sight's rump, Allesandro clucked to his mount, gathered the reins a trifle tighter and dug his dirty bare heels into Peep-sight's ribs, for he was riding bare-back, as an Indian should. Peep-sight responded to the invitation with such alacrity that almost instantly he had opened a gap of two full lengths between himself and Kay on Panchito.

Farrel and Parker, holding their stop-watches, watched the race from the judge's stand.

"By Jove, that Peep-sight is a streak," Parker declared admiringly. "He can beat Panchito at that distance, even at proportionate weights and with an even break at the start."

Farrel nodded, his father's old racing-glass fixed on Allesandro and Kay. The girl had "gathered" her mount; she was leaning low on his powerful neck and Farrel knew that she was talking to him, riding him out as he had never been ridden before. And he was responding. Foot by foot he closed the distance that Peep-sight had opened up, but within a hundred yards of the finish Allesandro again called upon his mount for some more of the same, and the gallant Peep-sight flattened himself perceptibly and held his own; nor could Panchito's greatest efforts gain upon the flying half-breed a single inch.

"Bully for the Indian kid," Parker yelled. "Man, man, that's a horse race."

"They'll never stop at the half-mile pole," Farrel laughed. "That race will be won by Panchito when Panchito wins it. Ah, I told you so."

"Well, Peep-sight wins at the half by one open length—and the cholo boy is using a switch on him!"

"He's through. Panchito is gaining on him. He'll pass him at the three-quarter pole."

"Right-o, Farrel. Panchito wins by half a length at the three-quarter pole——"

"I wish Kay would pull him up," Farrel complained. "He's gone too far already and there she is still heading for home like the devil beating tan-bark. . . well, if she breaks him down she's going to be out the grandest saddle animal in the state of California. That's all I have to say. . . . Kay, Kay, girl, what's the matter with you? Pull him up . . . by the blood of the devil, she can't pull him up. She's broken a rein and he's making a run of it on his own."

THE FACE OF A SPIRIT IS SEEN ON TOMBSTONE

TOMBSTONE OF SMITH TREADWELL, SHOWING 'SPIRIT FACE."

SPRING PLACE, Ga., May 11.—Would a spirit from the life beyond the grave come back and chisel his likeness on the tombstone over the spot where his mortal body lies buried?

For 10 years this has been the question asked by those visiting the cemetery here, near Dalton.

Back in 1873, Smith Treadwell Sr was buried. Natives say nothing unusual occurred for 40 years. Then slowly, but surely, the face seen in the photograph took form on the side of the tombstone.

It now has reached what may be called perfect form. It is as closely like photographs of Treadwell as two pictures can be, they say—a perfect resemblance of the man buried this half century.

Was it the wind, the rain and the snow? And, if so, why has not the phenomenon been repeated in other parts of the world if it were a work of the elements? Has a spirit hand carved the engraving? Or has some one on this earth done it?

No one has accounted for it as yet, and the strange, uncanny happening has strengthened the belief spiritualism by many of those in these parts who heretofore have scoffed.

CONCRETE HIGHWAYS

Open the Door to Prosperity

OUR highways are the arteries of our Country's industry.

They carry the passenger car of the money-spending tourist, the utility car of the salesman calling on country trade, the farmer's truck with farm produce for city markets, and the short-haul freight from factory to retail store, or to the railroad terminal.

How efficiently are all these being served by our highways?

Vastly better than once-upon-a-time. But there is room for infinite improvement; and exactly in proportion as this improvement is effected, we will bring down haulage costs, reduce the cost of marketing the product of farm and factory; facilitate trade intercourse and increase tourist business.

The country that uses out-of-date transportation methods cannot compete with the country that speeds up its commerce by the wide use of motor driven vehicles.

And since the extent we make use of modern transport depends on the state of our roads, it is important that Canada provide enough Concrete Highways fully to take advantage of the newer, speedier type of vehicle.

Concrete Roads are economical, they reduce upkeep to a minimum; they mean lower taxation—invite tourist travel and reduce fuel costs. A concrete road is an open door to Prosperity.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — And Curb Prices.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

BEARS SWITCH ATTACKS.

NEW YORK, May 11. — Finding the steels, equipment, sugar, railroad and general industrial issues showing powerful resistance, bears on the New York Stock Exchange today switched their attack to the fertiliser and cotton oil issues, meeting with considerable success. The fertiliser and cotton oil business has been on the down-grade for a long time and the issues therefore are vulnerable.

Secretary Mellons' prediction of sound prosperity, free from danger of inflation and the striking improvement shown both by the Federal Reserve system as a whole, and local regional institutions, imparted a strong tone to the initial dealings American Can and California Petroleum, two leaders of the previous session, scored further gains, while National Biscuit reached a new high on this move at 43½, while other industrials showed fractional gains over the previous close.

General motors moved ahead on buying based on the belief that a capital readjustment plan will be announced in a few months, offering one share of common on a five dollar per dividend basis for four shares now outstanding. Stocks continued to show a confident tone. New highs on the recovery were reached by Baldwin and Corn Products while California Petroleum spurted to 22 3-8, up 2 points from the week's low. Over production in California and a reduction of crude oil and gasoline prices were to a great extent responsible for the recent slump in the Petroleum issues. Now the situation is gradually righting itself. California producers were cutting down down the production and there is no improvement in shipments from Mexico. Over production in California will go a long way toward curtailing drilling operations in South America

Some unsettlement was created in the late morning by another outburst of selling in the fertiliser group, which carried Virginia-Carolina to a new 1923 low at 11 3-4, and American cotton oil at 9 7-8. Those in the street who have been following the trend of the fertiliser and cotton oil business were not surprised when many of the stocks represented by these industries broke to new lows. The annual reports of these companies will be forthcoming within the next three months, and few of them will make pleasant reading. Cotton oil business has been very poor for the third bad year in succession; while fertilizer industry has looked up somewhat, the profits have been small in fact of larger volumes. Many of the companied are still suffering from Polarised Receivables, some of which will have to be written off as bad debts.

Public Debt Increased

So far it was a story of surpluses, but unfortunately it had been necessary to make advances to the railways totalling $97,950,000. So that there had been a total deficit of $81,380,864. The net result was that there had been added to the public debt the sum of about 61 millions.

For the fiscal year 1922-23 just closed the ordinary revenue had been $393,619,00 and the ordinary expenditure had been $331,780,000. There was therefore surplus of $61,839,000. Capital expenditure had totalled $14,500.000 and other expenditures had brought that sum up to $24,350,000. The surplus left was therefore $37,589,900. Railways again had destroyed that surplus requiring advances during the year totalling $92,190,000 and to the Mercantile Marine had been advanced $6,060,700 on a total to railways and Mercantile Marine of $98,250,720. The surplus was eaten up and a large balance left on the wrong side of the ledger. The net result was that there had been added to the National Debt the sum of $49,293,086. The receipt of eight millions on Exchange adjustment from the British Government had helped the situation somewhat.

S Fielding .....

Dealing with the balance sheet of 1922-1923, he placed the ordinary revenues at $393,619,000, and the ordinary expenditures at $331,780,000, which left a balance of $61,839,000.

MINES—MINES AND MINES

The concensus of opinion is that Canadian Mines will see an unprecedented upward movement. Many of them are now at ROCK BOTTOM Prices. Argonaut, West Dome, Vipond, Newray, Clifton, Hattie, McKinley, Lorraine, Teck-Hughes, are slated for much higher prices.

You may buy them on MARGIN or for CASH. Interest on the carried balances is only 6 per cent.

BIG PRACTICE FOR BIG 4 TEAM

The Peterborough Central Ontario Ontario League club have been unable to secure a team for an exhibition game to-morrow. Bowmanville, who were expected to come, are entertaining the Toronto University team to-morro wand efforts to have Port Hope come in their stead were unsuccsesful. As all the Toronto Leagues open to-morrow, it was impossible to secure any of the Queen City senior outfits. The Petes will therefore have to content themselves with a workout, and Manager Solomon expects every man in the squad to be on hand in uniform. The League opening is less than two weeks away and the bad weather this week has thrown the crew back in their training, so that every practice will have to count from now on. The Petes will practice immediately after the Juvenile League double header, which commences at 1.30 o'clock.

ANNUAL REPORT OF LABOR DEPARTMENT

Shows a Loss in Trade Union Membership But Increased Expenditure For Benefits.

The figures published in the twelfth annual report on labor organization in Canada, covering the calender year 1922, which has just been issued by the Department of Labor, show that during the three-year period from 1920 to 1922 there has been a decline in trade union membership in Canada of 101,426, the loss in the last calender year being 156 in branches and 36,099 in members. The total membership of all classes of trade unions in the Dominion at the close of 1922 stood at 276,621, comprised in 2,512 local branches. There are in all 92 international organizations operating in Canada, and between them they have 2,108 local branches in the Dominion, with a combined reported membership of 206,150. These figures indicate six fewer international organizations operating in the Dominion, with losses of 115 in branches and 16,746 in members. There are eighteen of what are termed "non-international" organizations, an increase of three over the year 1921, with totals of 272 local branches and 22,973 members, a gain in branches of eight, but a decrease in membership of 1,507. The number of independent units of trade union organizations has decreased by two, there now being 25 such bodies, the reported total membership being 9,063, a loss of 6,581. The unions commonly known as "National and Catholic" number 106, with a reported membership of 38,335, a decrease in unions of 14 and in members of 6,635. Of the 34 local units of the One Big Union which were in existence in 1921 only one reported, and as the general officers of the body refused to furnish any information as to its standing, all of the non-reporting branches have been dropped from the report. The figures recorded above indicate that, although the international organizations had the heaviest decrease during the year 1922, this group represents approximately 74 per cent. of the total trade unionists in the Dominion. The membership of all classes of organized labor in Canada, as reported to the Department for the past twelve years, has been as follows:

Other Important Features of the Report.

Besides the statistics furnished, the report gives particulars concerning certain revolutionary labor organizations of recent formation and the doctrines which their promoters are endeavoring to propagate in Canada as well as in other countries. The volume also contains much general information as to the activities of organized labor in Canada, as well as references to important labor events both at home and abroad. As a directory of trade unions the report is very complete, containing particulars of every known local trade union in Canada, and also lists of central organizations and delegate bodies, together with the names and addresses of the chief executive officers for the year 1923. A chapter in the report is devoted to an important class of organized wage-earners who are not connected with the organized labor movement, included in which are associations of school teachers, commercial travellers and Government employees. In all there are 63 such bodies having a combined reported membership of 51,373.

DOWN WITH JAZZ WOMEN DEMAND

ATLANTA, Ga., May 11.— A movement to annihilate "jazz" in the United States is a headliner on the programme of the biennial council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, attended here by delegates from 40,000 clubs, numbering 2,000,000 members.

"Jazz," declare prominent southern club women who are warring against it, "is having a bad effect on our girls ando n society in general. It must go, and concerted action by the women's clubs of America will wipe it out of existence in short order."

Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president of the Atlanta Women's Club; Mrs. Norman C. Sharpe, chairman of the state committee on citizenship, and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, vice-president of the Atlanta Music Festival Association and a leader in women's club activity, are taking the lead in the crusade.

They will ask the biennial council to denounce "jazz" in the strongest terms, and will appeal to the mothers of the country to frown on it and draw their daughters away from it.

Here in Georgia the club women plan further steps.

According to Mrs. Boykin, the club women of the state will request the legislature at its summer session to put a prohibitive license tax on bands and orchestra furnishing "jazz" at dances and other social functions.

"Let them furnish real music for our young folk," says Mrs. Boykin, "but no jazz."

A determined stand against "jazz" by the club women of the country will mold a public sentiment that soon will wipe it out of existence, in the opinion of Mrs. Boykin, Mrs. Sharpe, Mrs. Richardson and the club women they represent.

AUDIENCE TOLD WHOM TO MARRY

Arthur Black Farmer Disseminates Advice as to Matrimonial Union.

"This young man should marry a woman of darker coloring, with a head narrower at the ears, but much higher, especially in the back part. Such a woman would manage him, help to hold him down to one place, and stimulate him to attempt more and take responsibilities he is inclined to dodge," declared Arthur Black Farmer in examining one of the three candidates for public analysis before a large audience at the Public Library Hall last evening.

"Are you married?" he asked. "Yes." Is she about the type of woman I described?" "Pretty much, but she has not been able to keep me in one place," replied the young man, who however agreed that Mr. Farmer's analysis of his character was very correct. Two young women also had their characters and the types of men they should marry described.

The psychology of love, Mr. Farmer declared to be one of the most important sides of the study of human nature, for it included all that makes life richest, the love of man and woman, the love for children, home and friends, which constitute much of the driving power that inspires people to industry and effort.

Not to disappoint those young people who had thoughts of marriage in mind in coming to the lecture, Mr. Farmer discussed the attractions of the sexes, explaining the difference between the interest the young man felt in the other fellow's sister as compared with his own.

The law of attraction between the sexes, he explained, was a provision of nature to bring together such people as can produce the finest offspring, and if young people would seriously consider the kind of children their marriages would be likely to produce, there would not be many blunders or unhappy marriages.

In a few tense minutes the speaker emphasized the importance of a knowledge of all that pertained to parenthood, to the influences that moulded the health and character of children, and of a knowledge of birth control that families should not have more children than the health of the mother and the finances of the father could care for.

The dark side of the picture was presented in some pointed references to social vice, and especially to drugs and constipation as causes that cause sexual abnormalities and perversions, and much of the social vice.

The audiences to which Mr. Farmer has been speaking have been growing steadily, and last evening the hall was well filled. The public delineations of character at the close of each lecture always prove of great interest.

The subjects of the three remaining lectures of the public series announced are, tonight, "Blondes and Brunettes"; Monday, "Round and Narrow Faces," and Tuesday, "Your Supreme Wish and How to Attain It." There will be no lecture Saturday evening as Mr. Farmer lectures in Toronto.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

NEW FOX PHOTOPLAY SCORES BIG SUCCESS.

Once in a great while there comes a motion picture that brings happiness to all who see it. That is the kind of production that started a three-day run at the Grand Theatre last night.

This Fox picture "A California Romance," starring John Gilbert has much to recommend it. The story and direction are good. The acting is always of a high standard and the photography is a delight to the eye. John Gilbert's portrayal of the gay cavalier who sings love songs on the guitar is well done. His sword fighting in the later scenes is also very entertaining. There are many thrills and a sharp, exciting climax.

AT THE ROYAL.

SCREEN BALL REVIVES GLORIES OF OLD SOUTH.

Days of grandeur in the old South live again on the screen in "White Shoulders," the First National attraction starring Katherine MacDonald now running at the Royal Theatre.

One of the novel incidents in this photoplay and one of great beauty depicts a fancy dress ball at the aristocratic Pitman home with the guests attired in costumes that reflect the styles of the early sixties.

Katherine MacDonald, "the American beauty" of the screen, was never more lovely than she appears in the old-fashioned costume of black taffeta, trimmed with rare Valenciennes lace, which formerly adorned one of her grandmother's "party dresses." It is cut low, both in front and in back, and reveals the actress' glistening ivory shoulders.

The old - fashioned dances that were enjoyed at this party prove that in the matter of real grace and rythm such pronounced favorites of another day as the schottische, the Virginia reel, the polka and the "hop waltz" are superior to the leaders of the modern dance school, born of jazz, nurtured in syncopation and reared in the atmosphere of braying brasses and moaning saxaphonic blues.

AT THE CAPITOL.

Plenty of Peterboro people have seen Douglas Fairbanks this week in his latest success, "Robin Hood." To those who have not yet availed themselves of the opportunity it, might be said that this production, which is a very expensive one, has only four more performances in Peterboro, including the special childrens' matinee to-morrow morning. The Capitol Theatre, with its special front display in honor of "Robin Hood", has echoed with applause all week for the exploits of the daring robber chieftain and his jovial crew. The story is familiar to most, but in this picture it stands out as a real happening, no longer a story-book tale, but the pictured adventures of Robert, Earl of Huntingdon, favorite of King Richard the Lion Heart.

A remarkable picture, where the hounds of the king cluster about his banqueting table to receive the bones of the feast; where a hawk and a pigeon hover in mid-air, fighting for life; where knights in full array file in long lines across the fields of sunny France, where the quick archer draws his bow and arrow against mounted men, it has a background of lovely and appropriate music. The Capitol orchestra, led by Miss Gladman, surpass themselves in their tuneful accompaniment to the storied loves and fights and adventures of the bold Robin.

WALES IS LEADER FOR MEN'S STYLES.

Heir Apparent King of the Fashions in Great Britain.

By Milton Bronner.

LONDON, May 11.—George Fifth may be King of England, but from the standpoint of the "knuts," his son, the Prince of Wales, is a far more important person. For he is King of the Fashions.

George Rex may wear any old thing and nobody pays any particular attention. But let "David, Prince," wear something new and the next morning all the "knuts" are down at their tailors in Jermyn street ordering the very something. In England a "knut" isn't necessarily a "nut" but a person who is dippy about clothes; in other words, a dude.

A little trip around the clock with the prince shows what all young Englishmen who can afford it are wearing. Well then — ordinarily in the morning after the Prince gives a hurried glance at his personal mail, he dons a plain white sweater and pair of running "shorts" and takes a run around the gardens of the place where he happens to be—just to keep in good trim. Later in the morning, if there is some wedding he is to attend, you may see him all dolled up as follows: high silk hat, three-button cuffed overcoat usually of dark blue or black, striped trousers.

The Prince is fond of the high hat. They call them "toppers" over her. He often wears them when he goes to the races as a mere spectator. Then his garb is a black afternoon coat heavily braided and striped trousers.

Ordinarily when knocking about town in the afternoons he wears a light gray or tan street suit. They call them "lounge suits" over here. If he happens to go out for a game of golf, he dazzles the crowd with his zig-zag sweater. It has as many bright colors and jagged lines as some of the designs found in the tomb of old King Tut.

At night, if an affair is very formal, he is, of course, in regular evening dress. If the affair is informal, he wears what we call a Tuxedo, what the English always call a dinner jacket, and what the French call a "smoking."

His influence on men's wear is all-pervading. You can't get away from it, no matter how modest the tailor to whom you go. The other day I was having a suit fitted. I buttoned all the buttons on the vest—always a waistcoat over here.

"Oh," protested the tailor's fitter, "you don't button that bottom button. It is always left unbuttoned."

"But why?"

"Because 'is Ighness, the Prince of Wiles leaves it unbuttoned."

CONSERVATIVE WOMEN

thusiasm for the work in hand. Get facts and figures regarding your own party, she said, of Sir James Whitney's and Sir William Hearst's former governments, together with the record of the present Drury administration during the last four years, and then go after every single vote.

Deploring a growing tendency with Canadians to neglect casting their ballots, the speaker pointed out the danger of such omissions even in constituencies where seats are counted as perfectly safe. And in such reference she recalled where in one election a Conservative was defeated by 40 votes in a riding where 100 Conservatives refrained from voting. She cited this incident that her sex present should realize the importance of fostering enthusiasm in Conservative interests the next six weeks, and seeing to it that no vote is lost for want of collective and individual campaign effort. "As far as practicable, let other calls on your time go between now and June 25, for it is your supreme duty," she insisted, "to assist in returning to power in this province a stable Conservative government."

In conclusion, Miss Boulton reiterated that women, having fought fair and won their franchise, they are expected to live up to that privilege by exercising the responsibility they brought upon themselves for actively participating in the election of Dominion and Provincial governments. And she was optimistic of West Peterborough being redeemed by the Conservatives if Conservative women, in co-operation with the men, only play their part.

Energy Needed

President-elect, Mrs. Fallis, spoke for energetic co-operation from her colleagues and contended that if this women's organization is to achieve results it must have the hearty support of all Conservative women in West Peterborough. "It is up to us," she said, "to remember that from now till June 25 we are Conservatives first and everything else afterwards. The Conservatives are going to the country on their past record for which they need no defence; and that record will put them in power once more."

The meeting concluded with a vote of thanks to Miss Boulton and the singing of the National Anthem.

HOW TO SAVE GAS IN COOKING RANGE.

By Following 10 Rules For Economic Use of Cooking Fuel.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Now that your winter gas bills are coming down and you've stopped storming at the furnace, turn your attention to your cooking range.

It is there that you can save from 25 to 50 per cent. on your gas bills—if you know how.

Miss Minna C. Denton of the Bureau of Home Economics in the United States Department of Agriculture, can tell you. In fact, she experimented with four kinds of gas stoves, seven ovens and varying gas pressures until she devolved 10 rules for the most economic use of the cooking fuel.

Follow them, says Miss Denton, and you will be surprised at the reduction in your gas bill next month.

Use of Burners

Here they are:

1—Use the right burner. The biggest burner on your stove uses 50 per cent. more gas than the others, and four or five times as much as the simmer burner. Use the big burner for a dish with very large bottom only. Use the simmer burner, the smallest, to keep things boiling once they're started on the bigger jets.

2—Turn the burner down when the things have started to cook.

3—Keep the burners clean and the jets open.

4—Adjust the flame by moving the air shutter open or closed until the flame is blue, with a minimum yellow tip, and just touches the bottom of the pan. The blue flame is the hottest and makes the least soot.

5—Set the burner about one to one and one-half inches from the pan. Long flames use more gas that short ones for the same effect.

Fireless Cooker.

6—Use a fireless cooker properly. Heat the radiators just enough to keep the stews boiling. There's no economy if it takes as much gas to heat the cooker as it does to cook the food.

7—A pressure cooker will save money in cooking tough meats, vegetables and cereals.

8—The hooded fireless burner, made by many manufacturers, is a fuel saver.

9—See that the oven is tight and doesn't leak heat. Thick asbestos insulation about the oven walls will save heat.

10—Bake where possible at low temperature, or in a slow oven. It takes less to keep the oven going at low temperature. The difference in time between the "fast" and "slow" oven will not compensate for the difference in gas used.

JUVENILE LEAGUE GAMES TO-MORROW

Two games in the Juvenile City League will precede the practice of the Central Leaguers at Riverside Park to-morrow afternoon. At 1.30 the Maple Leafs and Hillcrests of Ashburnham will play with the Sacred Heart and Lockworks teams going on immediately afterward.

WON GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Efficient Housekeeping

The modern idea of economy extends into the household as well as into every branch of business. Most housewives pride themselves upon the fact that their homes are conducted in an efficient, business - like manner.

Every housewife knows, too, that the business of running a house, providing for the wants and needs of the different members of the family and meeting the almost daily emergencies is second to none.

The Want Ads. in the Examiner are a great boon to the efficient housewife. In securing helpers, in purchasing various articles of household equipment, disposing of discarded furniture, in fact in countless ways, the Want Ads. are the housewife's most valuable assistant.

FAST BOUTS FEATURE OF LACROSSE SMOKER IN THE VICTORIA HALL

Minicolo Disposed of McGrady of Toronto With Ease — Coombe Lost Decision — Minstrels Were Good.

GOOD ATTENDANCE.

The fans were out in force for the Lacrosse Club smoker last evening for the dual purpose of showing the club that the sporting fraternity of the city is right behind the effort to place lacrosse again on the athletic map of Canada and to witness a card of four fast bouts, which were alone worth the price of admission.

With Verne Morphet's minstrels as a curtain-raiser and added attraction, one and all went home with the feeling of an evening well spent.

In the main bouts of the evening the local boxers showed to good advantage. The somniferous Tony Minicolo rocked Joe McGrady, of Toronto, into bye-bye land in much less than one round, while McTaggart, also a Canadian Belfaster, was given the decision over Lorne Coombe by a very narrow margin.

In the preliminary bouts Young Smith won from Sims by a decision, while Irish Joe Jordan took "Red" Thompson into camp.

The two 90-pounders, Smith and Sims, started things off at a lively clip, and went three rounds of snappy milling. The youngsters showed both an inclination and an ability to swap punches in the regular heavyweight style.

In awarding the decision to Smith, Referee Graham pointed out that he had been the aggressor for the greater part of the bout.

Irish Joe Jordan and Red Thompson put up the liveliest bout of the evening. Though Thompson, who showed to best advantage on the defensive, was ready to let Jordan take the aggressive for the greater part of the bout, he launched one or two attacks that made the follower of the harp and shamrock show what a guard he could put up. At the end of three rounds the referee called for an extra round, but Thompson did not wish to go on, and the decision was awarded to Jordan.

McGrady, the visiting mit artist of the 118-pound class, was hopelessly outclassed in his bout with Minicolo. Tony opened the bout by shaking hands and then walloping the Toronto hopeful. He kept right on hitting him till with the round less than half over, McGrady nose-dived and was counted out.

In the final bout McTaggart was given the decision over Lorne Coomb, though many of the fans thought the award should have been the other way.

Coombe gave away a good deal in the matter of weight, age and size, and still showed to good advantage. In the final round, he chased McTaggart all around the ring, and sent him to the mat once, but as the referee pointed out, Coombe is a fighter, McTaggart a sparrer. The number and not the effectiveness of the hits landed was what counted in making the award on points, so the decision went to the visitor.

The first round of this bout was rather neutral, with both boys feeling out the strength of their opponent. In the second Coombe took the aggressive, but McTaggart's defensive ability stood him in good stead, and he held the local boy off.

In the third session the pace was more lively. Both boys went down together on one occasion, but were up and at it again. Coombe sent McTaggart to the mat again, but the visitor did not wait for the count, and was on his feet again in a second.

Coombe tried hard for the remainder of the bout, but could not get past McTaggart's defence.

George N. Graham was the referee for all the bouts, and handled both the crowd and the boxers in his usual efficient manner.

The Musical Opening.

Verne Morphet and his minstrels started the show in a light and merry mood, and although it was a regular ringside audience they responded warmly to the music and fun that made up the first hour. The singing was bright and snappy, the choruses smooth and tuneful, ahd the jokes went across with good effect. Dick Lush proved himself a suave interlocutor, and he handled the minstrel business in an easy, graceful style.

The end men were Verne Morphet, Jim Turnbull Sherm Rowe, Bill McKim, Al. White, and Al. Trussler. The programme of solos follows: "Come Back, Old Pal," sung by Mr. Lush and company; "You Tell Her I Stutter," by Jim Turnbull; "Carolina in the Morning," by Jim Gaull; "Flippity, Flappity Flappers," by Sherm Rowe; "Just Keep on Smiling," by Ed. Rowe; "All for the Love of Mike," by Al. Trussler; "Kiss Mama, Kiss Papa," by Bill McKim; and "Radi-Adi-O," by Vern Morphet.

The accompanying orchestra was composed of C. McCarthy at the piano, Bert Bugg saxophone, and W. Northcote drums.

During the intermission, R. M. Glover briefly addressed the audience, referring to the effort which was being made to revive lacrosse in Peterborough. It was hoped by the promoters that as the younger players developed, the public might be won back to the old favour and appreciation which they used to show to lacrosse in times gone by. On behalf of the club, Mr. Glover thanked all those who took part in the smoker, especially Mr. Morphet and his minstrels, the boxing committee of the P.A.A.A., and the boys who put on the bouts. George Graham for his very helpful assistance, and others who had contributed to the pleasure of the entertainment.

Co-operation Did It.

Genuine, sterling co-operation was the basis of the success of last night's smoker. Mr. Morphet, Mr. Lush and their talented asociates never hesitated when asked if they would provide part of the programme, and the Lacrosse Club are greatly indebted to them. Likewise the boxing staff deserve all the credit that can be conveyed to them. In this respect special mention must be made of the local boxers, Lorne Coombe, Tony Minicolo, Joe Jordan, Thompson, Sims and Smith, also Frank Millard, the new chairman of the Boxing Committee of the P.A.A.A., Wilfrid Jones, the instructor, Charles Curtis, who looked after the details of the engagements, and G. N. Graham for his capable services as referee.

The co-operation from these various sources accounted for the general success of the programme and this acknowledgment includes the members of the orchestra, J. H. Spence from whom the hall was secured, and others who helped in minor respects.

Vic Hamilton president of the club, also expressed his thanks to the visiting representatives of the St. Helen's Club, Joe LeMoine, and the two boxers in his charge, Jim McTaggart and Joe McGrady.

Second Game for the Softball Title

The second game between the Belmonts and the Canadian Woollens for the city soft ball championship will be staged this evening at 8 o'clock. The Belmonts have the edge of one game, having won the opening fixture on Wednesday evening. Their team will be greatly weakened tonight by the absence of Tommy Holyman who hurt his ankle in the Wednesday night game and will be unable to play tonight. With Holyman off the Belmonts will have some difficulty in finding a star hurler to take his place and will have their work cut out to hold the hard hitting Woollens in ionship will be stager this evening to put the same team in the field.

If the Belmonts win this evening they will be awarded the championship but in the event of the Woollens coming across with a victory another game will be necessary and will be played tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

TWO U.S. GOLFERS STILL IN RUNNING

Ouimet and Grant Face 4 Englishmen and Two Scots For the British Amateur Title.

DEAL, England, May 11 (Canadian Press). — Through sunshine, rain, and blustering winds, Roger Wethered and Cyril Tolley, British stars, and Francis Ouimet, Boston, leading favourites for the finals of the British Amateur Golf Championship being played on the links of the Royal Cinque Ports Club, battled their way to the round before the semi-finals yesterday.

This morning two Scotsmen, four Englishmen, and two golfers from the United States will play the sixth round, and in the afternoon those who triumph over the 18 holes of the morning will meet in the semi-finals. In addition to Ouimet, Douglas Grant is a citizen of the United States. Grant resides in London.

Roger Wethered and Dr. O. F. Willing, Portland, Oregon, played the feature match of yesterday in the afternoon round. An immense gallery followed the two. Wethered, who is something of a hero among British golfers, displayed remarkable steadiness against the Oregonian, who had been surprising everyone by the sharpness of his putting.

Wethered did most of the fine putting yesterday. He obtained a birdie three on the second hole with a long putt and a birdie two on the fourth hole with a 30-footer.

Willing won the first hole when he got down a 15-foot putt for a birdie two, and thereafter failed to equal the efforts of Wethered either on the fairway or on the green.

Ouimet had two very hard tussles yesterday. He had to go to the home hole in both of them before winning. In the forenoon, "Jack" Neville, the California champion, clung to him like the proverbial barnacle, and in the afternoon a cool, experienced Englishman, C. Bretherton, not only staunchly challenged Ouimet's right to remain in the running, but for a time made a sound threat to put him out.

Bretherton had Ouimet three down at the sixth hole, and the slender Bostonian had to battle bravely and well to overcome this lead. The Englishman aided Ouimet's uphill struggle by getting rather badly off his own game on those deciding holes between the turn and the finish.

PHILADELPHIA GOT WHITEWASH BRUSH

St. Louis Made It Three in a Row — Cleveland and Boston Played a Close Game.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11 (Canadian Press). — St. Louis made it three in a row from Philadelphia yesterday, blanking the locals 7 to 0. Doak pitched fine ball for the victors, holding the Phillies to three scattered hits in seven innings, when Stuart relieved him and kept up the good work. Bottomley hit a home run, a double and a single in five trips to the plate, driving in four of the St. Louis tallies. Score:

St. Louis	001011400	7	14	2
Philadelphia	000000080	0	4	1

Doak, Stuart, and McCurdy; Head, Meadows and Henline.

Cincinnati 4, Boston 3.

BOSTON, May 11 (Canadian Press). — Caveney's triple and Hargrave's single in the sixth gave Cincinnati the run which eventually beat Boston, 4 to 3, yesterday. McNamara was hit hard and only excellent fielding by Southworth, Nixon, and McInnes prevented the visitors from piling up a big score. Score:

Cincinnati	011101000	4	14	4
Boston	101100000	3	8	0

Rixey and Hargrave; McNamara and O'Neil.

Do you know Baseball?

by Billy Evans

Questions

ONE—If in trying to dodge a badly pitched ball, said ball comes into contact with the bat and falls safe, is it regarded as a hit or is the ball dead?

TWO—When a batsman crouches as ball is pitched, how do umpires gauge the distance between shoulder and knee?

THREE—When does the batsman actually become a base runner?

FOUR—Two are out batter triples, scoring runner who was on first. Runner on first fails to touch second on his way to plate. How is the play scored and ruled on, the ball being held on second base and an appeal made to the umpire?

FIVE—A base runner slides into a base, reaching it in safety, only to have it detached from its fastenings. Can he be touched out with the ball if he fails to follow the base?

Answers

ONE—In trying to dodge a wildly pitched ball and it hits the bat, whatever happens is legal, the ball being regarded in play as on any other batted ball.

TWO—If the crouch is the regular batting position of the player, that fact is taken into consideration. If the batsman crouches merely to fool the umpire, the judge of play rules on the pitch as if the batter was standing erect.

THREE—The moment he hits the ball regardless of whether it is caught or not.

FOUR—Failure to touch second makes a force out at that base, retiring the side. The run does not count. Incidentally the batsman who made the triple is deprived of a hit because it is impossible to score a hit on a play where the third out is a force play.

FIVE—It is not necessary to follow the base if it breaks loose. If the runner is declared safe and the base breaks loose he cannot be touched out.

BOWLING CHALLENGE.

The cold spell of the past few days has sent the bowlers back to the alley and some of the five pinners are again yelling for some opposition. The Lawn Bowlers with Captain Tom Curvin at the helm has issued a challenge to any five pin team in the city for a meet at the Water street alleys.

VETS AND SCOTS IN A DRAW GAME

Soccer Semi-Final For the Gordon Cup Ended in a Scoreless Tie.

The G.W.V.A. and Thistles played to a goalless draw in the first game of the semi-final games for the Gordon Cup. The game was played at the Oval last evening and was a fast one from start to finish. The Vets were out in their new uniforms of Royal Blue and Red.

The Thistles won the toss and played with the wind and sun behind them. Burgess got possession and made a pass to Richmond who sent in a nice shot which Griffin saved in fine style. The backs on both sides were good and the play was in mid-field for most part of the game. Burrows who played centre half for the Vets kept a watchful eye on Richmond and the crack centre could not get going. Mander and Willis were given a chance but Rae and Anderson were both in great form and frustrated their final effort. Half time arrived with no score.

Owing to the late start there was no interval. From the centre kick Richmond sent out to Shawn but Bishop intervened with a safe kick which Manders got hold of and transferred to Willis who hit the bar with a grand drive. Rae sent Shawn up the left and centred to see his effort going begging. The play now was very fast. Sharman and Monks were a source of trouble to the Thistles' defence who often kicked out to avert danger. A foul close to the Vets' goal which was taken by Richmond looked dangerous, but he sent the ball wide of the mark. Darkness was coming on and the game was difficult to follow. Full time arrived without either side finding the net.

The teams were:

Vets—Goal, Griffin; backs, Bishop, Peel; halves, Williams, Burrows, Hurrle; forwards, Willis, Manders, Dwyer, Monks, Sharman.

Thistles—Goal, Penner; backs, Rae, Anderson; halves, Hardie, Hoggarth, McMillan; forwards, Burgess, Brown, Richmond, Young, Shawn.

Referee—J. Howarth.

FRENCH SOCCER TEAM DEFEATED

Twenty Thousand Turned Out at Paris to Watch the English Team Win.

PARIS, France, May 11.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—Twenty thousand spectators watched in showery weather England win the International soccer football match from France here yesterday by a score of 4 to 1.

Hegan scored after ten minutes of play for England and Buchan added anotner from Creek's pass just before half time when the score was 2-0 in favor of England.

Creek added a third goal ten minutes after the resumption of play. Hartley injured his knee and took no further part in the game. After forty minutes' play, Hegan and Creek both rushed the ball into the net from Osborne's centre pass.

Just before time Devasques, after some clever passing by the French forwards, scored the only goal for France. The English team was never extended. Buchan, Hegan and Creek were the most prominent forwards. Alderson, the English goalie, was rarely tested.

The English team was made up: Alderson, Crystal Palace; Cresswell, Sunderland; Jones, Notts Forest; Plumb, Charlton; Seddon, Plymouth; Barton, Birmingham; Osborne, Fulham; Buchan, Sunderland; Creek, Corinthians; Hartley, Oxford City and Lieut. Hegan, Army.

CHAMPS TO HAVE LOTS OF SCRAPS

Strong Ring Contenders Are After Every Championship Crown.

(By Henry L. Farrell, United Press Editor.)

Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, May 11 (United Press). — Outdoor boxing has developed into such a huge commercial enterprise that the day of big winter indoor bouts may have passed for good.

The extent to which the possibilities for huge prizes in the big ball parks and open-air stadiums have increased was shown when Tex Rickard failed completely to get a star bout to close the indoor season at Madison Square Garden with a mid-May show.

Rejuvenation of action in the featherweight and middleweight divisions, the development of two or three "logical contenders" for the heavyweight championship and the increased facilities for crowds in the two New York baseball parks may go so far in producing big bouts this year that the public might get too much of it.

At least a dozen fine cards may be arranged for the summer season in and around New York.

Jack Dempsey has good prospects for fights with Luis Firpo and Harry Wills, after his Montana fight with Tom Gibbons, on 4th July, although present plans are to match Dempsey and Firpo in South America this November.

Mike McTigue and Georges Carpentier have already been matched, and the winner no doubt can have another bout with Gene Tunney, the American light heavyweight champion.

Johnny Wilson has several good middleweights in line for him headed by Jock Malone, the St Paul "champion." Mickey Walker, the welterweight champion, also wants a crack at him.

Walker can command two large purses without meeting any of the dangerous fighters in the welterweight class, as he can take on Wilson and then give Benny Leonard the chance that he wants at his crown.

Leonard has almost a million dollars right within his grasp. The lightweight champion has in prospect contests with Walker, Lew Tendler, Sailor Friedman, Charley White, and Rocky Kansas, and they would all be good drawing cards.

Johnny Kilbane, the venerable featherweight champion, has already signed to meet Eugene Criqui, the European featherweight champion, and if he gets over the Frenchman he can, if he wants to, fight Johnny Dundee and Joe Lynch.

Lynch, the bantamweight champion, following the example of other champions who like to avoid the dangerous men in their class, may be forced to accept the challenge of Carl Tremaine and then fight Joe Burman and Johnny Curtin.

Jimmy Wilde, the world's fly-weight champion, is coming over to fight Pancho Villa, the former American champion, and the winner perhaps will be matched with Frankie Genaro ,the present champion.

Villa and Genaro both say they would like to meet Joe Lynch and if the bantam champion can avoid his own challengers, he no doubt would accept an offer—if large enough.

It is a question if the public can be steamed up to pay the freight for all the bouts that can be arranged. There is such an abundance of championship bouts in the making that it might be possible to arrange a big bout every week. This would bring about a war among the promoters, and there are several good ones now under way. New York can be counted upon to stand for everything that would not go in any other big city, and only the fear of interference from Albany may restrain the promoters and the boxers from losing their heads completely.

SATURDAY'S GAMES.

A Juvenile double-header will be staged tomorrow at Riverside park. This will be the curtain raiser for the City League and two fast games should result for the boys have all been out and getting into shape for some time past. Maple Leafs and Hillcrests will meet in the first game while Sacred Heart and Lockworks are slated for the second contest. All players should have their certificates on hand before the games start.

PLAY NATURALLY

There is a lot of fallacious and dangerous teaching about the work the wrists do in golf. Some instructtors advise turning them one way, others in a different way. Or the advice may be given in reference to the club face, to turn it away from the ball, which is practically the same thing. This has always appeared to me as artificial and unnatural. None of the caddies are ever conscious of doing this, and, what is more, none of the real stars do it. By rolling the wrists at the start, I have no hesitation in stating that all chances of a correct swing are gone—unless the player is somewhat of a juggler. As a general working rule the player will be well advised to scrutinize carefully any piece of advice that recommends anything which does not come naturally. He must, of course, distinguish between what is novel or new and what is natural. Any new movement will feel awkward at first, but this should pass with practice.

If the player has been instructed in the mechanical principles of the game (which are not many nor hard to understand), he will learn to distinguish the essential points in a swing from the accidentals and the mannerisms of the player. It must be remembered that no two human beings are constructed exactly alike; and therefor. no two will swing a golf club in the same way, so it will be wise before a beginner adopts another player as his paragon, to first ascertain if there is the greatest agreement in their physical builds. It is useless for a short stout man to attempt to swing the club exactly as a thin, elongated one. Therefore, if the fundamental principles of the game are appreciated, the blind mimicry of unimportant details will be avoided. The fact that Ray smokes a pipe while playing is no reason why anyone else should, and if you do so because he does this is likely to be the only thing you will have in common. I appreciate the fact that a pipe may be a great aid in concentration; but unless it comes naturally, avoid it.

The greatest players in golf as in everything else, are those who developed themselves. Do not always be running to your pro. for every little detail, for there is no short road to success. Practice can not be eliminated. Learn the little shots first. Practice the others also. Fifteen minutes at a time is sufficient and then play a competitive game, for this is the testing ground. If one's game should go back entirely, then consult the pro; but as the principles of the game are clearly grasped off days will tend to disappear.

In golf one should feel his way more than think it, for golf is primarily a game of action and not of thought. In fact, it has been said that to play golf well, one does not need brains. Moreover, too much grey matter has been said to be a hindrance. Some even suggest that one's game is in inverse ratio to his intellect. Some of the best players certainly will not be shot for their literary abilities; but then there is a large number of people who would willingly become "duds" if it meant playing well. This criticism confuses two different things. Golf is a game of action and not principally a study of metaphysics. Usually the man of science has been so busy in his line that he has not given the time to the game until late in life, and then he tries by mental concentration to make up for lost time. This mental agitation usually takes place when the stroke is being made.

The theoretical player, and most business men are such, should know that to think of how a shot is to be performed while making the shot is the surest means of bungling it. This spoils concentration. It is like watching one's feet going down stairs, which usually causes one to stumble. The best concentration is achieved unconsciously and therefore effortlessly; whereas thinking of how the wrists, knees and head should work while making the stroke will not produce a natural easy one, but a labored effort.

The beginner at golf is oftentimes discouraged because he cannot do what he would. The cause of failure is not always due to a misconceived theory of the game, although this is quite common, but rather of muscular inability. Even although a person has played other games, the driving of a golf ball requires th use of muscles which are little used in other sports, and these muscles must be made supple and pliable. Playing golf is the surest and quickest meth of developing them. During the novitiate of a golfer, he is always trying tips and short cuts to success. The more complicated these short cuts are, the more one seizes upon them with avidity. I suppose this is due to the fact that man is pre-eminently a creature of intellect. If man were to do things intuitively and instinctively as the bees and ants are supposed to do, I am sure this would be better for his golf. However, we must do things as is our custom. The individual who reasons about all his actions will in all probability theorize about his golf.

I hope I shall not be misunderstood. It is absolutely essential and will save the player a lot of time if he clearly understands the mechanical principles of the game, and also its psychological aspects. But when once these are grasped, it becomes largely a question of practice and it should not be necessary to try out the suggestion of every friend. Remember it is results that count. If one could drive a ball farther by standing on his head, that would be the correct method for him. Every player must fall into his own style and so long as his individual methods are not transgressing the mechanical principles of the game, no one can say that his methods are incorrect.

White Woman Turns Indian

CHARLIE WHITE MAN AND MRS. BROKEN HORN, STRANGE CHILDREN OF FATE.

By JACK JUNGMEYER

LOS ANGELES, May 11.—Mrs. Broken Horn, grand old woman of the Arapahoes, is one of those lost emigrant children taken in payment for conquest of the west.

A strange rusted link between the covered wagon folk and those who today grow gardens in the ruts of the old Oregon trail.

Mrs. Broken Horn once was white and now is red. She is a question and an answer in that endless controversy, heredity versus environment.

Captured at the age of 5 from a pioneer train by the Arapahoes and reared as one of the tribe, she is today at 74 as Indian in feature and characteristic as though sprung from the blood of aborigines. Even the consciousness of her race has been completely obliterated by 70 years of tepee life. She is the wife of an aged warrior chieftain.

Drum Tells Story

Mrs. Broken Horn gave me the oddest interview on record. Speaking no word of English, she used a rawhide drum to tell her tale, as old white women conjure dreams over their knitting. A war drum, to which her body swayed in eloquent gesture as I sat on the blankets of her wigwam.

"Thrub-thrub-thrub!" The slow, melancholy rhythm of the rawhide evoked dusty wagons creaking from the land and life behind to the romantic beckoning of Oregon and California in 1849. Among the youngsters a sprightly red-haired girl. Ahead glints of the Sweetwater and the South Pass, smoke signals from the hills, a gathering of bronzed warriors, a yelling charge. Then guns and war clubs going, the end of the trail for many, and children being hidden under blankets and the breasts of martyred mothers. "Thrub-thrub-thrub!"

A red-haired girl, wailing under the frown of squaws, carried away to the camp of the Arapahoes, to be forever severed from her kin and kind. Tears, terror, drying in exhaustion. Curiosity about her new playmates, their games, a life of novelty and surprise. Mastery of a gutteral tongue, dimming of childhood's short memory the weaning from old to new. "Thrub-thrub-thrub!"

Play, work, marches. Lodge fires in a hundred camps on Wyoming's pleasant uplands. A statuesque maiden, decked in doe-skin and beads, red braids pending about features growing broader and darker, like and yet unlike her more stoic sisters of the tents. The prairie bloom of spring, and the admiring glances of young bucks—especially Broken Horn in his eagle feather bonnet. Marriage, primitive honeymoon, motherhood. Love and labor, gain and loss, as everywhere under the sun, while the prairie flowered and withered many, many years. "Thrub-thrub-thrub!"

Haunting, that beat—and slow—like the ruminative clicking of knitting needles. If the pathos of a now forgotten anguish of a little girl's capture and the wonder of a heritage so completely erased, needed any investiture of words, Major J. V. McCoy of the U.S. Cavalry, supplied them.

Mrs. Broken Horn and a band of Arapahoes are Major McCoy's wards here during their participatiaon in the prologue of "The Covered Wagon," a film epic of pioneer day. Reared among them on the Wind River Reservation he knows their sign talk.

In the group is another white who has become an Indian—Charlie White Man, captured as a boy by Utes from a Colorado settlement, and later taken in battle by Arapahoes. He was reared by Sun Road, a chieftain.

These two lost children of a vanished day may speculate what life might have been among their kind, but do not regret their fate.

"What more could a white woman's life have given me?" asks the drum of that nameless girl who has become Mrs. Broken Horn.

Want Ad Tips

by John T. Bartlett

TWO SALES FROM ONE WANT AD

A high school student advertised, under the "Typewriters" classification, a slightly-used portable typewriter. It was only a three-line message, and a single insertion sold the machine. In fact, the second party who called to see it carried it way, leaving the price the high school boy asked.

A little later in the day, a third inquirer called. Then came a phone call from still another. By this time, an idea had occurred to the young fellow, and it is so good I am going to pass it on.

Down the street a couple of blocks lived—when he was at home—a travelling salesman friend. He wouldn't need his portable typewriter in future and planned to sell it. The high school student knew this. The idea which came to him was, "Why not put some of these inquirers in touch with my friend?"

So he made answer to the next inquirer, "I have sold my portable typewriter, but I have a friend who has a machine I believe would suit you, and he wishes to sell. His name is John Stone; he lives just two blocks down the street, at No. 635. He is away from home now, but will be back on Friday. You can talk with his mother there, if you wish."

The travelling man sold his portable typewriter to one of the "surplus" inquirers. The high school boy had done inquirers and his friend a good turn. A little three-line Want Ad had sold two machines.

When you must tell the inquirer, "Already sold," there are various things you can do which cost you little, and may help the inquirer much. Is there a friend who has the same or similar article to sell? Then refer inquirers to him. If there is not, to your present knowledge, take the names and phone numbers of inquirers. Mention the subject to friends as you have opportunity. Maybe an inquirer would like to know the price at which you sold. If you are not reticent, tell him.

Sometime, when you yourself are a Want Ad inquirer others will do as much for you.

TURNING PHONE INQUIRIES INTO SALES.

An expert in telephone salesmanship has imparted several of her secrets. Some of the methods this talented woman uses are quite simple and very effective.

If, when talking to an inquirer, you are looking at persons or objects in the room, or even at the wall, your attention will be distracted at least a degree and you will not talk your best. Close your eyes when conducting a selling conversation, this woman advises. Form a picture in your mind of the one you are talking to. Talk to this person you visualize.

"Talk in phrases." As you talk, make pauses of varying length (some of them will be very slight) between phrases in a sentence. For example, speaking the sentence, "We will be pleased to show you the piano," your words will be better understood by the inquirer if you make pauses after "pleased" and "you." Of course, practicing this principle in an automatic manner, one would merely attain a wooden, artificial, conversational style. When the pauses are of varying length, and are made gracefully, the speaker greatly multiplies the chances that the inquirer will understand well.

Be cordial. Make your tones pleasant as though you were conversing with a friend you knew well. Make your replies personal. Ascertain early in the conversation if possible, the name of the person yo uare addressing, and use it respectfully once or twice later. Use the word, "Personally" if possible—for example, when saying, "We will be pleased to show you the house, personally." This reflects a spirit that all people appreciate. And to evince it does not cost you a cent.

Say, "Thank you for inquiring," when the conversation ends. This also costs you nothing—and makes a favorable impression on the inquirer.

These little details, attended to in telephone conversations with inquirers, will help to convert inquiries into sales.

IN MEMORIAM.

WICKER—In loving memory of Susanah Wicker who passed away May 12, 1919.

Four years have passed since that sad day
When the one I loved was called away;
God took her home, it was His will,
But in my heart she liveth still;
And with the morn her angel face will smile,
Which I have loved long since but lost awhile.

—By the Husband, E. A. Wicker.

RUHR BATTLE GOES AGAINST THE GERMANS

Fall of Mark and Rise of Franc is the Measure of Success or Failure.

FRANCE IS UNITED

By J. W. T. Mason.

NEW YORK, May 12. — (United Press).—Germany is losing the Ruhr conflict. That doesn't mean the Germans will have to pay the full amount of the war indemnity as now fixed by the allies; but the amount to be eventually determined will be decisively influenced by the successful pressure the French are bringing to bear in the Ruhr.

The passive resistance of the Germans in the Ruhr is in no danger of collapsing. The French are not getting the coal out of the district in such quantities as they anticipated. But these are only subordinate considerations. The real test of the Franco-German struggle concerns the currencies of the two countries. Since the French marched into the Ruhr, francs have become stronger and marks weaker. That is the real barometer of the eventual outcome.

The Germans have not co-operated with their own government in trying to stabilize the mark. The industrialists and other manipulators of exchange in Germany have been unable to resist the temptation to make money for themselves at the expense of their country. The recent fall in the mark was due to this fact alone.

Germans Not United.

The unanimity of resistance within Germany has proven a myth. The German capitalists have apparently reached the conclusion that the Ruhr adventure is not going to mean the downfall of Germany, or else they are indifferent to such a catastrophe. Whatever the reason, they have decided that there is no reason why they should forego money-making by speculating in exchange, however, the Berlin government may desire to prevent that interference with its counter-offensive against France.

The French franc, on the other hand, has shown extraordinary strength during the past three months, consistently and with increasing impressiveness. French speculators have kept away from it. The French government has been able to rely on solidarity of support in that respect. As a measure of France's confidence in the outcome of the Ruhr invasion, the position of the franc is highly encouraging.

The German government, at the outset of the Ruhr struggle, counted on being able to depress the franc, as its principal weapon against France. International forces have been used by the Germans to bring about a fall in French currency. There have been many efforts in this direction since last January. But the Bank of France and the French treasury department have been able to counter every blow.

France Is United.

That would have been impossible if French capitalists and industrial leaders had acted toward their government as German financiers have behaved in Berlin. Instead, the French have held firmly to the idea that it would be unpatriotic to attempt to make capital out of exchange by endangering the position of France in the Ruhr.

As long as the franc remains steady, Germany cannot count on a break in French morale. On the other hand, German morale cannot continue unbroken for long once it becomes generally known that the German capitalists are using the Ruhr situation for their own private financial advantage.

Germany has lost the initial advantage which was hers when France went into the Ruhr, practically single-handed. A series of settlement offers from Germany, therefore, is now likely until an acceptable indemnity figure at last is reached.

COPPER BONUS BY GOVERNMENT

Clause of Budget for Fostering of Copper Industry in Canada—No Duty Imposed.

Mr. G. N. Gordon to-day said that the Fielding Budget would save the one million homes in Canada, two million and a half dollars a year on sugar alone.

In addition to that the Sales Tax has been cut off and a tax now will be placed by the Manufacturer on the article made at the source.

The cigarette tax was so high that this has been cut down by $1.50 on the thousand, in hopes that it will bring more taxation and prevent smuggling.

Coal is admitted free and the cheque and bill of exchange tax is reduced from a maximum of $2.00 to $1.00.

One of the most important things probably as far as Peterborough is concerned is the five year bonus given to copper manufacturers to develop this industry, as Canada has vast deposits. Copper bars and rods rods are imported free and the Government has decided to give a bounty to the manufacturers of copper. The Canadian General Electric Company made representations through Mr. Gordon against a duty being imposed on copper bars and rods as this would increase the cost of production in the Canadian General Electric plant and would interfere with the business. The Government has decided to give a bounty to the manufacturers of copper and not impose a duty.

The wool industry has been improved upon by the tariff arrangements upon wool coming into Canada for the purpose of using and manufacturing.

Altogether the budget should be one to reduce the cost of living, Mr. Gordon said.

BUDGET PLEASES U.F.A. PRESIDENT

H. W. Wood, Alberta, Expresses General Satisfaction — Commends Step Toward Tariff Removal.

CALGARY, May 12.—(Canadian Press.)— General satisfaction with the budget as brought down by Hon. W. S. Fielding yesterday, was expressed by H. W. Wood, President United Farmers of Alberta, in an interview here last night.

"It looks pretty good on the face of it, although I have not studied it carefully," he said. "I don't see anything the matter with it and, speaking generaly, I am satisfied with the budget. It appears reasonable.

"I am pleased to note the first step toward reciprocity with the United States which was mentioned in his speech. Removal of the tariff would be the greatest thing that ever happened to Canada, in my opinion ,and I wish heartily to commend Mr. Fielding for this step that has been taken."

JUBILEE MARSH BOUGHT FOR A GAME PRESERVE

MEANS EXCLUSION

Have men, Indians and whites, the right to fish and trap wherever they can paddle a canoe?

This question directly affecting many of the residents of the Rice Lake environs is involved in the reported purchase of the marsh at the mouth of the Otonabee River by a private company, who are said to have put up trespass signs with the intention of retaining the property for their own exclusive use.

Mr. Fred Harris, of Gore's Landing, is said to be the most prominent figure in the deal, which from several accounts came into effect this spring, with the result that traps set by men regarded as trespassers are said to have been sprung.

It is understood that the purchase of this marsh, which lies east of old Jubilee Point and within the two channels into which the river divides as it empties into the lake, was made from Johnston Paudash, that the buyers purpose forming a company whose shares are now being offered at $50.00.

The plans are to establish a game preserve within those three hundred acres of marsh. It is said some Americans are financially interested in the project, which, it is contended, is thereby vitiated on the ground that foreigners are forbidden the right of acquiring ownership in connection with trapping lands.

According to the story related to The Examiner, there was considerable resentment around the lake a short time ago, and Provincial Constable Boyd was sent down to keep peace, advising that if the trappers had any claims they should press them in the civil Courts, and not attempt to take the law into their own hands.

It is not very clear in the recital of the progress of the affair how the deal was put through or who originally owned the marsh, but there is no doubt of the agitation which in some instances has engendered a bitterness that has broken off old friendships.

The claim is made by the Indians and others that an old agreement gave them the right to trap and hunt and fish wherever they could paddle a canoe. A phase of this question is believed to have been disposed of in a trial at Cobourg several years ago in regard to riparian rights along the Otonabee River and Rice Lake. Farmers whose lands along the water front took on a new value because of these marshes, decided that they would prevent trappers from entering these marshes as they had always done before, and the recollection is that the judgment of the Court sanctioned the exclusion of others. Trappers maintain that the farmers along the lake and river were fully compensated for their property that was submerged as a result of the raising of the water for power and navigation purposes, that therefore this inundated land belongs to the Government by reason of such compensation, and consequently that the public has a right to trap there.

Some farmers who are said to have been amply paid for water damages reply that this compensation barely covered the loss to their trees and timber along the shore, a statement that is denied by trappers who have tried to follow the argument in its course during recent years.

Trappers Apprehensive.

The claims of the trappers have not been settled definitely to their satisfaction, they say. If private ownership of marshes that have been open to the people commonly from time immemorial is now permitted the trappers say that they will soon find themselves shut out of all the marshes. The alternative is individual ownership of trapping preserves, some of which would be necessarily small in proportion to the buying power of the individual, while others, such as the Jubilee Point marsh, would be comparatively extensive.

Whether or not any legal action will be taken or not was known to will be taken was not known to The Examiner's informants, but they stated that there was considerable dissatisfaction, doubt, and speculation that left many of the trappers quite anxious about their rights and position.

EXCISE REDUCTIONS HAVE SAVED GRAPE GROWERS

Without Such Relief Treaty With France Would Have Meant Extinction for Ontario Wine Making Industry

HAMILTON, May 12.—(Canadian Press.)—That excise reductions in domestic wines announced in yesterday's budget have practically saved the grape growers and wine makers from extinction, is the opinion of Senator E. D. Smith, prominent fruit shipper of Winona, and T. J. Mahony, of the Niagara Grape Growers' Association and the Niagara Growers 'Limited. Without such relief, Mr. Mahony said, the putting into effect of the new treaty between Canada and France would have created a very serious situation for growers and wine manufacturers.

Under the new treaty light wines from France will be admitted at an ad valorem duty of fifteen cents a gallon, he said, and the reduction of excise tax on non-sparkling domestic wines from 30 cents to 7 1-2 cents placed the home growers and manufacturers in a better position for competition with the imported wines.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH TO OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Presbyterianism in Peterborough Has Reached its Ninetieth Milestone—Origin Dates Back to Beginning of Civilization Here

Presbyterianism as represented in Peterborough in the congregations of St. Paul's and St. Andrew's Churches has reached its ninetieth milestone. St. Andrew's church held th anniversary of the founding of Presbyterianism in the city last Sunday and St. Paul's will celebrate the same event to-morrow.

According to the historical records of this locality, the origin of Presbyterianism in Peterborough goes back to the very beginning of the entry of civilization in this part of the country.

A few Presbyterians found their way to the county of Peterborough and to the vicinity of what is now the city, as far back as 1818 landing about the point where the C.P.R. bridge now spans the Otonabee. Log houses were built, and in 1821 a small mill was erected on the spot where the Peterborough Canoe Company now has a factory, but no attempt was made to supply the spiritual needs of the growing Presbyterian community until 1833, when Rev. John Morrice Roger, a minister of the Church of Scotland and a native of Aberdeen, came to Peterborough and gathered a small congregation here and on the boundary of Cavan, near Springville.

He ministered to the families and individuals of the Presbyteran faith for over a year before a Kirk Session was appointed, which took place on November 2, 1834. It was not until February 1835 that the first Communion service was held, and it follows from this that the anniversary services taking place to-morrow, while they commemorate the coming to Peterborough of the first Presbyterian minister, do not commemorate the formal organization of the Church, which took place almost two years later.

Rev. Mr. Rogers ministered to the congregation for forty years, and there are some in the congregation to-day who sat under his ministry and have a distinct recollection of his style as a preacher and think of him with esteem. His memory is revered in the congregation to this day.

Old Time Services

The Senior elder of the church, Sheriff Hall, who has reached the fine old age of eighty-five and is still an active worker in the Church, seldom being absent from both services on the Lord's Day, wrote a historical sketch a number of years ago in which he describes the pews and the building and the preacher. The following is a quotaton: "The old pews, with their high straight backs and uncushioned seats, with their doors securely latched, were both ugly and uncomfortable. It would tax our patience now to sit in them for the hour of the sermon, for our sturdy forefathers would not be content with a paltry twenty or thirty minute discourse such as the feeble offspring sometimes think altogether too long.

One remembers these old sermons divided carefully into their several heads, with, at the close, the practical application, when the Minister solemnly closed the Book and, bending over the pulpit in his loving fatherly way seemed to pat us on the head and say: "My dear children, you have heard the truth; now go home and carry it out in your daily life and behaviour." The service like the building, was without much ornament, but it took more than a sunshower to keep us away on Sunday. Many of the members had long distances to come, but their places were seldom vacant."

Until 1836 the congregtaion worshipped in a small building on the north part of lot 7, north of King street, but in that year a substantial stone church was erected on the lot on which St. Andrew's church now stands. St. Paul's worshipped here until 1858. Following the disruption of the church in Scotland in 1843 a number of ministers and elders decided to organize a Canadian church under the name of the "Presbyterian Church in Canada." Having to vacate the building on the demand of the Synod of the Church of Scotland, the minister, his session, the board of managers and the whole congregation with the exception of six individuals came out, and for a time worshipped in the Methodist church school house. In the following year, 1859, a new church was built on the present site at a cost of about $20,000.

Since that time the work of St. Paul's has progressed, first under the ministry of Mr. Roger who continued to serve the congregation until 1875, then under Rev. E. F. Torrance, D.D., whose ministry extended over a period of thirty-one years until his resignation in 1907, and latterly under the present pastor, Rev. Robert Pogue, who has served the congregtaion with splendid success for fifteen years.

REV. R. POGUE

Strong Congregation.

St. Paul's is now known as one of the strongest congregations in the province outside the larger cities. The number of the families attached to the church has not greatly increased since the close of Dr. Torrance's pastorate, but a considerable increase is seen in the communicant membership. When present pastor entered on his charge there was a communicant membership of 780. At the close of last year it had grown to 1073 and at the recetn March communion 59 new members were received, making a total membership at present of 1,132.

Great advance has been made in the givings of the people to benevolences, missions, and current revenue. In the year 1905 the total for Missions was $1,804. In 1922 it was $7,101.

The grnad total for all congregational purposes in 1905 was $13,782. Last year it was $23,453; and two years ago the sum of $31,000 was subscribed for the Forward Movement.

Mission work in the south end of the town was early taken up by St. Paul's and in 1907 the Mission, now Knox church, was made a separate charge, St. Paul's church presenting the lot and building to the new congregation.

Only Three Pastors.

It speaks well for the congregation and the men who have served it that there have only been three ministers in St. Paul's in a period of ninety years. The present pastor could complete the century mark of the church's existence without having ministered for nearily so long a period as either of his predecessors. This seems to be a remarkable record.

The present pastor, who was born in Ireland and came to St. Paul's from a Philadelphia church, has grown in esteem both in the congregation and the life of the city during the fifteen years he has been a minister of St. Paul's. He is admired for his genial disposition, for his ability as a preacher and his faithful work as pastor. That he is a student of theology is reflected in the doctrinal and evangelical character of his discourses.

The special preacher at the anniversary services to-morrow will be Rev. Wesley Megaw, of Ottawa, a talented young Irishman, with great popular gifts.

SAY MRS. HANNA WELL USED BY HOUSE OF DAVID

Daughter Asserts There's No Reason to Suspect Mother's Death Due to Foul Play.

LIKED THE LIFE

SARNIA, Ont., May 12 (Special to The Examiner). — If an investigation into the death of Mrs. Harriet Hanna, 69 years old, widow, of this city, who died while an inmate of the House of David, is held, such a move will be made only by legal authorities in Benton Harbor, Mich., the home of the cult, and not by the relatives in this city.

This was made public to The Examiner to-day by Mrs. Christopher Hanna, daughter of the late Harriet Hanna.

"We have every reason to believe that my mother died of pneumonia while at the House of David, and from no other cause," she said.

Mrs. Hanna expressed indignation over the publicity which had been given the death of her mother, which occurred in January, 1909.

Denounced Reports.

Reports published in Toronto and elsewhere intimating that she suspected foul play in the death of her mother were emphatically denounced. She related in detail the circumstances leading to the departure of her mother for the House of David after she had been interested in the teachings of the religious cult here for many years, and the unsuccessful efforts made by the family to have her mother return home.

"My mother, whose husband was an uncle of the late W. J. Hanna, president of the Imperial Oil Co., and one-time Provincial Secretary of Ontario and not a sister-in-law, as has been reported, spent several years as a member of the sect, and was well treated so far as we were able to learn. On my only visit to Benjamin's home, we were treated courteously and kindly, and shown every consideration.

"Some time previous to her death, a sister visited her at Benton Harbor, and found her suffering from pneumonia. She died a short time afterwards, which makes us emphatically believe that her death is in no way connected with the irregularities which are being reported from there at this time," said Mrs. Hanna.

Was Easily Led.

That her mother was of strong religious tendencies and was easily led to believe in the teachings of the cult, that she had "an easy time of it" at Benjamin's colony, and that her death at an advanced age was due to natural causes, is the belief of her daughter and other Sarnia relatives.

Mrs. Hanna categorically denies that her mother had been "ured" to the colony on the southern shore of Lake Michigan, saying that she had liked the life there because she was well cared for in her old age. She said she had neither visited her mother's grave at the colony nor had she seen Benjamin Purnell, the bewhiskered leader as she was reported to have done.

The officials of the cult assisted her in arranging to remove the body to this city, where it is now buried.

"That a burial certificate had been altered was news to me," said Mrs. Hanna.

After the authoritles recently started an investigation of deaths in the colony, said Mrs. Hanna, someone showed me a picture of the certificate.

"Whether Benjamin and his clique are all they say, I do not know But so far as my mother's life and death there are concerned, there is no mystery, and we relatives are satisfied that she died naturally," concluded Mrs Hanna.

HERE TOMORROW

REV. WESLEY MEGAW, B.A., Of Stewarton Presbyterian Church, Ottawa, who will preach anniversary services in St. Paul's Presbyterian church to-morrow.

CASKET DRAPED WITH RED FLAG

Swiss Communists Organize Demonstration Over Vorowsky's Assassination.

LAUSANNE, May 12. — (United Press).—Aroused at the murder of M. Vorovsky, Russian representative at the Near East Peace Conference, Communists throughout Switzerland are organizing demonstrations. Reports have reached Government officials that inflammatory proclamations are to be issued, and extra precautions are being taken to thwart disorders.

The body of Vorovsky, shot with two comrades as he sat at a table in a dining-hall of the St. Regis Hotel, will be shipped to Moscow. His widow, Madame Vorovsky, is coming to Lausana, from Rome to accompany the casket back to Moscow.

The casket is draped in a Red flag. Official condolences were ordered presented to the murdered delegate's family by the Federal Council.

MORE PRAISE FOR LOCAL MUSICIANS

Secretary Canadian Bureau of Music Pays Respects to Peterborough Artists.

Mr. J. S. Atkinson of Toronto, Secretary of the Canadian Bureau of Music, and also Secretary of the recent musical festival, writing to Mr. J. M. Greene refers incidentally to the brilliant achievements of Peterborough's musicians, who were among the outstanding figures of the competition:

"I was so glad to hear of the reception given Miss Logan and Miss Masson. They are two wonderful girls and Peterborough has every right to be proud of them, indeed. Further, they are just as sweet and charming personally as they are talented.

"I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate Peterborough and yourself on the excellent showing of the Peterborough competitors. Among those winning from there were the Trinity school orchestra, who won the shield in their class, and Miss Agnes Logan, who won five first prizes and made such a splendid performance that one of the members of the executive said it would be a shame to give her a silver medal as a first prize, and immediately donated a gold medal himself. You have evidently a very excellent man in Mr. Gliddon, and a good Conservatory. Mr. Gliddon and the orchestra did splendidly, and, in fact, Peterborough has made quite a big mark for itself at this festival."

CHEERFUL AIR AT WEEK-END LOCAL MARKET

Plenty of Potatoes and Porkers and Fair Quantity of General Farm Produce.

EGGS 28c. DOZEN

Although the drizzle of this morning made a rather bleak outlook for a good farmers' market, there was a fairly cheerful air about the lower and upper sections of the week end sale of farm produce. On the open market, seekers for maple syrup looked in vain. There was none on hand. But there were plenty of potatoes and of pigs, the two things that are usually associated in stories of Irish peasant life. The potatoes were Irish cobblers and Delawares the cooking variety at 81 per bag, or 3 bags for $2.90, seed potatoes at 60 and 70 cents a bag. The little pigs, in crates on nearly every cart, were of Berkshire strain, dark-complexioned creatures at $14 a pair; the scrubbed-looking Yorkshires and the tan Tans worths at $12 and $13.

Admiring Circle

One purveyor of eggs on the open market had an admiring circle, commenting on the dazzling appearance of his basketful of pure white eggs, at 28c per dozen, products of the white Leghorn.

Ben Davis apples were selling at 30 cents a peck, or $3.50 a barrel, Spys were 60 cents a peck, and tight-skinned, red apples which the dealers persist in alluding to as something that sounds like Gain-O, although the writer has never encountered the name in print, nor has anyone else, from all accounts, were 30 cents a peck also. Carrots were 20 cents a peck, and parsnips 40. Dealers in raspberry canes were selling them at 2 and 5 cents apiece, and strawberry plants were 25 cents a bunch, or 70 cents a hundred.

Green Plants

There were green plants on the open market; Swee, William, and Canterbury Bells and Feverfew at 3 for 25 cents, and dahlia roots at the same price. Inside, below the stairs, was a table covered with the small fresh things and old-fashioned plants in pots; shy English primroses, the dusty miller with his faint fragrance and the spicy tang of the crushed leaves of the 'old man,' all for a quarter apiece.

People hurried from the market, accompanied by mysterious boxes and bags that emitted faint chirps, and upstairs was a box of the tiny chicks that always attract such a large and admiring audience, vieing this morning in favor with the warm stove, over which the usual crowd of men rubbed hands and exchanged gossip.

There were plenty of eggs on the market this morning and quantities of butter, the eggs selling at 27 and 28 cents a dozen, butter at 35 and 37 cents a pound. Fowl was 25 cents a pound.

A sale of home-made cooking was in progress and another Sunday school class were dispensing carnation blooms at 20 cents apiece, and lovely-hued, fragrant bunches of sweet peas at 25 cents per bunch.

THE FEDERAL BUDGET FOR THE YEAR WAS NOT BALANCED BY FIELDING

TRAGEDY WAS A STIMULANT AT LAUSANNE

The Death of Vorovsky a Warning That Conference Is Dragging Out Too Long and Delaying a Peace Settlement.

REPRISALS FEARED.

LAUSANNE, May 12—(Canadian Press).—The Vorovsky tragedy has acted as a warning to the delegates to the Near East Conference that the Conference is dragging out too long and that the delay is paving the way for new complications, instead of tending towards peace.

The announced coming to Lausanne of M. Alexanderis, the Greek Minister of Foreign Affairs, in a day or two, to serve notice on the Conference that it must get along with its work or Greece will make a separate peace with Turkey, has acted as a stimulant, and the word has gone forth that the experts' committees must be ready to report early next week. Everybody seems nervous and desirious that the conference finish its work before a political cat astrophe follows last night's crime.

The Swiss Federal Council yesterday issued a communique expressing indignation over the attack on the Russians, and regretting especially that it occurred at the seat of a peace conference. The Council has decided to express its sympathy to the families of the victims of last night's shooting, but it voted not to change its attitude towards Soviet Russia and to continue to ignore officially the existence of the Soviet Government.

Fears are expressed here over the safety of a delegation of Swiss watchmakers in Moscow to reopen the watch trade with Russia. Members of the Soviet group here are said to have threatened reprisals against the Swiss.

The Police Department asserts that it never received any complaints from the Russians that a plot had been formed against M. Vorovsky, who was shot and killed in the Hotel Cecil dining room by Maurice Alexander Conradi. It was recalled by the Department yesterday that the Russians came incognito to the first conference and that even Georges Tchitcherin, the Bolshevik Minister of Foreign Affairs, arrived unannounced.

Conradi was examined by the authorities yesterday. He was educated in the Protestant schools of Petrograd, where his father ran a chocolate factory. He fought in the Russian Army and was decorated with the Cross of St. George. Subsequently he fought under Lieutenant-General Korniloff against the Soviet forces and with General Baron Wrangel, the Anti-Bolshevik leader Conradi settled in Zurich in 1921.

RUSSIA NERVOUS OVER SITUATION

Soviets Fear An International Combine Against Them — Many Rumors Afloat.

MOSCOW, May 12.—(Canadian Press). — The assassination of M. Vorovsky, the Soviet representative at Lausanne, coming on top of the British note and the feeling in Russia that Marshal Foch's visit to Poland might mean another international combine against the Soviet regime created a profound impression in Russian official circles.

The public was notified of the death of Vorovsky and the wounding of his colleagues by newspaper extras, which are rarely issued in Moscow.

There were all kinds of rumors last night, but nothing could be ascertained in official circles as to what steps the Government is considering.

Russia's reply to the British ultimatum, it was learned yesterday probably will be delayed until after Foreign Minister Tcvhitcherin's address before the Moscow Soviet which has been summoned in special session for Saturday afternoon.

A number of workmen's meetings were held in factories yesterday as demonstration against the British note. The sentiment as expressed at the meetings is that "England is trying on a war which she does not want."

Strong Denunciation Soviet Religious War.

PARIS, May 12. — (Canadian Press)— Representatives of every religion known in France have joined in an appeal to the public opinion of the world against "persecution of religion in Russia and arrests and execution of religious authorities."

The Soviet government, says the document, "is try to uproot religion from the souls of the people as useless and dangerous, and is employing every means to arrive at that end, including confiscation of property, profanation of churches and synagogues, parodies on religious ceremonies, official atheistic schools, and prison, torture and death."

STOCKS AND BONDS

At the present time there is a great boom in the mining industry. I have had many years experience in practical mining, both in Cobalt and Porcupine, and have a wide connection there. I am therefore in a position to get early and reliable information in both camps. I have made a profit for every one of my clients up to date, and shall be pleased to advise any one interested. There will be a strong market this summer and now is the time to get in.

MANY IMPORTANT CHANGES ANNOUNCED BY W. S. FIELDING IN HIS SEVENTEENTH BUDGET PRESENTED IN FEDERAL HOUSE YESTERDAY

Veteran Minister of Finance Received With Acclaim as He Rose to Present His Report—Deficit For the Year Announced — No New Taxes Added But Many Existing Ones Are Lowered — Yearly Improvements Noted—Revenues This Year Will Not Equal Those of Last—Excise Duty on Cigarettes Reduced to the Former Rate—Maximum Tax on Cheques Reduced From $2 to $1 Each—Changes Made in the Sales Tax—No Changes Made in the Postal Rate—Bounties For Copper and Hemp — Customs and Excise Changes Come Into Force May 19.

OTTAWA, May 12 (Canadian Press). — Galleries were packed when the Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, rose in the House yesterday afternoon to present his seventeenth Budget.

On entering the Chamber, Mr. Fielding was welcomed by an outburst of applause from all parties.

It was 3.25 when the Finance Minister moved that the House go into Committee of ways and means.

Mr. Fielding commenced with a comparison of the financial accounts for the years since the present Government had taken office. The last accounts which were complete were those for the year ending 31st March, 1922.

The present Government had then been in power only a few months.

The estimates for that year had been prepared by the previous Government. The revenues were gathered under the Conservative proposal. Therefore that might be considered a Conservative year.

Public Debt Increased.

The revenue that year had totalled $361,952,386.99. The surplus if only ordinary expenditures were considered was $34,391,696.36. There had, however, been capital expenditures and demobilisation expenses. There had also been advances to railways amounting to $97,950,645.36. This made a deficit for the year amounting to $81,380,864.77. The net result had been an addition of $81,256,618.04 to the public debt.

Coming to the year 1922-23, Mr. Fielding said ordinary revenue had amounted to $393,619,000, while expenditures amounted to $331,780,000, leaving a surplus of $61,839,000.

Taking everything into consideration for the year, the net result was shown to be an addition to the public debt of $49,293,086.

The addition of nearly $50,000,000 to the public debt last year had not, of course, caused much satisfaction.

War Still a Factor.

The war had inevitably led to big increases, and now the country was passing through a period of peace. There were many people, said the Minister, who felt that it was about time the Budget should be balanced. This, continued Mr. Fielding, would be very agreeable to him if it were possible. The temptation to pile on the taxes and make up the difference. However, there was another side to the account, Between the Dominion and the Province and the municipality the people of Canada were already pretty heavily taxed. Mr. Fielding said he was accordingly very reluctant to add to this burden by introducing any more taxes.

He wanted the House and country, he said, to bear patiently for a year or two the present conditions, and expressed the view that year by year the outlook would be better.

To illustrate, Mr. Fielding gave the figures in millions of dollars of the addition to the public debt from 1914 to date. These had risen from 21 millions in 1914, 115 millions in 1915, to the high point of 674 millions in 1920. In 1921 the addition to the public debt was 92 millions, in 1922 it was 81 millions, and in 1923, 49 millions. These figures, Mr. Fielding said, were very encouraging as showing a continued decrease. He howed that it would not be necessary to add very much to the debt in the forthcoming years.

Railroad Situation.

Then, continued Mr Fielding, it is very probable that the railroad situation will show an improvement with consolidation and the new management, he thought it was reasonable to expect better statements each year.

With regard to the year 1923-24, Mr. Fielding said it was expected that the income from customs would show an increase of $5,600,000 over the previous year; an increase in the Post Office Department receipts of $250,000; Dominion lands, $200,000; war tax and inland revenue, $7,180,000; other war tax revenue, $85,000.

On the whole, he was not expecting, he said, that revenues this year would come up to those of last year, anticipated, making the total revenue A decrease of some $21,000,000 was on the present basis of taxation as $372,517,800.

Change in Sales Tax.

There had been a great deal of dissatisfaction with the form in which the sales tax had been imposed in the past. Representation had been made to the Government in this regard, and it was now proposed to impose this tax at the source instead of dividing it up as heretofore. The tax would, in future, be 6 per cent. on the duty paid value of goods or on the manufactured cost of home-made goods. It was proposed to add to the list of exemptions from the sales tax, raw furs, wool, tiles, manuscripts, and newsprint.

The receipt tax would be continued, said Mr. Fielding. This was a sound tax, and no British Chancellor of the Exchequer would think of repealing it.

Cheque Tax Lowered.

The cheque tax last year had a maximum of $2.00, said the Finance Minister. It had been represented to the Government that this tax resulted in a number of persons living near the border doing their business with American banks. It had not been considered advisable to do away with the tax completely, but the maximum hereafter would be $1.00 instead of $2.00. This provision would apply also to notes and bills of exchange.

Under the French Treaty the tax on wines from France had been decreased from 30 per cent. to 7½ per cent. In view of this it had been decided to decrease the excise duty on Canadian sparkling wines from $3.00 to $1.50 a gallon. As the French Treaty did not go into effect at once, the decrease in the excise tax would not go into force until the Treaty became operative. For the present there would be no change in the income tax. If it was decided to make any change in this tax, it would be embodied in another Bill later.

Tobacco and Cigarettes.

The Finance Minister said that last year there had been an increase in the duties on tobacco and cigarettes. The figures for the year seemed to show that there had been a falling-off in the consumption of cigarettes. Personally, he doubted whether there had really been a decrease in consumption. His own opinion was that there had been an appreciable increase in the number of cigarettes smuggled into Canada. However, it was proposed to strike off $1.50 from the tax and revert to the old rate. It was also proposed to change the form of the tax on soft drinks by placing a tax of 1 cent per pound on carbonic acid gas.

Many Reductions.

Nearly every change proposed was a reduction. There was an exception in the case of raisins and dried currants, on which it was proposed to increase the duty and make it 3 cents a pound under both the intermediate and general tariff, while these commodities would entre free under the British preference. This action was taken in view of the negotiations with Australia during recess. At that time, while no agreement was concluded the Government was advised that Australia was very much interested in the export of raisins and currants, and if the Canadian tariff on these were raised it would be an inducement to Australia to conclude negotiations. If Australia should agree to an arrangement which would bring her under the British preference, currants and raisins from that country would enter free.

Petroleum Trouble.

During the past year the Customs Department had had considerable trouble regarding petroleum importations at the Pacific Coast. Petroleum which had undergone some stages of manufacture could not come in as crude petroleum. Variations were being made to take care of this.

Machinery of a class not made in Canada, but required for the manufacture of commodities not already being manufactured here it was felt should be given some attractive treatment.

This was the case in which machinery for the manufacture of fish meal and other articles from fish and fish waste was admitted free.

Well drilling machinery and requisites for the oil industry were admitted free under a wider classification than before.

The list of articles under the heading of printing machinery was also broadened out.

There was a likelihood of the artificial silk industry becoming important to Canada, and to encourage this a change was made in the classification, all manufactures being made dutiable at the same rate of manufactures in silk.

British Preference.

It had been determined to adhere to and extend the British preference, said Mr. Fielding, amid Liberal applause. It was proposed that whatever duty now obtained under the British preference a discount of 10 per cent. should be allowed. This would be a 10 per cent. reduction fro mthe tariff rate on each specified article.

There were two qualifications attached to this, one that it should not apply on any article which was now dutiable at less than 15 per cent., and the other that it should only apply when goods were brought direct to Canadian ports. Canada with her winter and summer port facilities had the means of handling all such shipments, and this, it was felt, would encourage shipment to Canadian ports.

There were three things outstanding, Mr. Fielding said. These were: A comprehensive reduction of duties; emphasis of the British prefrence, and encouragement of the use of Canadian ports. He hoped that these would prove satisfactory to all sections of the House.

Sugar Prices.

The question of sugar prices was vital to everyone in Canada at present.

A reduction of the taxation burden would assist all in the Dominion. The war time advances in price had been more or less looked upon as inevitable but at the present time advances were taking place place almost as sharply as during the war. One thing the consumer knew was that he was now paying war time prices for sugar under peace conditions. There had been boycotts organized in some parts of the United States.

It was now proposed to reduce the duty on refined sugar by ½ cent per pound and the duty on raw sugar by about 40c per hundred. This Mr. Fielding estimated would mean a relief of $25,000,000 to the consumers in a year. Another thing was that the dumping duty would not apply on sugar from Great Britain.

Bounties Granted.

The government had been asked from time to time to encourage various industries. There were difficulties in doing this by means of the tariff since the raw material manufactured was the finished product of another. An alternative method lay in the bounty system. For the encouragement of the copper industry in Canada it was proposed to extend a bounty to manufacturers at the rate of 1½ cents per pound on bars and rods manufactured in Canada from Canadian copper and for use in Canada. This bounty would be continued for five years on a diminishing scale until it was wiped out. The limit which could be earned under it would be $200,000. This assistance, it was felt, would help the Canadian manufacturers to compete with outsiders.

A similar bounty was proposed for the encouragement of the Canadian hemp industry. This bounty would be ½ cent per pound for five years, but as the manufacture of binder twine from Canadian hemp would take much longer to get under way the bounty would not become effective until July 1, 1925, and would continue for five years from that date. The limit in this case would also be $200,000.

Mr. Fielding announced the discontinuance of the bounties on the production of linen thread and cordage; these, he said, were already a dead letter.

There was also a change to be made in the system of bounty granted on crude petroleum. Last year this bounty had cost the country $93,336, said Mr. Fielding. Oil, he continued, had now been found in western Canada, and it was felt that the country was approaching an era of very large production. A bounty on all oil produced in Canada would mean a very heavy burden. It had accordingly been decided that those who were already receiving the bounty should continue to receive it for one year. Next year the bounty would be cut in half, after which it was proposed that the bounty should cease altogether.

Export of Wood.

Forest conservation had engaged the attention of the House a great deal. Where a country had a lavish supply of timber, it was expected that people would be apt to become careless of it. And those who viewed the situation with alarm had asked the government to go so far as to prohibit the export of wood. Where the provinces controlled the land, they could take their own measures. There were however a number of private interests who owned large timber tracts and such interests felt that they were fully entitled to market their product to the best advantage anywhere in the world. It had therefore been decided to name suitable persons to enquire fully into this matter during the coming recess, in order that the government might come to a well advised conclusion as to the necessary steps to be taken.

Moderate Tariff

Mr. Fielding next reefrred to the tariff and said that it was most essential that the House should give some assurance to the country along the lines of tariff stability. The present Canadian tariff, he said, was moderate. It was not low enough to meet the view of the Progressive members, neither was it high enough for the high protectionists opposite. It must be remembered, said the Minister, that the government of a country was only possible through compromise on the part of its different sections If the government went no further in the way of reductions at an early date, the tariff would still be one which it could ask the country to accept, he said The minister repeated that he would like to convey the impression to the manufacturers and the business men of this country that they were to enjoy a reasonable opportunity of carrying on their business without fear of disturbances.

QUEBEC A HELP TO ENFORCING OF PROHIBITION

REFUSES TO SELL.

MONTREAL, May 12.— (Canadian Press.)—Replying to a charge of Chairman Hales of the Ontario License Board that responsibility for the near failure of the Ontario Temperance Act lies at the doors of the province of Quebec, Hon. G. A. Simard, chairman of the Quebec Liquor Commission, in a statement issued here last night, declares that since its inception the Quebec Liquor Commission have always refused to quote on, or sell wine or liquor in any province of the Dominion or any part of the United States, unless authorized to do so by the proper authorities.

The statement continues:

"As a matter of fact our attitude on this point has been commended by officials of the United States Government, who felt that we were doing more than we were expected to do, to help them in the enforcement of the Volstead Act. I doubt if any such testimonial has been directed to Mr. Hales as it is a matter of public knowledge that a very active bootleg trade is carried on over the Ontario-American boundary.

"It is not only uncharitable but absolutely unfair to insinuate without proof that we are interfering with the liquor laws of our neighbors.

"One quarter of the liquor and wine sold in the province of Quebec is purchased from distillers and wine producers in Ontario. If part of these beverages is brought back to its source by Ontario citizens who feel that they are unduly deprived of their liberty, it is up to the Ontario authorities to prevent this; we have nothing to do with it, as long as our own laws are respected.

"As to the attitude which Mr. Hales assumes towards the end of his speech to the Social Service Council of Ontario on May 9, no comment seems necessary, as, quite unwittingly I am sure, he spoke on a subject beyond his competence.

"The mind of our Ontario friend will unlearn with difficulty what has long been impressed on it, which is that when something goes wrong in good old Ontario, Quebec, the wicked, is to blame."

The Labor members included Arthur Henderson, Vernon Hartshorn and Will Thorne. Robert Clynes with his wife and daughter, and James Henry Thomas and his wife, were among the five hundred guests at the reception.

HON. WALTER ROLLO IS CHOICE HAMILTON WEST

HAMILTON, May 12.— (Canadian Press.)— Failing in his arguments to convince the members of the Independent Labor Party last night that a Farmer-Labor alliance was not in the interests of the working classes and that Labor should no longer continue to fight under the coalition standard, George Halerow former member of the Legislature, declined to allow his name to go forward for nomination in the east riding of Hamilton. Hon. Walter Rollo was the choice for the west riding.

SATURDAY, MAY 12TH 1923.

MOTHER'S DAY.

There are people who sneer at the idea of Mother's Day as a mere piece of commercial propaganda, based on the business advantages it offers to florists and confectioners and other dealers.

But the sentiment that causes the second Sunday in May to be set apart as a day of honouring the motherhood of the country rises triumphant above commercialism.

Its observance is a universal paying of homage to the nobility of womanhood, and it is no wonder, under the circumstances, that the appeal of such an anniversary is irresistible.

The Examiner thoroughly agrees with the Montreal Star in the opinion that it is not too much that for one day in the whole year the thoughts of mankind should turn towards that loving personality who taught the lisping tongue to speak and built so many castles in the air for those who are today carrying the burdens of life for themselves.

Let, then, the observance of Mother's Day in Peterborough be as general as possible.

A letter home, a little gift, and the flower in the buttonhole—a white flower for a deceased mother, a coloured one for a living mother—as the outward and visible sign that we have not forgotten.

It is a pretty idea and well worthy of general adoption tomorrow.

ALBERTA COAL.

Whether or not Alberta coal can fully take the place of anthracite so far as heating purposes are concerned must, so far as we can judge, be left to the final reports concerning the experiments being carried on to determine this point, but so far as these have gone it would appear to be very probable that the reports will be favorable, remarks the Kingston Standard. The question of using the coal in Ontario therefore narrows itself down to the cost of bringing it here.

Sir Henry Thornton has made a fair and business-like statement as to what the Canadian National Railways are prepared to do in the way of reducing freight rates. He is perfectly right in saying that in view of the financial condition of these lines they cannot be expected to haul the coal for less than the cost of doing so, and he has shown how very far he has gone in endeavoring to attain a rate which would help in the matter. He has made one remark which deserves notice that "in fixing a rate we have done something anyhow, and we have not yet seen anybody else making any reduction to help the matter along."

What he means by that is his saying that he is not responsible for the quality of the coal, the cost of mining it, or the expenses of distribution. That is, it is up to those concerned in these matters to make equal sacrifices to those made by the C.N.R.

MR. FORKE'S PLEA.

With Mr. Robert Forke's warning that "we cannot go our own way and pay no attention to the people to the south of us," the Examiner is constrained to agree.

The Progressive leader in pleading for amicable trade relations between Canada and the United States sounds a note that will strike a responsive chord in many sections of Canada.

How such relations are to be developed, of course, Mr. Forke does not discuss, but there can be no quarrel with his general statement that to a considerable extent the prosperity of Canada is bound up with that of the United States.

With a market of one hundred and ten million people at our border, there does not seem any logical reason why Canadians should not be interested in a possible utilization of such a market for the benefit of Canadian producers.

There should not be anything political about the consideration of such a question. It should rather be the concern of every Canadian interested in the development of the natural resources of his country, and should be discussed as an economic question affecting everybody and therefore interesting everybody.

The attitude of the present administration in the United States, of course, blocks the way for the present, but sooner or later Canada will have to deal with the matter of wider trade relations with the republic.

Mr. Forke's plea will at least have the effect of showing that the need of considering this question is recognized by public men in Canada.

FRANK ADVICE.

The address of Mr. R. F. Downey, Principal of the Central School, to the Home and School Association the other night is the kind of frank talk that is very sadly needed in Peterborough, as well as generally in Canadian cities.

"The discipline at home is relaxed. The grip is off. Why not put it on, you parents?" was the keynote of the speaker's remarks.

Mr. Downey speaks from the knowledge and experience gained from daily association with children, and he is right.

The grip at home is off.

Children nowadays are, many of them, without manners or courtesy. Far too many are disobedient.

The fault lies in the home training, or rather in the lack of it.

The little ones are not receiving the discipline in their early years that they need

The tragedy at Kitchener where a six months old baby, left alone in the house while its parents went fishing, was suffocated is, of course, an extreme case of neglect, but it contains a warning to parents generally.

Far too many children are being left to their own resources, given too much liberty, allowed to have too much of their own way.

The teacher at school does what he can to correct the effect of the neglect at home, but he is obviously handicapped.

Much as the school can do it cannot supply the training that should be a feature of the family life.

Mr. Downey's warning is timely and of great importance.

"KICKING" NOT ENOUGH.

The fact that the attendance at the meeting of the Tenants' and Owners' Association on Thursday was not large enough to warrant going ahead with the election of officers and the transaction of business should give the officers of that body some food for reflection.

When the association was launched the Examiner pointed out that, although there was a place for such an organization in Peterborough, the danger would be that it would attract to it every citizen with a "grouch," and that unless a constructive programme were set up the association ran the risk of degenerating into a mere "kicking society."

While not suggesting now that this prediction has been completely fulfilled, the Examiner cannot help but feel that there is a significance about the fact that a meeting that promised several features of interest could not attract a larger attendance.

The association to live—and it would be in the public weal to have it live—must show itself as capable of being something more than a clearing-house for complaints and criticism.

A certain amount of "grousing" acts as a safety-valve, but a constant tirade unaccompanied by any suggestion of constructiveness has a wearying effect and a tendency to drive away from such an organization citizens whose advice and counsel would have a helpful and a steadying influence.

Peterborough needs such a body as the Tenants' and Owners' Association, but it must be constructive as well as destructive in its debates, and in its resolution, if it is to occupy the place it should have and if it is to be of the value to the community that the Examiner firmly believes that an organization of this nature should be.

If the trouble has been along the lines indicated, it is not too late to repair the fences and keep the association functioning in the public interest.

AUTOMOBILE COURTESY.

Whipping a line on rapids or casting on the rippled surface of a shady pool in search of the elusive trout or bass is great sport and it's real sports who indulge in that pastime; men who are open-minded, men who love the great outdoors.

You've seen these men and been with them the same as I have. You see a stranger across the bank, or wading the stream at the old dam. You give him a cheery greeting and shout at him, "What luck?" or "Anything doing?" and back comes the answer—an answer filled with the interpretation of good fellowship—"Some luck this morning, but it's kind of slow just now," or "Just landed a dandy around the bend. Why don't you try there?"

Or you go on a tramp along the bank of the stream, whipping, lashing, casting as you go. Fishing here for a moment, then rambling on to some other beckoning spot. You meet a fellow fisherman. Either you greet him or he greets you—it's just a question of who gets there first with the happy smile and the words—and all's well with the world.

But get this fisherman driving an automobile and what happens. Ten chances to one he thinks he's sitting in a "tank," immune to the attacks of all, yet in a position to give vent to wrathy feelings if some vehicle on the roadway does not immediately obey the squawking of his horn. Squawking describes it, for generally there is no courteousness imparted with the sound. Why doesn't he practice the courtesies he extended to the fisherman on the bank of the stream? The other fellow doesn't, why should he? That's the trouble. Why don't you be the "other fellow" once in a while, and then all the time and then your example would be emulated and soon road courtesy would mean something. As it is at present, road courtesy is just two meaningless words, except in a few isolated cases.

One instance is sufficient to demonstrate what I mean. Take the case of headlights. How many motorists care or are interested in the focusing of the lamps of their car? But how many motorists are interested in the focusing of the other fellow's lights when he meets him at night? Just the minute he's blinded by the rays of the other fellow's light he begins to holler, and holler good and loud. The other fellow most likely is doing a bit of hollering himself about "these fools who drive care with blinding headlights." Why doesn't both of them stop and think a little. If one, even, had had his lamps adjusted, that might prompt the other to do the same thing when he reached his destination. If both had had proper adjustments they would know that the other was smiling even though he could not see him.

Lamp adjustment is part of the real meaning of road courtesy. And that's not taking into consideration that focused lights are compulsory by the laws of Ontario. If the compulsory part of the law was made a little more effective it would inject a little more road courtesy into motorists even though, they were not inclined to give due consideration to the other fellow's position.

The traffic regulations should be made more effective for the "thoughtless" ones. That might spur them on to practice road courtesy in other things. The thoughtful, considerate motorist (regrettably in the minority) would welcome this as a "safety first" measure, for it would make night driving more safe, dimming headlights when meeting an approaching car would not be necessary, the danger of accidents would be greatly diminished, and in all, the motor world would be a far better place in which to live.—Kingston Whig.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

With the Winnipeg women and a special Parliamentary committee both opening war on sugar, that product is evidently in for a sweet time.

Some ball teams count altogether upon their batting to win, but followers of the King Government depend to a great extent upon Fielding.

The weatherman may be backward, but the first wheat is "up" in the Brandon district. That is something about which to be optimistic.

If it would nip a few election speeches off in the bud, the May frost would be more welcome.

Peterborough people may have some cause to complain about the weather this week, but other towns are in worse plight. At least the snow-plough did not make an appearance as it did in Parry Sound.

Now that the date of the battle has been officially announced the interest in the election campaign will be appreciably increased.

Snow, in May, causes some comment, but the chances are that a good many candidates will be snowed under in June.

Although the Labour party has decided to contest four ridings in Toronto, Labour is not expected to play a very prominent part in the coming election.

CHANGE OF LIFE LOSES TERRORS

For Women who Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Pa.—"I took your medicine through the Change of Life and it did wonders for me. I was down in bed when I started to take it and weighed 95 pounds. I had hot flashes and was so nervous and weak that everything would get black and I could not see. I would sit and cry and did not know what I was crying for. Since I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel younger than I did ten years ago, and my friends all tell me I look younger, and I owe it all to the Vegetable Compound. I do all my housework for a family of seven now. I will be glad to answer any woman who writes me in regard to my case."—Mrs. JOHN MYERS, 65 Union St., Greenville, Pa.

Many letters similar to this have been published testifying to the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They are sincere expressions from women who describe as best they can their feelings before and after taking this well-known medicine.

MEN AND HORSES

How closely related is man to the more intelligent of the animals is seen in many of the ailments to which both are prone and the remedies to which they answer.

Doctors and veterinarians are oftentimes surprised to learn of the similarity of their methods of handling the ailments of man and beast.

Sprains, burns, scalds, scratches and many other minor injuries, many everyday ailments, too in men and animals take the same course, and both answer immediately to the same treatment—Absorbine Jr.

Absorbine was first discovered by a very close student of the horse, W. F. Young, and by him, devoted to its cause. Its very exceptional benefits, however, were promptly seized upon for the human race and, in a milder form, the preparation is sold all over the continent today as Absorbine Jr. It is used for men, women and children everywhere as a positive germicide—a germ killer—and a prompt and certain healer of all hurts. It is useful not only for all the purposes served by ordinary liniments and embrocations, but as a mouth-wash and for anything else where a germicide is needed. Don't wait until you need it. MANY IMPORTANT CHANGES ETC.

Trade with U. S.

Reference to Canada's relations with the United States were next referred to by the Minister. With few exceptions, he said, it was not proposed to make reductions on foods coming from the United States.

The tariff of the United States was a high one. He believed, however, that theer was no class of the Canadian people who did not recogize the great desirability that Canada should have favorable trade relations with the United States.

Mr. Fielding said that a Minister of Canada had already proceeded to Washington and told the government of the United States that Canada desired to enter into a reciprocal treaty with that country. Still, it was just as well to say it again, and in order to make it clear he proposed to move the following resolution:

"That the customs tariff, 1907, be further amended by adding after Section 8A the following as sections 8B and 8C: 8B—The governor in council may authorize any minister of the Crown to enter into negotiations with any authorized representative of the government of the United States with a view to the making of a commercial agreement between the two countries on terms that may be deemed mutually beneficial. Any agreement so made shall be subject to the approval of the Parliament of Canada."

"8C.—If the President of the United States under authority of the United States tariff act of 1922, determines to reduce by 50 per cent. the duties imposed by such acts, on the following articles, that is to say, cattle, wheat, wheat flour, oats, barley, potatoes, onions, turnips, hay, fish, as enumerated in paragraphs 717, 718, 719 and 720, of the said tariff act of 1922, the governor in council may be order in council make such reductions of duties on similar articles imported into Canada from the United States as may be deemed reasonablt by way of compensation for such reductions on Canadian products imported into the United States."

The latter paragraphe was a direct appeal to the president of the United States notifying him that Canada was ready to meet him on fair ground if he should be willing to enter into an agreement with this country. The present law of the United States provided that president could make certain reductions in the tariff if he saw fit so to do.

Prosperious Outlook

The Minister of Finance referred to the great business activity which prevailed in the United States at the present time. It was only natural that a lot of Canada's young men should be drawn to that country owing to the opportunities which it offered. He thought, however, that they would find their way back to Canada. This country would feel a renewal of prosperity in good time, and all that was needed was faith that it would return.

There was sustained applause when Mr. Fielding taught by experience took his seat. Sir Henry Drayton, former Minister of Finance immediately rose and offered his compliments and congatulations to the minister.. It was hard to realize that Mr. Fielding had just delivered his seventeenth budget, especially since the finance minister had shown that he retained one quality peculiar to youth, the ability to learn new lessons. As an illustration of this, Sir Henry said that last year the opposition had told him (Mr. Fielding) that the tax on cigarettes was too high and would kill business and reduce revenues. "This year," said Sir Henry, "he sees the figures; he learns; he repents."

The Opposition had also warned the minister regarding the beet tax. This year he repeated and the tax was taken off. Sir Henry wished chiefly to congratulate the Minister on realizing the necessity for stability in business. In the United States it might be observed, they were not drifting. They had business stability. "You can't have business stability unless you have tariff stability," Sir Henry said

Railway Costs

Turning to the budget statement proper the former finance minister said that the kind of surplus which the finance minister had brought down was an old story. He thought that it would be a good thing if the minister would pay particular attention to the railways in his budget statement. He could not see why the railways had cost the country $92,000,000 this year unless their manager wanted to swell expenditure this year in order to make a better showgin next. The statement showed that Canada was going behind.

There had been a real addition of 49,000,000 to the national debt during the past pear and the minister had intimated that we must look for a further increase of some $50,000,000 next year, since the minister had estimated a surplus of only $14,100,000 apart from the railways. Sir Henry thought Mr. Fielding was taking too gloomy a view of things.

Estimates Wide of Mark

Last year Mr. Fielding's estimates of income from various sources had been far from the mark. More had gathered in than the minister had said he expected. Sir Henry thought the same would be the case this year.

In the speech from the throne last year, the country had been told that Canada was in an excellent condition but in his budget speech Mr. Fielding had said that "the past year had been one of exceptional business depression." Yet the collections of direct taxes during the last year had been considerably lower than during "the year of exceptional business depression."

"I admit that business throughout the country has been harrassed by one hundred and one picayune taxes which have added to the uncertainty said Sir Henry, "but I do not think it is as bad as my honorable friend makes out."

The present government, said Sir Henry had collected less in direct taxation than its predecessor which had been scolded for not getting more. The last year of Conservative government had been 32 per cent. of all revenue collected by direct taxation. The present government had collected only 24 per cent. of its total taxation by the direct method.

There were some things which Mr Fielding proposed to help, particularly the artificial silk, copper and Canadian hemp industries, said Sir Henry.

At 4:45 Sir Henry moved adjournment of the debate and the House went into committee on the combines bill.

MARSEILLE, May 12.—(Associated Press)—A melancholic reminder of the numerous campaigns against the Soviet armies of Russia has drifted into Marseille in the form of the auxiliary war fleet of General Wrangel, whose military offensive against the Red armies collapsed in the Crimea.

General Wrangel once possessed a rather imposing fleet, but last December the remnants, composed of 12 tugboats and several steamers sailed from Odessa and have just arrived here either to be sold or broken up.

The PRIDE of PALOMAR

By Peter B. Kyne

"Man, look at that horse go."

"Man, look at him come!"

Panchito had swung into the home-stretch, his white face and white front legs rising and falling with the strong, steady rhythm of the horse whose stout heart refuses to acknowledge defeat, the horse who still has something left for a supreme effort at the finish.

"There is a true race-horse," Parker cried exultantly. "I once won a ten-thousand-dollar purse with a dog that wasn't fit to appear on the same track with that Panchito."

The big chestnut thudded by below them, stretched to the limit of his endurance, passed what would have been the finish had the race been a mile and a sixtteenth, and galloped up the track with the broken bridle-rein dangling. He slowed down as he came to the other horses in the race, now jogging back to the judge's stand, and one of the cholo youths spurred alongside of him, caught the dangling rein and led him back to the judge's stand.

Kay's face was a little bit white as she smiled up at her father and Farrel. "The old darling ran way with me," she called.

Farrel was instantly at her side and had lifted her out of the saddle. She clung to him for the barest moment, trembling with fear and excitement, before turning to examine Panchito, from whom Pablo had already stripped the saddle. He was badly blown, as trembly as the girl herself, and dripping with sweat, but when Pablo slipped the headstall on him and commenced to walk him up and down to "cool him out," Don Mike's critical eye failed to observe any evil effects from the long and unaccustomed race.

John Parker came down out of the grand stand, his thumb still tightly pressing the stem of his stop-watch, which he thrust under Farrel's nose.

"Look, you star-spangled ignoramus, look," he yelled. "You own a horse that's fit to win the Melbourne Cup or the American Derby, and you don't know it. What do you want for him? Give you ten thousand for him this minute—and I am not so certain that race hasn't hurt him."

"Oh, I don't want to sell Panchito. I can make this ranch pay ten thousand dollars, but I cannot breed another Panchito on it."

"Farrel, if you refuse to sell me that horse I'm going to sit right down here and weep. Son, I don't know a soul on earth who can use twelve—yes, fifteen—thousand dollars handier than you can."

Don Mike smiled his lazy, tantalizing smile. "I might as well be broke as the way I am," he protested. "What's a paltry fifteen thousand dollars to a man who needs half a million—but Parker, my horse is not for sale at any price."

"You mean that?"

"Absolutely."

John Parker sighed. Since that distant day when he had decided that he could afford such a luxury, his greatest delight had been in owning and "fussing" with a few really great race-horses. He had owned some famous sprinters, but his knowledge of the racing game had convinced him that, could he but acquire Panchito, he would be the owner of a true king of the turf. The assurance that, with all his great wealth, this supreme delight was denied him, was a heavy blow.

Kay slipped her arm through his. "Don't cry, pa, please! We'll wait until Don Mike loses all his sheep and cow money and then we'll buy Panchito for a song."

"Oh, Kay, little girl, that horse is a peach. I think I'd give a couple of toes for the fun of getting my old trainer Dan Leighton out here, training this animal quietly up here in the valley where nobody could get a line on his performances, then shipping him east to Saratoga, where I'd put a good boy on him, stick him in rotten company and win enough races to qualify him for the biggest event of the year. And then! Oh, how I would steal the Derby from John H. Hatfield and his four-year-old wonder. I owe Hatfield a poke anyhow. We went raiding together once and the old sinner double-crossed me."

"Who is John H. Hatfield?" Don Mike queried mildly.

"Oh, he's an aged sinner down in Wall Street. He works hard to make the New Yorkers support his racing stables. Poor old John! All he has is some money and one rather good horse."

"And you wish to police this Hatfield person, sir?"

"If I could, I'd die happy, Farrel."

"Very well. Send for your old trainer, train Panchito, try him out a bit at Tia Juana, Lower California, at the meeting this winter, ship him to Saratoga and make Senor Hatfield curse the day he was born. I have a very excellent reason for not selling Panchito to you, but never let it be said that I was such a poor sport I refused to loan him to you—provided, of course, Kay agrees to this course. He's her mount, you know, while she's on El Palomar."

Parker turned to his daughter. "Kay," he demanded "do you love your poor old father?"

"Yes, I do, pa, but you can't have Panchito until you do something for me."

"Up jumped the devil! What do you want?"

"If you accept a favor from Miguel Farrel you ought to be sport enough to grant him one. If you ever expect to see Panchito in your racing colors out in front at the American Derby, Miguel must have a renewal of his mortgage."

"Oh, the devil take that mortgage. You and your mother never give me a moment's peace about it. You make me feel like a criminal; it's getting so I'll have to sit around playing mumbley-peg in order to get a thrill in my old age. You win, Kay. Farrel, I will grant you a renewal of the mortgage. I'm weary of being a Shylock."

"Thanks ever so much. I do not desire it, Mr. Parker. One of these bright days when I get around to it, and provided luck breaks my way, I'll take up that mortgage before the redemption period expires. I have resolved to live my life free from the shadow of an accursed mortgage. Let me see, now. We were talking about horse-racing, were we not?"

SUFFERED SO FROM HEART AND NERVES LIFE WAS A BURDEN

Mrs. A. H. Lee, Beamsville, Ont. writes:—"I am delighted to let you know what I have to say regarding the good Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did me.

A short time ago I suffered with heart and nerve trouble, and was so bad I could not sleep, only about two hours each night. My heart was so bad I had spells when driving on the road and would faint away, and neighbors would carry me in from my wagon. I also took these spells in the night and during my daily work on the farm. My nerves were so bad I would jump out of bed, and was then compelled to walk the floor before I could settle down again, but after taking a few boxes of

RUSSIA IS READY WITH ARMED FORCE

Cannot Accept Lord Curzon's Terms-Ultimatum Expires May 17.

MOSCOW, May 12. Canadian Press. — The Soviet government does not desire a break with the British and is willing to confer with that country, but it cannot accept such an ultimatum as that contained in Lord Curzon's recent note, said M. Ganetsky, the Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs, in a speech delivered at a meeting here yesterday.

The meeting passed a resolution protesting against the British note, and declaring that Russia is ready, if necessary, to meet with armed force any nation which endeavors to infringe upon it. independence.

MAY PREVENT BREAK

Leonid Krassin, Soviet Commissar of foreign trade and commerce will leave for England to-day The British ultimatum expires May 17 and intervening time may give Krassin time to make an effort to straighten out affairs in Londnon and prevent a break in relations between Russia and Great Britain

LABOR KNOCKS CURZON NOTE

LONDON, May 12.— (Canadian Press). — The agitation which Labor and Liberal factions are conducting against Lord Curzon's recent note to Russia, continues to fill a large space in the press. All opposition forces are now marshalling their forces for next Tuesday's debates in the House of Commons at which a lively fight is expected.

Delegates of the trade Union Congress, National Labor Party and Parliamentary Labor Party, meeting in joint session yesterday issued a manifesto strongly condemning the note and asserting that the points at issue between Great Britain and Soviet can be settled at an arbitration conference. The manifesto protested against a break in Russo-British trade relations, asserting that such a step "would increase unemployment in Great Britain and add to the danger of war."

In the meantime one group of Socialists has unexpectedly refused to share in the agitation. This faction is the social democratic federation, which, replying to the independent Labor party's invitation to join in a demonstration at Trafalgar Square to-morrow, regrets that it cannot agree to cooperate. The federation says among other things that the maintenance of relations between Russia and Great Britain in view of the note, is now within the control of Soviet Government.

Want Ad Tips by John T. Bartlett

A WANT AD WIN IN ONE MOVE

The Want Advertiser can be likened to a checker enthusiast, engaged in solving a "problem." On the board, black occupies certain squares, white other squares. "Black to win, in four moves" reads the problem. The checker player if he is a good one, by close study can determine just how to make black win in four moves.

In the game of business, it sometimes devolves on the Want advertiser to make his advertising win with one move—one insertion. And there are known, established ways to go about doing it. The circumstances, say, are about like this. You have come on from the West to settle the estate of a relative, a restaurant proprietor. An urgent wire from your partner summons you home. You must leave on the morrow. Your restaurant is unsold.

You turn to the Want Ads to sell your restaurant for you before you leave. You have time for but one insertion of a Want Ad. Here are suggestions to make that one insertion triumphant.

1. Compose a Want Ad and several times as long as you ordinarily would. Spend as much on your one Want Ad as you would on several, were you not called home. Tell why the restaurant should make money for the buyer; what the equipment is; the lease; the approximate location and why favourable. State how long the restaurant has been an established and profitable business.

2. Explain why the business is being sold; then, being more specific, why it must be sold within a few hours. Declare you willingness to accept a bargain price in order to close the deal before you leave.

3. Say, in conclusion, "This Want Ad will appear but once."

4. Compose for simultaneous insertion, at other points in the "Business Chances" classification, three or four small messages, referring the reader to your large Want Ad.

For the advertiser who has an extremely brief time in which to sell, the foregoing are the methods best calculated to make a Want Ad "win in one move."

A WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

The man and wife who had called to look at the Period Model Phonograph whispered to each other in indecision while Mrs. Dober, the Want advertiser, played the Danube Blues. The inquirers had been on the verge of a favorable decision for twenty minutes, following their first surprised pleasure at the fine tone and handsome appearance of the instrument. They were almost ready to say, "Yes", but instinctive caution held them back.

The wife was thinking, "If it really is as good as it seems, it seems almost too good a bargain at the price."

"Something may be wrong with it that we don't know about. We don't want to buy a phonograph and find after we get it home that it is defective."

Mrs. Dober was thinking that her visitors were given to wholly unnecessary vacillation. It was a splendid phonograph, offered at a bargain price. How could they hesitate to buy, she found it hard to understand.

"If only," remarked the woman caller, voicing her doubt, "we know it to be as good as it seems!"

"Bless your heart!" said Mrs. Dober, "I'll give you a written guarantee. We are responsible. Look us up at the bank. If you are not satisfied with the machine, bring it back within a week and we'll return your money."

"I guarantee the Princely Phonograph No. 34323334, sold by me this day to Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Sinclair to be in sound mechanical condition and all right in every respect. If they find it otherwise, they may return within one week from date and I will refund their money. Mary H. Dober." Instantly the sale was made.

In hundreds of Want Ad transactions, it costs nothing for the seller to give a written guarantee. Many times it will work like magic to make a sale. The Want advertiser sells more quickly and more readily gets the full worth of his article. Use it when you can.

BOILS

Made Him Sick and Miserable

Mr. Richard Zaienzoski, McLean, Sask., writes:—"I had been suffering continuously, with boils, for three years, and during that time I tried many different remedies without any success whatever. In spite of all my efforts I was compelled to go to the hospital. This was in the Fall of the year, and right in the busiest time of the season. Upon my return home it just took about two weeks until my neck and arms were again occupied by the boils which made me feel very sick and miserable.

One day one of my friends advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and after I had used less than two bottles I was very much surprised at the result.

It is now over two years since I got in touch with B.B.B., and I have had no bother with boils since. I will recommend it to all persons suffering from any defect in the blood."

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

THE FIRST SIX WEEKS.

Six weeks after the baby is born go to your physician and have a thorough physical examination. It takes six weeks for the internal organs to return to their former positions after childbirth and until then you should be careful to avoid too vigorous exercises, in a word continue the care that you gave yourself previous to the baby's birth.

Until these six weeks have passed a mother cannot say that she is not going to be a successful nurse. Far too often these discouraging first weeks determine a mother to wean her baby without taking into account that if she will only wait until she is in normal health and strength again that she will be much better able to judge her abilities as a nurse.

One must have plenty of rest during these first weeks, the care of the baby is all that a mother should have and she should keep the house as little a burden as possible. She may not have enough milk after the first overflowing days to keep the baby satisfied, but this should not be too discouraging. Give the baby a bottle of modified milk after each nursing, continuing the regular nursing periods and allowing the baby to nurse five or six minutes on each breast for the sake of the stimulation, even if he doesn't get all he needs, and then after six weeks this complementary feeding may be dispensed with. Mothers find that when they are stronger and well they are not so worried by the care of the baby; little trifles do not seem mountainous and this all reflected in the greater flow of milk. The mind has greatly to do with the milk supply—because a worried mind actually diminishes the supply, and what new mother of less than a 6 weeks baby is utterly without worries? THE CHILD looms up as a tremendous responsibility!

AT WARKWORTH AND THE DISTRICT

Provincial Officers in Village Investigating Recent Burglary-Robbery Becoming a Habit.

(By a Staff Reporter)

WARWORTH, May 12— Provincial Officers Atkins of Belleville and Boyd of Port Hope resplendent in their uniforms arrived in the village yesterday forenoon and at once went in secret consultation with Constable Phillips the local guardian of the lives, property and works of the residents. The object of the visit of the distinguished representation of the law was not known until some time after their arrival so quietly is the machinery of Justice operated.

Sometime during Thursday night, the hardware store of C. J. Boyce was broken into and a number of valuable articles, including a rifle, were stolen. The burglary was discovered by Constable Phillips early in the morning but the thieves had disappeared. That there was more than one engaged in the robbery was inferred from the number of articles missing from the stock. The door had been opened by prying the lock Constable Phillips lost no time in reporting the affair to the provincial police and so prompt was the response that Officers Boyd and Atkins reached here in time to take dinner at the Leonard House. They at once got busy on the case but at the time of writing no arrests had been reported.

Becoming a Habit

Robbing the store of Mr. Boyce has evidently become a fixed habit with some residents of this village or vicinity. This is the third time in as many years that the place has been broken into. It occupies a rather isolated position apart from the business centre and for that reason is probably a favorite field of operation for the law breakers. The last burglary previous to that of Thursday night, occurred about a year ago, but the thieves were never arrested although part of their loot was recovered in a place where they had concealed it. The manner of entry and the articles taken lead the officers to believe that the gang that broke into the place Thursday night was the same as that which committed the robbery a year ago.

The most valuable article missed by Mr. Boyce after he had looked over his stock, was a rifle. Some razors also were taken and the show cases containing pocket knives and other easily portable articles were rifled. No money, however, was secured by the burglars.

NO EXTRA COST HIGH SCHOOL

Council at Campbellford Will Not Grant Additional $20,000 Recently Suggested—Strike Rate.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 12. — The new high school will be built according to the revised plans and at a cost of $68,000, the amount of the debenture issue authorized by the council last Monday night. The additional issue of $20,000 required to add an assembly room and gymnasium will not be granted. Once again it is announced that the matter is finally disposed of, and the controversy ended

A special meeting of the council was held last eevning with all the members present, and the discussion which did not begin until 9 o'clock, continued for nearly two hours. There was no vote taken but all the members expressed their opinions.

Mayor Meyers stated that the object of the meeting was to consider the advisability of making a further grant to enable the Board of Education to finish the school according to the original plans. He made it clear that he had not been asked by any member of the Board to call the meeting but that he considered it advisable to get an expression of opinion from the council.

$25,000 is Required.

Another statement made by the Mayor was that the sum needed to put up a complete building was not $20,000, the amount always spoken of in this connection, but that $25,000 would be required for the assembly room and gymnasium.

Contractor Brown had stated that leaving out these departments had reduced the size of the building first planned by 44 per cent.

Wanted Unanimous Vote.

There were two propositions considered last night: one for the council to issue the additional debentures on its own responsibility; the other to submit the question to the ratepayers. The mayor called for an expression of opinion from each member of the council on the first phase of the question, adding that unless there was a unanimous agreement to the additional expenditure no resolution would be submitted.

It soon became apparent that there was a difference of opinion among the members so that this proposition was dropped.

The question of submitting the matter to the taxpayers was discussed but it seemed to be the general opinion that a bylaw to raise another $25,000 would be voted down. That being the case the councillors decided that to hold a special election would be a useless expense and it was then decided that so far as the council is concerned the matter is ended.

To Strike Rate.

Another important special session will be held next Tuesday night, the entire evening to be devoted to the problem of striking the rate for next year.

ST. JOHN'S SERVICES.

Rev. Canon Fornerl will preach at 11 o'clock service on "The Higher Criticism". At the evening service the A.Y.P.A. will attend in a body and furnish officers. Dr. Blagrave will give an address to the young people.

SCUGOG INDIANS INVOKE TREATIES.

Spearing Muskrats Brings Five Braves Into Court—Indian Privileges Are Discussed.

LINDSAY, May 12. — Five of the Scugog Lake Indians who figured in the shooting charges preferred against a couple of Mariposa residents a few days ago, were obliged this week to pay fines of $10 and costs for spearing muskrats

The chief witnesses in the case were the Mariposa men who for fined for shooting the redmen.

The trial drew a record crowd. A feature of the hearing was the appearance of Johnston Paudash, formerly of Hiawatha, in the witness box. He gave the court some very interesting information relative to the treaty rights of the Indians and the privileges accorded them by the Crown.

HIGH OFFICIAL EXPLAINS WORK BRITISH TARIFF

Present Change in British Preference Applies Further Customs Reduction on Goods Imported By Way of Canadian Ports.

DISCOUNT 10 P.C.

TORONTO, May 12 (Canadian Press). — A high customs official gave last night the following explanation of the working out of the change in the British preference announced by Mr. Fielding.

The British preference when introduced in 1897 applied to goods when imported direct. This expression has been taken to mean imported on or through a bill of lading, and consequently goods so imported might reach Canada by way of an American port, and still enjoy British preference. The intermediate tariff introduced in 1906 applied favourable treatment to goods imported and conveyed "without transhipment, into sea or river port of Canada."

The present change in the British preference is to apply a further discount of 10 per cent. on customs duties to goods coming direct to Canada by way of Canadian ports.

Apparently goods may still be imported under the British preference by way of a United States port direct on through bill of lading, but they will not be entitled to the special discount of 10 per cent which applies on goods imported through a Canadian port.

90 Years of Canadian Development

Into the history of The Bank of Nova Scotia has been written ninety years of the life of Canada.

In all that time, The Bank of Nova Scotia has been closely identified with the business and agricultural welfare of the country.

From a few straggling settlements scattered from the Atlantic to the Great Lakes, Canada has grown into a nation spanning the continent.

In that development The Bank of Nova Scotia has had its full share, and the few branches in the Maritime Provinces of 90 years ago have grown into a widespread system that covers practically every place of importance in the Dominion.

The same full service is available to the public at all our branches.

Commercial Agreement.

The text of two new sections of customs tariff act, embodying Mr. Fielding's proposal to the United States, follows:

"Governor in Council may authorize any Minister of the Crown to enter into negotiations with any authorized representative of the government of the United States with a view to making of commercial agreement between the two countries on terms that may be deemed mutually beneficial. Any agreement so made shall be subject to approval of the Parliament of Canada. If the President of the United States, under authority of the United States' Tariff Act of 1922, determines to reduce by fifty p.c. the duties imposed by such Act on following articles: That is to say—Cattle, wheat, wheat flour, oats, barley, potatoes, onions, turnips, hay, fish. The Governor in Council may by order in council make such reductions of duties on similar articles imported into Canada from the United States as may be deemed reasonable by way of compensation for such reductions on Canadian products imported into the United States."

CLIFFORD FOR S. ESSEX.

PROGRESSIVES DISAPPOINTED

Leader Forke Declared Western Farmers Will Not Be Benefitted by Tariff Changes.

OTTAWA, May 12 (Canadian Press). — Greeks carrying gifts always have been regarded with suspicion, but not always has that suspicion been justified by later events.

Liberals in the House of Commons last night readily gave the benefit of the doubt to the Hon. J. B. M. Baxter, Conservative member for St. John who went out of his way, in discussing the harbour appropriation for that Maritime port, to pay a fine tribute to the Budget speech.

Referring to the clause in the Budget granting a wider measure of preference to goods imported from Great Britain "through Canadian ports," Mr. Baxter said:

"I want to say just this: What was done by the Budget this afternoon was something above politics. It was one of the finest things that have been done in Canada for a long time, one which our people have been hoping and praying for for years."

When the debate opens on the Budget, it is said that the Progressives will move an amendment. While the terms of the amendment have not yet been drafted, the probability is that it will declare against the principle of protection which, the Progressives claim, is continued in the Budget proposals.

Robert Forke, the Progressive leader, questioned by the Canadian Press representative last night, declared that the Progressives did not consider the Budget satisfactory. "I do not think," he said, "that tariff changes in the Budget will be of any benefit to the Western farmers. Furthermore, the finality of the reductions, as announced in the Budget speech, was extremely disappointing."

INCREASE TO CONSUMER.

TORONTO, May 12 (Canadian Press). — Toronto business men concede that the alteration of the method of levying the sales tax is the outstanding feature of the Fielding Budget. There is not complete unanimity as to whether the cost of the goods affected by the sales tax will be increased or not.

The general view, however, is that the news sales tax of per cent at the source—manufacturer importation—will increase the cost of the goods to the consumer.

YOUNG PIANIST'S REMARKABLE RECORD

It was George Elliot who said, "Nothing will give permanent success in any enterprise of life, except native capacity cultivated by honest and persevering effort. Genius is often but the capacity for receiving and improving by discipline."

Those two sentences probably epitomize in themselves the reasons for the success which has been attained by Miss Agnes Logan, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Logan, 210 McDonnel Street, who received five first awards in pianoforte work during the recent musical competition festival in Toronto, adding to the laurels which have been shaping themselves into a wreath of enduring fame ever since she first appeared in public performances in Canada and New York, at the immature age of twelve years. A brief consideration of her musical education up to the present shows her inherent capacity for taking pains, and her amenability to suggestion and discipline.

Born in Prescott, Ontario, Miss Logan, who will not attain her eighteenth birthday until December of this year, came to Peterborough with her parents when she was but three and one-half years of age. As a tiny tot of three, she had formed the habit of stretching small hands up to the keyboard, to play little, one-fingered tunes, and it was just about the time that the family reached Peterborough that Agnes received her first tuition from her mother. Her ease in memorization work has always been commented on with surprise, but, from the very beginning of her study of the piano, her mother insisted that she develop her quick memory powers to the utmost, also laying down as a rule the maxim that the memorizing must be done painstakingly and correctly, rather than speedily. At the age of six, the child was given a book of brief classical bits, which her mother anticipated would occupy her attention for some time. However, "Agnes took the book downstairs and played it through before breakfast."

When she was nearly seven years old, lessons, in a half-hour interval once a fortnight, were commenced, Miss Jeanette Killmaster, of Toronto, who taught at the local Conservatory of Music, having the honor of being Agnes Logan's first teacher, although to her mother, undoubtedly, herself a skilled musician belongs the credit of laying the enduring foundation without which later efforts would bring forth little fruit.

Gave Early Recital

At the age of ten years, Agnes, with another young pupil of Miss Killmaster, gave a pianoforte recital in Nordheimer Hall, Toronto, when the difficulty of her programme and the versatility of her powers were made the subject of exceptionally flattering comment by musical critics of the Queen City, including writers on the Toronto Sunday World, the Toronto Daily News and Saturday Night, where Hector Charlesworth spoke in terms of highest praise of the "firmness and sureness of her playing, her gifts of memorization, and her clearness and fluency in rendition of difficult music." Dr. A. S. Vogt spent a special hour after this recital in listening to the playing of the talented child.

About the same time, a recital by Miss Logan, assisted by the children's orchestra, was given at the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, when all the nice things said about the small performer in Toronto were reiterated by The Examiner.

Encouraged in New York

When Miss Killmaster went to Brantford, to teach in the Ontario School for the Blind, Agnes Logan was twelve years old. In that year she paid a visit to friends in New York city, where, through the influence of her uncle, Mr. Gordon Logan, dramatic editor of the New York Herald, she had an opportunity of getting a private hearing in the Metropolitan Opera House, where "busy musical experts of that institution left their work to listen to the little Canadian." Among them was Edward Ziegler, administrative secretary of the company, and Gennaro Papi, Italian conductor. Felix Lamond, organist of Trinity chapel, and R. E. Johnston, impressario for some of the world's greatest pianists, heard her play, and all agreed "that if she will keep on she may become one of the very greatest pianists." Ossip Gabrilowitsch, on the afternoon of his own recital, stopped long enough to hear her play a Bach fugue, Weber's "Moto perpetuo," Field's midi nocturne and a selection by Sapellinikoff. He told the child that she had an excellent musical foundation, and encouraged her to go home and study hard to become a really great artist.

In the same year, the London, Ontario, papers published very flattering accounts of the "wonderful exhibition by a child pianiste" in the recital given by her in that city, under the auspices of the Women's Music Club.

During the years between her twelfth birthday and somewhere around her sixteenth, Miss Logan received musical instruction from several different teachers at the Conservatory, from Mr. A. Newton, Miss Jessie Anderson and Miss Laura Newman, each of whom added their quota to her store of musical knowledge. For nearly two years now, she has been under the direction of Mr. Carlos Buhler, a young South American pianist, a member of the Toronto Conservatory of Music staff, who comes weekly to Peterborough to give tuition at the local Conservatory of Music. During the years of her study, Agnes has never taken more than one lesson a week, and her daily practice periods rarely exceeded one and one-half hours in length. She has never taken a musical examination during those years.

Remarkable Achievement

On the 5th of March, this year, Miss Logan gave a very successful recital i the Conservatory of Music in Toronto, and last week, at the Ontario Musical Competition Festival, captured five awards in pianoforte competitions, open to the Province, winning firsts in quick study, in sight reading, in accompaniment for vocal and instrumental music, and in piano solo. In this last competition, the adjudicator, E. Granville Bantock, of London, England, after Miss Logan had played the first trial number, Chopin's Barcarolle, shook hands with the young musician, and led her out on the platform, where he sat down beside her and asked for the second selection, Debussy's "Reflections in Water." In his summing-up remarks, Mr. Bantock said that the very highest form of execution in music lay in the faculty of so playing a difficult selection as to make it appear easy. Miss Logan, he said, had scored in this particular. In the general manner of her playing, her position at the piano, and her composed demeanor, he had been reminded forcibly of the playing of the same Barcarolle by the great Rubenstein. Mr. Buhler, who was present during the trials, remarked that Miss Logan's rendition of this particular piece of difficult music was better than he had ever hear her do before. For her pre-eminence in so many different classes, the young artist received a special gold medal, with new artistic design in laurel surrounding a lyre.

On the day following her recital in Toronto, Miss Logan was requested by Dr. A. S. Vogt to play at the closing exercises of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, in Conservatory Hall, which take place on the 15th and 16th of this month. She will play on the evening of the 16th, giving the MacDowell concerto in E minor, with her teacher, Mr. Carlos Buhler.

In August of this year, arrangements are under way for Miss Logan to go to England, where she will stay with Mrs. A. Palmer and her daughter, Miss Edwina Palmer, while taking further musical instruction from Mr. Buhler, who intends to study under the great London pianist, Matthay, a specialist in technique and tone production. In the meantime, the young girl will continue her school work, hoping to obtain her musical matriculation this term. In school, as in musical study, Agnes Logan has always been a bright scholar. In her seventeenth year, she is now in the fourth form of the local Collegiate Institute, and is also vice-president of the P.C.I. literary society.

Clear-Cut Execution

Clarity of tone, a clear-cut execution, outstanding powers of memorization, and a facile mastery of difficult technical details, are perhaps the most noticeable of Miss Logan's musical attributes, as expressed in press notices of performances from her earliest years. She has a special fondness for the compositions of Chopin, Greig, Liszt and Debussy.

Agnes Logan has a hereditary background of musical ability which perhaps in part explains her aptitude and skill in difficult work. Her immediate family, her parents, brother and sisters, all are fond of, and are adept in some form of music, while the families of both her father and mother have for generations past been lovers of, and teachers of, music in its many instrumental and vocal manifestations.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT GROWTH.

Babies do grow, sometimes, in spite of the awful way in which they are fed; but normal growth is due to correct feeding, proper rest, exercise and general training. I am going to quote liberally from an interesting article sent out by the American Child Health association because of some high lights on growth.

It says that boy babies grow faster than girl babies, and breast babies faster than bottle fed. The normal infant measures longer from the hands of its fingers with its arm outstretched than it does in height (mothers get out your rulers!). Its arms are longer than its legs. Its chest during the first year of life is never so large in circumference as its head.

"It is a remarkable fact that two-thirds of the entire growth of the brain takes place in the first two years of life. At birth the brain weighs thirteen ounces, and at one year twenty-six ounces. In the young infant the brain is one-tenth of the body weight while in the adult it is only one-fiftieth of the body weight."

It is recommended always that the baby be given a regular and careful weekly weighing during the first two years of life, so that one may know if it is growing in the normal fashion.

By the fifth month the baby usually weighs twice as much as its birth weight. When one year old it weighs three times as much. At its second birthday it has quadrupled its weight. During the first quarter of the first year the baby usually gains five pounds, the second quarter three and one-half pounds, the third quarter three pounds, the fourth quarter two pounds.

BEST STORIES OF GREAT HUMORISTS

Although Lincoln took his politics very seriously and always made an impression in his campaign speeches by his tremendous earnestness he was always quick to use a humourous story or repartee if he could get under his opponent's guard in that telling way. When he was a candidate for the Illinois Legislature, in driving to his first campaign meeting he passed the house of his opponent who had just had a lightning rod erected on his roof. This was the first time Lincoln had ever seen what was then a new-fangled contrivance. In his speech that day, he said, "Friends, you don't know very much about me. I haven't had all the advantages that some of you had; but if you did know you would be sure that there was nothing in my character that made it necessary to put on my house a lightning-rod to save me from the just vengence of Almighty God."

* * *

When Lincoln sat in the legislature that body was much troubled by a tiresome member from Wabash. This bespectacled elderly orator, who had shaggy over-hanging eyebrows, was an obstructionist of the worst kind. He was in the habit of criticising every measure as being unconstitutional and no amount of argument could stem his tide of verbosity. At last Lincol decided that this man was getting to be a nusiance and had to be silenced. In reply, therefore, to a speech by the member from Wabash, Lincoln said that it reminded him of an old friend of his. "He's a peculiar-looking old fellow, with shaggy over-hanging eyebrows and a pair of spectacles under them," said Lincoln, sketching the appearance of the recalcitrant member. "One morning, just after the old man got up, he imagined, on looking out of his door, that he saw rather a lively squirrel, but the squirrel paid no attenton to the shot. He loaded and fired again again, until at the thirteenth shot, he set down his gun impatiently, and said to his boy, who was looking on:

"Boy, there is something wrong with this gun."

"Gun's all right, I know 'tis', responded the boy, 'but where's your squirrel?'

"Don't you see him, humped up about half way yu the tree?' inquired the old man, peering over his spectacles and getting mystified.

"No, I don't, responded the boy; and then, turning and looking into his fathers face, he exclaimed: 'I see your squirrel! You have been firing at a gnat on your eyebrow!"

* * *

The above is probably Lincoln's best-known story. In the course of his debates with Stephen A. Douglas during the Senatorial campaign, when Lincoln attracted national attention as a speaker on the slave question, he was usually very serious, but his skill in repartee enabled him more than once to score heavily at the expense of his dignified opponent. On one occasion Douglas attempted to hold Lincoln up to ridicule by informing his audience that when he first knew his lank opponent the latter was keeping a grocery store and sold whiskey and cigars. To the immense enjoyment of the audience Douglas said; "And Mr. Lincoln was a very good bartender!" When Lincoln's turn came to reply, he certainly delivered the retort courteous. "What Mr. Douglas has said, gentlemen," he began genially, "is true enough; I did keep a grocery and I did sell cotton, candles and cigars, and sometimes whiskey; but I remember in those days Mr. Douglas was one of my best customers. Many a time have I stood on one side of the counter and sold whiskey to Mr. Douglas on the other side, but the difference between us now is this: I have left my side of the counter, but Mr. Douglas still sticks to his as tenaciously as ever."

Perhaps even more effective than this was another rise at the expense of Douglas in another debate. Douglas, who spoke first, tried to curry favor with his audience by telling them that his father was a cooper by trade. Then he remarked wittily that his prescient sire apprenticed him out to learn the cabinet business. When Lincoln's turn came he took advantage of the personal appearance of his opponent, who was short and rotund and had a reputation for being rather fond of whiskey, by saying, "I had understood before that Mr. Douglas had been bound out to learn the cabinet-making business which is all well enough, but I was not aware until now that his father was a cooper. I have no doubt, however, that he was one, and I am certain, also, that he was a very good one, for (there Lincoln bowed toward Douglas) he has made one of the best whiskey casks I have ever seen."

* * *

Innumerable stories are told of Lincoln's application of his own own brand of humor to politicians and political situations during his White House days. Several months before he issued his Proclamation of Emancipation, he was greatly worried by three members of his party, Sumner, Stevens, and Wilson, who brough constant pressure to bear upon him urging the necessity of issuing such a decree. As Lincoln did not think the time was quite ripe for such a step, he did his best to stave off these persistent advisers without hurting their feelings. Apropos of the badgering he had to submit from the indefatigable three, he told the following story to Senator Henderson of Missouri: "The only schooling I ever had Henderson," remarked the President, as he stood looking out of the White House window, "was in a log school-house when reading books and grammars were unknown. All our reading was done from the Scriptures, and we stood up in a long line and read in turn from the Bible. Our lesson one day was the story of the faithful Israelites who were thrown into the fiery furnace and delivered by the hand of the Lord without so much as the smell of fire upon their garments. It fell to one little fellow to read the verse in which occurred for the first time in the chapter, the names of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Little Bud stumbled on Shadrach, floundered on Jeshach, and went to pieces on Abed-nego. Instantly the hand of the master dealt him a cuff on the side of the head and left him wailing and blubbering as the next boy in line took up the reading. But before the girl at the end of the line had done reading he had subsided into sniffles, and finally became quiet. His blunder and disgrace were forgotten by the rest of the class untill his turn was approaching to read again. Then like a thunder-clap out of a clear sky, he set up a wail which even alarmed the master, who with rather unusual gentleness enquired,—

"What's the matter now?"

"Pointing with a shaking finger at the verse which a few moments later would fall to him to read, Bud managed to quaver out the answer,—

"Look there, master—there comes them same damm three fellers again."

Then Lincoln's face lighted with such a smile as only he could give, and calling Henderson to his side, he silently pointed his long, bony finger to the men who were at that moment crossing Pennsylvania ave. toward the door of the White House. They were Sumner, Stevens, and Wilson.

* * *

And yet, numerous as were the stories he told, Lincoln once modestly said, "You speak of Lincoln stories. I don't think that it a correct phrase. I don't make the stories mine by telling them. I'm only a retail dealer." It must be said, however, that Lincoln had a genius for making a story fit the occasion. Many yarns have been fathered on Lincoln which he never told, but he has put his own stamp on so many choice examples that he has abundantly earned a place in literary history as a great American humorist.

HOSTAGE BROUGHT FOOD TO CAPTIVES

Prisoners of Chinese Bandits Who Are Held For Ransom Are in Good Health.

(By Ray G. Marshall, U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

TIEN TSENG, China, May 12. — J. A. Henly, American from San Francisco, went back this afternoon to the bandit camp in the Shantung hills, whence he was released Friday, carrying food for the foreign captives still held, and the terms on which the Chinese government proposes to negotiate with the brigands.

Henly, who was permitted to leave the stronghold to which the bandits, with the prisoners they kidnapped were taken after the wrecking of the Shanghai express last Sunday, reported that the captives are in good health.

High hopes are held out that he will be able to negotiate successfully for the release of all the foreigners by Sunday at the latest.

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, May 12.—A Cobourg citizen, so the story runs, found that it was not all joy having more than one car, as he was summoned to appear on a charge under the Motor Vehicles Act of driving a car with a last year's number. He explained that he owned two cars but had only taken out one marker for 1923. While he was away with this car his son took the other car out. It caught the eye of an officer, hence the case in court. The small fine of $1.00 and costs were imposed, under the circumstances.

Real Estate Tranfers.

T .S. Chatterson, Toronto, formerly of Cobourg, has sold to John Gallagher some lots lying between Walton and Henry streets in Cobourg.

James T. Butlers has sold to Albert E. Weir, part of lot 3, concession 5, Alnwick township.

Miss Jean Murray has sold her house on Tweed street to Henry Lonsberry.

Enjoyable Banquet.

The Sons of England held their annual banquet at the Lakeview hotel here, when a very enjoyable time was spent. The genial host, Mr. J. J. Roberts provided an excellent supper; and under the able direction of President Austin an enjoyable toast list of songs and speeches was carried out.

Returning to China.

Dr. Frank F. Allen, Mrs. Allen and three children, who were visiting relatives here left on Monday for Toronto. Dr. Allen, has been engaged as a medical missionary in China, under the General Board of Missions of the Methodist church in Canada for the past sixteen years, this being his second furlough. He has received word to return to that country and expects to leave with his family the early part of August. He is an old Cobourg boy, being a son of Mr. Robert Allen of this town. Dr. and Mrs. Allen are leaving their oldest son and daughter at school at Stanstead, Quebec.

Missionary Visitor.

Rev. Dr. W. E. Smith, returned missionary from China, has been visiting some of the young people's leagues in the Brighton and Cobourg districts the past week.

Sudden Death.

After an illness of only four days from pneumonia, William Pomeroy died at his home on the Lakeshore road, near Port Hope, quite suddenly on Sunday afternoon. The Wednesday previous he sought medical aid to alleviate a heavy cold. The physician ordered him to bed. His condition rapidly grew worse, although his death came with unexpected suddenness. He was 48 years of age. He is survived by his wife, a daughter of William Clarke of Port Hope. The funeral took place on Wednesday and the Sons of England attended in a body. The interment was at Welcome cemetery.

Austrian Gets Bail.

John Timoski, an Austrian, who was committed for trial at Port Hope on a charge of selling liquor and also of manufacturing without a license, was admitted to bail on Saturday evening by Magistrate Campbell. His own surety of $1,000 in cash was accepted as guarantee that he would appear to answer to the charge when wanted.

Tragic Death.

Margaret White, six-year-old daughter of H. S. White, K.C. Toronto, who died at the Sick Children's Hospital, as a result of burns received when her clothing caught fire from a match is a granddaughter of Mrs. Henry White and Mrs. J. F. Honor of Port Hope.

Many Settlers Arriving.

Some fifteen hundred settlers from the old land passed through Cobourg at the week-end bound for various points. Some were going to Toronto, others to Hamilton, London and other manufacturing centres principally in Ontario. The newcomers passed through on four special trains over the C.P.R. and Canadian National lines. The majority were married couples and there were about two hundred children.

Stock For the West.

Mr. W. R. Maize, it is stated, has purchased a carload of purebred and grade Holsteins for breeding purposes from breeders north of Brighton on the Hilton line. The cattle will be loaded at Brighton after a tubercular test has been made. They will be shipped to Saskatchewan.

Rev. Father Ferguson Ill.

The many friends throughout the district of Rev. Father Ferguson of Warkworth regret that while he was returning to his charge in that village he was taken ill, and returned to the hospital. His speedy and complete recovery is hoped for.

CAVAN PERSONALS.

Early fears that the wheat had winter-killed have not been borne out, and fall wheat and clover give prospects of an excellent crop.

NERVOUS TORTURES

Irritation by Day and Sleeplessness at Night the Result.

There is no torture more intolerable than nervousness. The sufferer starts at every noise, is shaky and depressed. The least thing produces a feeling of irritation, and nights are often sleepless. Often although in a completely exhausted condition, the patient is unable to sit or lie still. The nerves are in this jaded condition because they are being starved by poor, watery blood and to restore them to a normal condition the blood must be made rich, red and pure. For this purpose no other medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly upon the blood; they bring to it the elements necessary to enrich and purify it, thus bringing new health and strength to run-down, nerve-worn people. There is no doubt about this; thousands have testified to the blood-improving, nerve-restoring qualities of these pills, among these is Mrs. Aubrey Coldwell, Melanson, N.S., who says: —"I was badly run down and my nerves were in a terrible condition. I would start at the least sound and often faint away. I could not sleep at night, and only those who have been in a similar condition can tell what I suffered. At my mother's request I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after taking the for several months I am surprised at my present condition of good health. My nerves are as sound as ever; I can sleep well and eat well, and have no more fainting spells. I can only say that I can not praise, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too much for what they have done for me."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SENTENCED TO READ PILGRIM'S PROGRESS

PHILADELPHIA, May 12. — (United Press.)—Probably the most unique sentence ordered in a court of justice, was pronounced by Judge Raymond M. MacNeille when he ordered C. Haviland Scott to read Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" and get acquainted with "Trouble" and "Doubt."

Scott pleaded guilty to a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated. He admitted imbibing to the extent of six highballs.

"Who were with you at the time of your arrest?" inquired the Judge.

"Oh, Trouble and Doubt," responded the defendant.

"Why they are symbolic characters in Pilgrim's Progress, as I recall," commented the Judge.

"No, no," interposed Scott, "they were young men."

"Well" returned the Judge, "it would do you good to get Bunyan's book and read it; it is inspiring and instructive and the moral lessons will have their effect, no doubt.

Instead of sentencing you to jail for a term, Scott, I sentence you to read 'Pilgrim's Progress,' which you can obtain at any book store."

Assistant District Attorney Sachs asked that a definite term be imposed, but Judge MacNeill said the defendant would be taken to Moyamensing Prison and held until he had studied the book.

REDS IN JAPAN ARE STIRRING UP MASSES

By CLARENCE DUBOSE.

TOKYO, May 12. — (United Press).—Russian Reds are trying to stage a revolution in Japan.

They haven't much hope of succeeding—almost no hope at all, for the present, in fact—but they are working.

They are scheming in an effort to get a million or so members of the Japanese "outcast caste" to rebel against the Government.

They hope, then, to get several million more of the coolie and unskilled labor class—whose living problem has become almost impossible—to join in the "revolution."

Thus, they think, social and economic pressure would combine in Japan—the last stronghold in the world of pre-world-war Imperialism—into a mighty rebellion against the established order.

Reports of the existence of this plan have reached the United Press correspondent from confidential, unofficial, but apparently reliable sources.

At the same time this correspondent has abundant information, both officially and unofficially, to justify the prediction that the scheme will be sharply suppressed and will for the moment accomplish nothing.

'Red' emisaries, both Japanese and Russian, have been secretly spreading the revolution doctrine in Japan, it is learned from authoritative sources. They have first tackled the "outcast" class. They are Japanese—but, by the strange caste system of the orient, they are born with the doom of being themselves "outcasts" all their lives. But the "outcasts" read newspapers. They know every single one of the high-sounding slogans that were shouted to the world during the war—and since. And yet they know they are still outcasts in Japan. They are ripe for revolt. They have formed mass mobs several times of late and attacked—and defeated—other mobs of the "upper classes."

To Make Rich Red Blood

Revitalize your worn-out exhausted nerves and increase your strength and endurance take Organic Iron; not metallic iron which people usually take, but pure organic iron—Nuxated Iron —which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. One dose of Nuxated Iron is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach or one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat. Nuxated Iron is partially predigested and ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood. white metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pices of iron filings.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results.

Beware of substitutes. Always insist on having genuine organic iron —Nuxated Iron. Look for the letters N. I. on every tablet. Sold by all druggists.

PAPER WHEELS NOT USED IN PULLMANS.

Old Paper Cored Wheel Used For 25 Years — Superceded By All-Steel

CHICAGO, May 12.—(Associated Press).—The paper car wheel that intrigued the imagination of America years ago, and which once served on every Pullman car, is now only a memory, according to the Pullman News.

The steel wheel has succeeded the paper cored wheel in every instance.

The public's idea, back in 1880, that the paper wheel's superiority was that the paper centre would not be susceptible to the expanding and contracting influences of heat and cold was a misapprehension, as the real reason for its value lay in the deadening of sound under passenger cars, particularly Pullmans. It was successful for 25 years and then the all-steel wheel began to take its place, until today there is not a paper cored wheel on any Pullman car, according to the News.

In manufacturing the paper wheel common strawboard paper, such as butchers formerly used to wrap meat in, was needed. At first 16 sheets were placed together, dampened, pressed and baked. Three sections, or 48 sheets, were then pressed together and dried for from 30 to 90 days in a kiln. The final process was to take four sections of 48 sheets or 192 and press them together. This made up the block from which the wheel was made and it was allowed to dry in the kiln six months.

All that then remained was to turn this block on a lathe until it attained the desired spherical form. This paper centre would be incased in a steel tire and sides, the latter being clamped together. A 38-inch wheel with a three-inch tire weighed about 1,070 pounds. The present Pullman all-steel wheel, of which there are 12 under each car, is 36 inches in diameter and weighs 925 pounds.

Hints On Keeping Beautiful.

Beauty is not chiefly a matter of cosmetics or perfect features. Primarily it is a matter of perfect health. Only a healthy woman can be truly beautiful. And to be healthy one must exercise as regularly as one eats and sleeps.

When a star of the screen or stage makes a statement like the above I know that the average busy woman—the business girl, for instance—sighs and says: "Yes; it's all very well for a motion picture star to talk that way. Probably she'll go on and tell us to exercise by riding horseback daily or playing golf when we haven't the leisure or money to do either. Why doesn't she suggest something practical?"

You would think we had loads of leisure, wouldn't you? But we haven't. My hours of work are long and irregular. I have very little time for sports and the more complicated forms of exercise. I am like any other very busy woman. I insist, nevertheless, that exercising regularly is necessary in order to preserve one's health and looks, and I try to practice what I preach. Moreover, I think that my system of exercising is practical and especially adapted to the busy woman. Here it is:

Some years ago I took a course with a physical training teacher. My exercise periods consist of going through four different movements learned from him. Here they are:

1. Standing with the heels together and knees stiff, bend forward from the waist and attempt to touch the floor with the tips of the fingers. Do this ten times.

2. Standing with the hands on the hips, inhale as deeply as possible ten times, rising on the toes with each inhalation and dropping back as you exhale.

3. Stretch out on the floor, face upward. Raise one leg at a time as high as possible, with a kicking motion. Kick ten times with each leg.

4. Standing erect, raise the arms to right angles with the body, with hands extended horizontally before the chest. From this position throw the arms back sharply as far as they will reach. This flexes the chest and shoulder muscles and expands the lungs.

These exercises are very simple. They can be accomplished within one's room. The window should be opened wide while you are exercising so that a good supply of fresh air circulates through the room. They should be followed if possible by a shower bath. Start with warm water and soap, then gradually cool the bath off to administer the proper rosy tingle to the body. Rub down briskly with the thickest towel you can find. However, do not use very cold water if it makes you feel shivery even after your rub-down. That is a sign that cold water doesn't agree with you. It is nothing to worry about. Many people are constituted that way.

PEER'S DESCRIPTION OF LIBERTY GODDESS

Unusual Reply to New York Reporters' Stereotyped Question to Visitors.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(Special to the Examiner.)— Right Honorable Lord Barnaby, who is 82 and said to be the oldest member of the British peerage, to-day furnished New York ship reporters with a new answer to one of their stock of questions.

"What do you think of the Goddess of Liberty?" they asked, as he got his first view of America from the deck of the incomer liner Berengaria.

His answer was: "She looks to me like a lady entirely surrounded by water, with a crown of thorns upon her brow, a bunch of grapes in her hand and a bundle of law books under her arm. More than that I had better not say."

MONDAY'S CONCERT EXCELLING EVENT

St. Paul's Church Anniversary Musical Offering on Monday Evening

The anniversary e t at St. Paul's church on Monday evening, when the church choir will give the double cantata number, "Spring Rapture" and "The May Queen," assisted by soloists from Toronto: Mrs. Fenton-Box, contralto, Miss Agnes Adie, soprano, Mr. Albert Downing, tenor, and Mr. Frank Oldfield, baritone, promises to be an outstanding event in musical offering for this season.

The assisting artists are well and favorably known in Peterboro. Mrs. Fenton-Box, formerly Miss Fenton, made a splendid impression on local audiences during her visit here in connection with "The Messiah" some years ago, and Miss Agnes Adie is an artist whose press notices are all of the most falttering order. Enconiums on the work of this talented singer include laudatory comments from Toronto newspapers and from the musical critics of Western Canada, of Detroit and of Miami, Florida, where she has appeared on several occasions. "A wonderfully controlled voice of exquisite tonal qualities," "the best we have ever heard here," "one of the dramatic sopranos of the future," are among the complimentary things said about a singer who seems to have made a name for herself wherever she has sung in the past.

Of Mr. Frank Oldfield, little need be said. There are many Peterboro people who would be glad of the opportunity of attending a concert where this local favorite would be the only artist on the programme, and Mr Downing's fine tenor is outstanding in Canadian musical circles.

In attending the concert on Monday evening, Peterboro music lovers have a unique opportunity of comparing two distinct styles of composition based on the same theme. Centreing around vernal raptures inspired by the growing season of the year "Spring Rapture" and "May Queen' yet represent two entirely different conceptions. "Spring Rapture" was composed by Harvey B. Gaul last year, and is a distinctly modern conception of the spring of the year, set to music, while 'May Queen' was composed by Sir Sterndale Bennett about one hundred years ago.

Speaking of Bennett, Frederick J. Crowest, in "The Story of Music," says: "Whether as a composer of orchestral, or vocal music, it may fairly be stated that no other composer, save Purcell, has been Bennett's equal. There is an exquisite finish and air of refinement pervading all his music; his use of orchestral resources is so carefully adjusted to the demands of his fruitful imagination, his vocal music is so beautifully balanced, blended and steeped with perfect local colour that he becomes almost faultless as an expressionist. His works are full of gems."

RESPECT FOR MINORITY PLEA OF JAMES HUGHES

Fundamental Principle of British Justice and World Peace.

OTTAWA, May 12. Canadian Press —A strong plea for the abolition of race prejudice and the inauguration of a sane policy of education with respect to teaching of English and French in the schools of Ontario, was made by Dr. James Hughes, ex-Inspector General of the Toronto public schools here last night.

The speaker based his principal plea on the fundamental principle underlying British justice—a respect for the rights of the minority It was the same principle upon which the League of Nations was operating to-day and it was the principle upon which the peace of the world rested.

DOPE SMUGGLERS ARE EXPOSED BY NATIONS' LEAGUE.

Gang Operates Trawler Fleet to Run Customs' Blockade, Bringing Illicit Drugs to United States.

By HENRY WOOD.

GENEVA, May 12.—The discovery of the existence of an organized, international traffic in cocaine, opium and morphine, extending entirely around the world and having at its disposition a "dope fleet" of trawlers for running customs blockades and smuggling harmful drugs into various countries is one of the first results of the League of Nations' campaign for the suppression of the illegal drug traffic.

The control and suppression of the traffic in opium and harmful drugs was one of the specific duties assigned to the League of Nations by the Treaty of Versailles. It is one of only three league activities in which the United States has consented to participate, the other two being international health and the suppression of the white slave traffic.

Work in Concert.

The first definite results of the league's campaign, as indicated above, have been made possible by the signing of an international agreement under the terms of which all the signatory nations agreed to notify the league immediately of all violations of existing laws against traffic in drugs and of all seizures of clandestine and illegal shipments.

The first notifications under this agreement have just reached the league and by piecing together the information that has come from various countries, league officials have had no difficulty whatever in reconstructing the international "dope ring" organization as it exists today. Each country is immediately notified of all such information which concerns it, and it is then in a position to take the necessary steps for breaking up the traffic as concerns its own limits and jurisdiction.

By far the most important notifications sent in to the league to date have been from Canada. They have revealed two very important things.

First that a goodly portion of the dope now being used in illegal, international traffic comes from the great chemical industries of Germany and secondly that the latter have established regular channels for getting this out of Germany and sold all around the world.

"Powdered Cocoa."

One of the regular routes which the Canadian authorities discovered was from Germany to Spain; then from Spain to France, and from France by means of a "dope fleet" by trawlers to St. Pierre Miquelon, off Newfoundland, from whence the dope was eventually smuggled into Canada and presumably the United States.

The Canadian Government also established the existence of another route by way of Basle, Switzerland, the drugs being gotten over the Swiss frontier to Basle from whence they were shipped to fictious addresses in Canada as cocoa. One of the shipments thus seized contained enough dope to have permitted every resident of Canada to indulge in one prolonged pipe dream

The entire lot of "powdered cocoa" consisted of 442 pounds of morphine cubes; 117 pounds of heroin and 65 pounds of cocaine.

That the "dope ring" for handling this traffic extends entirely around the world is further revealed in notifications just given by the English Government, which has just discovered that the port of Amoy, China, is being used as a distributing centre for the entire orient. The British authorities there have succeeded in seizing large shipments of morphine sent in registered packages not only through the Chinese posts, but through the English and French posts as well. A minute examination of the paper wrappings of these packages showed that some of them had been sent out by a firm in Denmark.

Patras, Greece, has also been discovered to be another centre of distribution. The drugs are apparently smuggled down there from the big chemical houses of central Europe and then through the organization of the thousands of small boats with which the port abounds. The dope is gotten aboard trans-oceanic steamers for international commerce and smuggling.

At the request of the league, Greece has promised to subject all foreign baggage to rigid inspection and to exercise a close control over all harbor boatmen who are in a position to communicate with the crews of foreign steamers in the harbor.

A HUMAN SKELETON FOUND AT BRIGHTON

Will Be Sent to Toronto For Expert Examination and Opinion.

BRIGHTON, May 12 (Special to The Examiner). — On Wednesday of this week, the remains of a human skeleton were discovered by men digging on the farm of C. Baker, about a mile and a half outside of the town.

Mr. Baker, who is one of the best known breeders of Holstein cattle in Ontario, had a cow which was valued at $3,000. It died a few days ago, and Mr. Baker got some of his employees to excavate a grave for the animal.

About two feet below the surface, they discovered the framework of what had evidently been a human body, and the remains of a shoe were also discovered, leading to the belief that the body had been clothed when buried.

The position of the body, placed face downwards in a crumpled position, and the shallow excavation made, would also confirm the impression that haste influenced those responsible for the deed.

The usual crop of rumours is flying thick and fast about the district, among the theories advanced being one which names the framework of bones as the mortal remains of the late Ambrose Small.

Coroner Dr. F. M. Dure, of Brighton, has taken charge of the skeleton, which will be sent to Toronto for expert examination and opinion.

Borgia's Poison-Ring Secret Exposed at Last

How the Mysterous Venom in a Secret Chamber of the Diabolical Jewel Held Its Deadly Strength for Five Centuries, Poisoned Another Victim and Proved the Infamous Borgia Stories True

Enlarged Cross-Section of a Fatal Ring of the Borgias. The Needle Was Imbedded In a Hollow Beneath the Jewel, Running Through a Hole Bored In the Center of the Stone. Its Point Was Concealed Just Below the Jewel's Surface. The Stone, Itself Was Set on a Spring, Movable Up and Down, So That the Slightest Pressure Depressed It, Unsheathing the Venomous Point.

The Beautiful Countess Borgia, Whose Husband Is the Present Head of the Highly Honored Modern Borgia Family. She Is a Reigning Favorite in Modern London Society.

"A Glass of Wine with Caesar Borgia." From the Famous Painting by Hon. John Collier.

Francesco Borgia, Duke of Gandia Was Murdered by Order of His Own Brother, Caesar Borgia, and His Body Thrown Into the Tiber.

A REAL poison ring of the Borgias, brought to light at last—and retaining its dreadful potency after a lapse of five hundred years, has actually been discovered in Turin, Italy. Its discovery nearly cost the present owner his life. But what is much more important is that it has verified a story long held in doubt by scientists and historians.

This ring, with a serpent's head, which is now known to have belonged to the famous family whose chief was Pope Alexander Borgia, in the fifteenth century, had lain for years unidentified in the window of a Turin antique dealer.

A Swiss art collector bought it, and, little suspecting its nature and history, put it on his own finger. Returning to Zurich, his hand and arm swelled, and he became terribly ill.

Investigation showed that he had been scratched by a tiny needle in the serpent's head, and that he was poisoned. Beneath the needle was a small hole, in which the poison had been secreted. It was still powerful, but time had partially weakened its strength and his life was saved.

Other investigations traced the ring back to the period of the Borgias, and finally left little doubt that it had been owned by the notorious Alexander VI. or some member of his immediate family.

The Borgias were the outstanding figures of their time. As Pope of Rome, in a licentious age when even the Vatican was not left uncontaminated, Alexander VI. was known as the most powerful and dissolute temporal ruler of his time.

His sons were made dukes and cardinals. His beautiful daughter, Lucrezia Borgia, was married successively to various noblemen in furtherance of the Borgia family interests.

Caesar Borgia, his most illustrious (and most infamous) son, is believed to have been the original of Machiavelli's "Prince," the great Italian classic, which is devoted to proving that a successful ruler cannot be hampered by the moral code of ordinary mortals.

It is historically known that the Borgias stopped at no crimes to advance their interests and power—not even at the murder of members of their own family.

The story, however, that they used poison rings to make away with their enemies, has always been more or less disputed by serious historians.

Several writers have told how both Alexander VI. and his son Caesar were accustomed each to wear a ring in which was secreted a deadly poison. The setting, in which the poison and needle were concealed, was turned harmlessly to the back of the hand, in the ring's natural position, when the wearer wished it to be innocuous.

But when he faced an enemy whose death was desired, he simply turned the setting inward, and smilingly gave his victim a cordial handshake. The scratch was so slight as to be scarcely felt, but in a few hours the man was dead, and no one knew by what means.

Such stories, though persistent and often used in dramas and fiction writings in which the Borgias were chief characters, have been more or less suspected as fantastic fables—until now.

The discovery of an actual Borgia poison ring, as told of above, is, therefore, of extraordinary historical importance.

It is of scientific importance, too, for chemists have always wondered what poisons could have been known in the middle ages which could kill from a tiny pin prick and leave no trace afterward by which they could be analyzed. Further investigation and analysis of the traces of poison on this particular ring may help reveal the secret.

Whether they were used in rings, or wines, or fruits, or by other means, it is historically certain that the Borgias possessed the secrets of many potent poisons which cannot be identified to-day, and that they frequently employed them—as well as the more direct assassin's dagger—to get rid of people who stood in their way.

The worst murder which stains the name of the Borgia family was the assassination by Cardinal Caesar Borgia of his own brother, Francesco, Duke of Gandia.

According to Alexander Dumas, Caesar sent one night for Michelotto, chief of his hired ruffians. When Michelotto arrived he was surprised to see that Caesar had discarded his cardinal's priestly robe and was dressed like a warrior-nobleman.

Caesar motioned Michelotto to come close.

"How do you think my costume becomes me?" he asked.

"Admirably, monsignore; it gives your excellency the appearance of a soldier, to match your heart."

"I am pleased you think so," said Caesar. "Tell me, now, do you know whose fault it is that instead of this garb, which I wear only at night, I am compelled to disguise my true nature by day in a cardinal's hat and cloak and to pass my time ambling from church to church when I ought to be leading a noble army on the battlefield—an army in which you would be captain instead of the chief of a band of desperadoes?"

"Yes, monsignore; the cause of it all is Monsignore Francesco, Duke of Gandia, your elder brother."

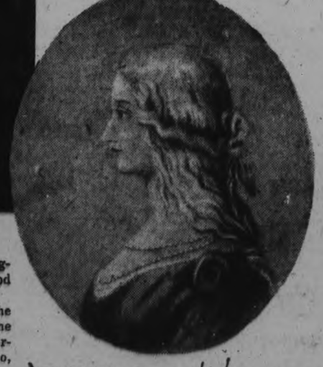
"Do you know who it is who has wealth without genius, a helmet without brains, a sword without strength to wield it?"

"The Duke of Gandia again."

"Do you know who it is who is always an obstacle in the path of my ambition, my fortune, my love?"

"Still the Duke of Gandia."

"What is your conclusion?"



Lucrezia Borgia de Borgia

Reproduction of an Old Print Portrait of Lucrezia Borgia, with Signature.

"I conclude that he must die," was the ruffian's cool reply.

On the following night the family were invited to a banquet at the home of their mother, and both Caesar and Francesco were present. Afterward the two brothers mounted their horses together and rode a part of the way in company. Presently they separated. A few moments later Francesco, riding alone, was attacked by five assassins, dragged from his horse, stabbed to death and thrown into the Tiber. The Pope and Lucrezia suspected that Caesar was responsible for this murder, but he was so headstrong and powerful that none dared accuse him. Some historians maintain that Pope Alexander was finally convinced that Caesar had done rightly, and certain modern writers, including Stephen Philips, defend Caesar's action politically, if not morally, on the ground that it was necessary if Caesar and Alexander were to carry out their dream of the unification of Italy, which was in itself a splendid purpose.

At any rate, the Borgias were supreme in Rome and pursued their aims of wealth and power even over the dead bodies of their own relatives.

All the secrets of the art of poisoning seemed to be at their command, and many a prince and cardinal expired in agony after having been invited to one of their dinners. They were not so crude as to poison the wines with any ingredient which would cause death quickly, and thus arouse immediate suspicion, but administered on such occasions poisons which worked only after several days and which produced symptoms which might have been caused by natural illness.

By the irony of fate, Alexander himself came to an untimely end through the very means which he used to destroy his enemies.

Caesar and the Pope had issued invitations to a supper party to be given at a villa not far from the Vatican, belonging to the Cardinal of Corneto. Caesar himself handed two bottles to his stewards, in which a white powder, resembling sugar, had been mixed. They were directed not to serve this wine except as he gave the signal. It was placed on a buffet by itself, and the other servants were cautioned not to touch it, as it was for the use of the Pope only.

The evening was warm, and when Alexander and Caesar came to the villa, the Pope complained of the heat and asked for some wine. Caesar told the attendant to bring two glasses, and the servant, having heard that the two special bottles were for the use of the Pope, opened one and filled the two glasses, which were taken to Alexander and Caesar. They drank some of the wine. The Pope entirely drained his glass. For some reason the poison worked more rapidly than usual, and as the Pope was receiving his guests he became ill. Later he was seized with violent fever, and a week afterward he died.

Caesar, a younger and stronger man, and having drunk less of the wine, managed to survive. For some time afterward he retained his power—plotting, fighting with great bravery, great political genius and great wickedness—until he was finally killed on the battlefield.

The discovery of the Borgia poison ring, just reported from Italy, throws a new and interesting historical light on this family, which was at the same time the most illustrious and the most infamous of the fifteenth century.

TURKS TO DIVORCE FROM ALL EUROPE

By Edward J. Bing

WASHINGTON, May 11.—(United Press)—The foreign policy of the Angora government, as reflected by the Lausanne peace parleys and by the recent enactmnt of the Chester concession, is dominated by the desire to free Turkey from European political influence.

This aim is pursued by economic cooperation with the United States on the one hand and a political alliance with other Asiatic countries on the other.

The alliance of the Turks with Soviet Russia has a purely political character. It has come about through the complete political isolation of Turkey, which sought the support of the Soviets, as the only country equally isolated from the West, and antagonistic towards Great Britain until recently Turkey most dangerous enemy.

Of late, however, there has been a certain tension between Moscow and Angora, due to the fact that the Bolsheviks did not succeed in making any converts in Turkey, the Turks having even deported several Bolshevik agitators.

In its co-operation with Persia, Afghanistan and other Moslem countries, the Angora government is trying to erect a common line of political defense against future aggression by the European powers.

On the other hand, however, it is anxious to reconstruct the region devastated by the retreating Greeks last fall and to re-organize the economic life of Turkey. The Turks hope strongly to carry out this task on the basis of a sound business co-operation with American interests. They are firmly convinced that the United States is the only power which would do business in Turkey by aiming merely at a legitimate profit, and refraining from any political designs. This consideration and their deep distrust for European diplomacy, is the reason why the Turks give preference to American interests.

PRINCESS PREFERS THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Declares No One in the Universe Perfect Enough to Be a Snob.

By Josephine Van de Grift

NEW YORK, May 11.—"Snobs!" exclaims the beautiful Princess Dimitri Galitzine, "there's nobody in the universe perfect enough to be one."

And there by does the princess, who was the wealthy and much sought after Miss Frances Stevens, pass the final word upon international marriages and explain why, after four years as a Russian noblewoman, she is trying to regain her status as plain American citizen.

"I wanted to have an ideal dignity," explains the princess, "I thought how wonderful it would be to have a title to my name, to be set apart and looked up to.

"Now I know that simple good woman has an honor that all the false pride in the world can never give.

"You ask what it has brought me This is what it has brought—I arrive in America practically penniless and find my mother living on crackers and milk in order that she might have money to send me.

"My husband, scion of one of the noblest houses in Russia, is learning to be a carpenter at a school for shell-shocked soldiers in France. His father, Prince Nicholas Dimitrovich and one-time prime minister of Russia, is cobbling the shoes of peasants in Petrograd.

"I—I have nothing but an empty title and an empty pocketbook. But I've gained an education.

"When we were married four years ago we went to Siberia on our honeymoon. I lost $35,000 just through the falling money rates. In order to get out of Siberia I had to ship as stewardess on a cargo boat.

"I tried to set my husband up in business and lost $70,000 on the venture. I trusted an agent with $13,000 and have seen nothing of him since In other words, I paid high for my education. I've graduated from the Siberian kindergarten of crime and the French finishing school of crooks.

"I landed in America the other day with $50 in my pocketbook.

"I've learned my lesson. A title is just a nice little old antique. I'm going to give up mine and become a plain American citizen so I can look after my mother.

"International marriages?

"Unless one has a fortune to build up a fairy -tale existence love under the apple tree is better."

THE "TROUBLE SHOOTER"

Shows How to Adjust Tune up Motor for the Season's Running.

By E. H. SCOTT

This article gives practical, step-by-step instructions to the motorist who wants to reduce his repair bills, get more power from his motor, and eliminate trouble during the coming touring season.

Carbon Deposits—How to Remove and Prevent Them

Unless you have had the Carbon removed from your engine recently, this is the next job to do to get your car in condition for the touring season. Carbon deposit is formed on top of the pistons, valves, and on the cylinder head and makes it overheat and when you advance the spark lever to climb a grade, it makes the engine knock badly.

To remove the carbon, first drain the radiator then remove the top water connection. Next remove all spark plugs and tie the cables back out of the way. Now remove the cylinder head bolts then lift off the cylinder head. This will expose the piston heads and valves.

Before you start to remove the carbon, plug up each of the bolt holes and water passages, and cover over any valve that is open, also the Coil, Distributor and Carburetor to prevent the carbon dust and chips from getting on them.

Turn the engine over to bring two pistons to the top of the cylinder, then with a putty knife or scraper, remove the carbon from each piston top and valve head. Get every particle of carbon off, then finish by polishing with emery cloth. This will prevent the carbon from forming so quickly again. After you have finished with the pistons scrape the carbon from the cylinder head. When you have everything clean and polished, carefully remove all dust and grit, then wipe the cylinder walls with a clean, oily rag.

When you have the cylinder head off, the Valves should be examined and if necessary ground in, but space will not permit me to describe this operation this week. Next week's article will show you how to perform this operation.

Carbon deposit is caused by carrying the oil level too high, leaking piston rings or scored cylinder walls allowing an excessive amount of oil to leak into the cylinder head, causing an oily, gummy deposit of carbon to form when the oil is burnt. If the Carburetor is too rich, the deposit will be dry and black like soot.

Always keep the oil at the correct level in the crankcase, never over-oil. Too much oil will soon cause the Muffler to get clogged up as well as cause carbon deposit in the cylinders. When the Muffler gets clogged, the exhaust gases cannot get away freely and a back pressure is set up in the cylinders. This prevents a full charge of fresh mixture being taken into the cylinders, and of course, results in a serious loss of power besides taking all the life and pep out of the engine

Remove the Muffler. If you can take it apart and can scrape all the carbon out, all right. If, however, the nuts are rusted on, then rap all around with a piece of wood to loosen as much carbon as possible. Now make up a strong solution of common washing soda and boiling water, and let the Muffler soak as long as possible in this mixture. Poke a piece of rag fastened to a wire through both ends of the muffler. Before replacing flush thoroughly with clear water.

If your engine forms a carbon deposit that has to be removed oftener than say 2,000 miles, find out the reason why the carbon forms so quickly and have the fault remedied. It is a disease that can be cured if you apply the proper remedy.

If you have been in the habit of pouring into your engine any kind of oil the garage man has in stock, and have been careless about the oil level in the crankcase, you know at least one reason why you have an excessive amount of carbon. Use the grade of oil recommended by the makers of your car, or on one of the charts issued by the large oil companies, and use a little care to see that the oil is kept at the correct level.

If the carbon is dry and black like soot, it is a certain indication that the Carburetor is adjusted too rich, cut it down to run with a leaner mixture.

If the cylinder walls are scored or out of round (a condition that can only be checked by a competent mechanic) the cylinders will have to be reground or lapped, and new rings fitted before you can cure the carbon forming habit in your engine.

Providing the piston rings are in good condition and the cylinders are not scored, carbon deposit can be prevented to a very large extent by the following precaution: Fill a bottle with a mixture of half kerosene and alcohol, then about three times a week, just after you come in from a run and while the engine is warm, squirt about a tablespoonful of the mixture into each cylinder. The kerosene and alcohol will soften the carbon and when you start up in the morning most of the carbon will be blown out.

Wide Scope Allowed Summer Wear Styles.

Suits for summer wear are being shown with sleeveless jackets. The dress underneath is usually a simple, one-piece frock with long bell sleeves to match the skirt and a bodice of material to match the lining of the jacket. The suit skirt may be either plain or accordion pleated.

Exquisite greens—almond green, sea green, Lanvin green, jade green—are the most popular shades of the moment, with sand and gray shades coming next for those whose taste is more conservative.

"Built-in-Canada" Studebaker

Light-Six Sedan—$2225

Built for hard service

The Studebaker Light-Six Sedan is built for years of hard service—service over country roads, up-country trails, city streets or anywhere you wish to drive!

It is comfortable, economical of fuel, sturdy and long-lived. Freedom from repairs is proved by Studebaker's sales of repair parts, which in 1922 averaged only $13 per car in operation.

Vibration, which is so destructive, particularly to closed cars, is practically eliminated in the Light-Six Sedan by the machining of the crankshaft and connecting rods on all surfaces—a feature of construction not to be found in any other car in Canada selling for less than $3500.

Beautiful in design, mechanically right, luxurious and adequately equipped—that briefly describes the Studebaker Light-Six Sedan.

Does a Good Tire Spare Your Motor?

Cars equipped with Firestone Cord Tires show a slower depreciation as well as a lower gasoline consumption.

This is noticeable particularly when driving away from main travelled highways. Longer mileage is only one of the advantages the Firestone user enjoys.

The contour and pattern of the massive non-skid tread provides a surer grip on the road, gives efficient traction without waste of power, and thus eases the heavy pull or sudden strain on your motor.

The staunch carcass is built up of cord plies insulated to prevent friction and strengthen wear-resistance.

The remarkable resilience of Firestone Cords absorbs lesser road shocks and roughness, lessens vibration and tension on both chassis and engine.

Why not get the added comfort and extra mileage insured by the special Firestone manufacturing methods carried on in Canada's most modern tire plant.

The steadily increasing demand for Firestone Cords, month by month, attests the fact that car owners realize as never before that extra mileage without additional cost is the one great source of tire economy.

HONEST DOUBT AND PROPHET HABAKKUK

A Sunday Meditation By Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, D.D.

There may be—I think there is—very much to depress the heart in the outward of today, but it cannot be compared with that which is suggested in the first chapter of Habakkuk—prevailing anarchy, and a silent God and a doubting man. Let no man be angry with Habakkuk for doubting. I will utter a paradox. It is only the man of faith who really doubts. There is no room for doubt unless you believe in God. What can you doubt? Blot God out, and there is no room for doubt. Everything becomes cent? That is where this man startcertain, mathematical, mechanical, twice two are four, and dust the ashes all that is. But if the eye has been lifted, and the soul made conscious of more than the dust, then there must come the question: What is God doing? Why is He so silent, only he did not start in association with men who find relief in doubt. He did not talk to other men about his doubts; he talked to God about them. That was his first step to the heights. It is the first upward step when a man doubts God and tell Him so. "How long shall I cry unto Thee?" The answer was very surprising, so surprising that we cannot understand the surprise until we get right back to that Hebrew atmosphere. God was employing forces outside the Convenant. That was the first answer. If some of us were to talk to God alone and quietly, it is probable that he would give the same answer to us today. "Do not measure all my doings by the statistics of the Christian Church." You may find Him at work beyond the borders which you have thought have confined Him. We do not like that. We still make our protest. But God may work outside the Convenant; He may employ the wrath of man to praise Him.

This man also finds his way higher through trials in which he waited. There was the approaching foe. The Chaldeans were actually coming. Presently they must sweep over the country, and everything must lie in desolation. But he sees now that God has acted. The most difficult thing of all, beloved, is "to set me upon the watch-tower." I think some of the injunctions in my Bible which sound most simple are the most difficult. Take this: "Be still, and know that I am God." It sounds so simple at first. There is a hint of comfort and quiet in it, until I come to do it. The most difficult exercise of faith is to wait —to wait patiently for Him. And that is what this man did; and in that waiting God came again and said: "Write the vision; make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.... The just shall live by faith."

It was through this final process of communion that he climbed to the height. "The just shall live by faith." Immediately the word was spoken the man answered it. He believed; he rested upon God. There was no explanation of the circumstances in the midst of which he found himself. He acted upon the secret whispered into his soul, and forthwith he broke into cries of rejoicing. All this was out of the rapture of a soul that by faith had taken hold of God, and knew—If I may use New Testament language to interpret and Old Testament experience—that all things were working together for good.

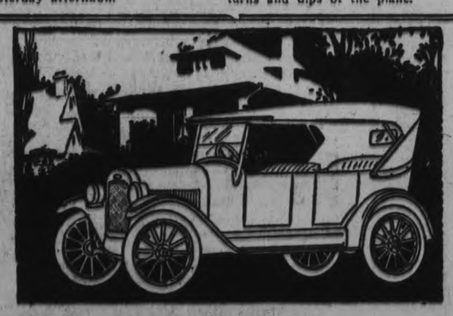
HONOLULU, May 11. — Laura Lillis, nine years old, has earned the distinction of being the premiet aviatrix of Hawaii as the result of a recent flight with a commercial aviator who established a new altitude record for the islands at 7,100 feet.

Laura, the daughter of Captain W. J. Lillis, of the Honolulu traffic squad, feels safer 5,000 feet above the ground than she does at crowded street intersections, according to her further rise, the average rate being when she was six years old, and she has been up frequenly in the past three years

Lillis has accompanied his daughter on each of her trips, and said that she has never displayed the slightest sign of fear at any of the turns and dips of the plane.



Chevrolet Challenges Comparison for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET is the world's lowest priced fully equipped car. It is not necessary to spend a dollar more than the purchase price to make it complete. There are no extras to buy.

Chevrolet economy is still further evidenced after its purchase. It costs least per mile in consumption of gasoline, oil and tires. It also costs least per year for maintenance.

Every Chevrolet model delivers the most economical transportation available in motoring. Yet, in construction and appearance, it is a credit to its builders and a source of continuous gratification to its owners.

Before you buy a car at any price be sure to investigate and thoroughly examine Chevrolet.

LIFE OF ISABELLA VALENCY CRAWFORD

Subject of An Address by Miss Katharine Wallis at Meeting of Canadian Literature Study Club

At the final meeting in the series of literary evenings given this year by the Canadian Literature Study Club, the following paper on the life and work of Isabella Valancy Crawford, one of Peterboro's former literary lights, and now acclaimed as one of the most outstanding of Canadian poetesses of an earlier day, was given by Miss Katherine E. Wallis:

In a study of Canadian literature such as we have undertaken this Winter, under Mrs. Petit's guidance there can be nothing more interesting to Peterborough people than the life and book of one of the greatest of women poets, who for some fifteen years lived first in Lakefield, then Peterborough—Isabella Valancy Crawford.I vaguely remember her coming to St. Johns' Church a slight, colourless, unnoticeable figure, she seems to have made few friends, and the notice she attracted in Peterborough was a mocking and derisive one.

The idea of an unknown girl calling herself anything so unusual, as "Valancy" above all things, writing poetry seemed to the good people a most ridiculous and presumptous thing. I remember the very mocking comments and, also I have heard the confession of a child who ran and called after her the name which seemed to strike as an epithet of derision.

The family Dr. and Mrs. Crawford, and twelve children had come out from Ireland in the late fifties, and settled at Paisley, in Bruce county. Here were left nine little graves when the move to Lakefield was made. In 1875 Dr. Crawford, the poets' father, who had practised his profession for a few years in Peterborough, succumbed, last sister had died previously, and some years after Miss Crawford and her Mother moved to Toronto. There with her untiring pen this brilliant writer strove to gain her living till her premature death from heart-failure in 1887.

Superficially regarded could any life seem more filled with sordid misery, the poverty, the wholesale harvest of death among the brothers and sisters, the dragging to one village after another, the utter lack of appreciation even to mockery, no congenial friendship, her failing health, the struggle to keep herself and her mother and finally death without one laurel of success.

We look back and feel sick and humiliated tha a great part of the tragedy took place here in our own town. Several years after her death an article by Mrs. Macfarlane Wilson, brought her to the notice of the reading public, and in 1905 Mr. John Garvin, brought out an edition of her collected works, (for which you will I believe ask in vain at the Peterborough Public Library). It was also thanks to Mr. Garvin that a monument was erected to her memory.

We would hardly like to think we were like the Pharisees who "build the towbs of the prophets and garnish the sepulehres of the righteous" and yet, when one thinks of our tardy and scanty recoguition of our great poet, these words recur to one's mind.

And yet search her writtings through and through, read her poems from cover to cover, and you will find no word of tragedy, nor despair, nor discouragement; and no perception of loneeliness; nor poverty; nor sordidness; but the most virile optimism, the modest faith in humanity at its best, the splendid joy of a glorious vision—Listen to this—

"Joys' are immortal;
"She hath a fiery fibre in her flesh,
"That will not droop or die; so let her chant
"The paeons of the dead, where holy grief
"Hath, trembling, thrust the feeble mist aside
"That veils her dead, and in the wondrous clasp
' Of re-possession ceases to be grief.
"Joy's ample voice shall still roll over all,
"And chronicle the heroes to young hearts,
"Who knew them not."

Is there any sound of brooding grief or sorrow in those vivid joyous words—or in these?

"Who curseth sorrow knows her not at all.
Dark matrix she, from which the human soul,
Has its last birth; whence it, with musty views,
Close knitted in her blackness, issues out
Strong for immortal toil up such great heights,
As crown o'er crown rise through Eternity.
Without the load deep clamous of her wail,
The iron of her hands, the biting brine
Of her black tears, the soul, but lightly built of indeterminate spirit; like a mist
Would lapse to chaos in soft gilded dreams,
As mists' fade in the gazing ofthe sun.
Sorrow, dark Mother of the Soul, arise
Be crowned with spheres where thy blest children dwell.
Who but for thee, were not. No lesser seat be thine, thou Helper of the universe,
Ban planet on planet filed—thou instrument
Close clasped within the great Creative Hand!"

Certainly Tennyson never excelled these lines in thy time, dignity or nobility.

And just as noble and dignified are the lines which the rigors of a Canadian winter inspired; the beauty of nature, never seems to have associated itself in her mind with hardships, and suffering, and yet hardship and suffering there must have been, but what she saw in the cold of the Winter was this:

"High grew the snow beneath the low-hung shy,
And all was silent in the wilderness;
In trance of stillness nature heard her God.
Re-building her spent fires, and veiled her face
While the Great Worker brooded o'er His Work."

And the cutting down of the forget to make room for the new homes inspired this splendid song:

"Bite deep and wide, O axe the tree!
What doth my bold voice promise me?"
"I promise thee all joyous things,
That furnish forth the lives of kings;
"For every silver ringing blow,
Cities and palaces shall grow."
"Bite deep and wide, O axe the tree!
Tell wider prophecies to me."
"When rust hath gnawed me deep and red,
A nation strong shall lift his head.
His crown the very heavens shall smite,
Aeons shall build him in his might."
"Bite deep and wide, O axe the tree!
Bright Seer, help on thy prophecy!"

She saw with the joyous optimism of the tree poet what would replace the forest when the axe hath done its work.

"Max smote the snow-weighted trees, and lightly laughed,
"See friend," he cried to one that looked and smiled,
"My axe and I we do immortal tasks;
"We build up nations—this my axe and I."

My quotations till now except those beginning "Joys an immortal," from "Malcolm's Katie", her most important poem and the one most directly inspired by her early settler's life.

Through all the strain and stress of sickness, sorrow, and poverty Dr. and Mrs. Crawford had carried on the education of their daughters and Isabella must of have been a remarkably good classical scholar to visualise as she did the life and conditions of the greeks in her poem "The Helot" which Ethelwyn Wetherald, her sister poet, speaks of as "perhaps the most magnificent expression of Miss Crawford's genius".

It seems to myself nothing short of marvellous that this great poet should have been able here in a little terrace house in Stewart Street or over a grocery in King St., Toronto, to write with such force on such utterly different conditions as those in "The Helot", "Old Spookers' Pass" "The Kings Garments" and others.

One marvels at the vivid exuberant imagery which seems to wait crowding and joggling by her pen. No less than at the advanced modernity of many of her views at a time when the Victorian conventions were strongest. Notably in her assertion of the dignity and nobility of labour—Vide "Malcolm's Katie."

"I heard him tell how the first field upon his farm was ploughed. He and his brother Reuben, stalwart lads yoked themselves, side by side, to the new plough:

Their weaker Father in the grey of life.
But rather the wan age of poverty.
Than many winters, in large knaried hands,
The plunging handles held; with mighty strains,
They drew the ripping beak through knotted sod,
Through tortuous lanes of blackened stumps,
And past great flaming brush-heaps, sending out
Fierce Summers, beating on their swollen brows.
O such a battle! Had we heard of serfs,
Driven to like hot conflict with the soil,
Armi s had marched and navies swiftly sailed.
To burst their gyves. But hers's the little point,
The polished diamond first on which spins
The wheel of differences-They OWNED the soil,
And fought for love, dear love of wealth and power,
And honest ease and fair esteem of men, and power.
One's blood beats at it!"

"Yet you said such fields were all inglorious, "Katie wondering, said:
"Inglorious? yes! They make no promises,
Of star or garter, or the thundering guns
That tell the earth her warriors are dead.
Inglorious! Ay! the battle done and won
Means not a throne propped up with bleaching bones,
A country saved with sinking seas of blood,
A flag torn from the foe with wounds and death,
Or Commerce, with her housewife foot upon
Colossal bridge of slaughtered savages.
The cross laid on her brawny shoulders and
In one sly, mighty hand her reeking sword,
And in the other all the woven che ats,
From her dishonest looms. Nay, none of these,
It nears—four walls, perhaps a lowly roof;
Thine in a peaceful pasture; modest fields;
A man and women standing hand in hand
In hale old age, who ,looking o'er the land
Say, thank the Lord, it is all mine and thine."

Also in the Helot she assert the liberty of the individual—

"Tryant, chargeless stand the gods,
Nor their calm might yielded thee;
Not beneath thy chains and rods
Dies man's god-gift, Liberty!

Brutes ward lasth the Helots hold
Brain and soul and clay in gyves,
Coin their blood and sweat in gold,
Build my cities on their lives.
Comes a day the spark divine
Answers to the gods who gave;
Fierce the hot flames pant and shine
In the bruised breast of the slave.
Changeless stand the gods!—nor
Throws the answers their behest,
Feels the might of their decree,
In the blind rage of his breast.
Tyrant, tremble when ye treed
Down the servile Helot clods,
Under despot heel is bred
The white anger of the gods.
Thro' the shackle canered dust,
Thro' the gyves soul, foul and dark,
Force they, changeless gods and just,
Up the bright, eternal spark.

Till, like lightening vast and fierce,
On the land its terror smiles;
Till its flames the tyrant pierces
Till the deust the despot bites."

I could not end this very slight review without a mention of her faculty of realisation of the indwelling spirit every living thing which I think must have compensated greatly the lack of human friendship so intense and vivid was it, thus:

"Said the Daisy""

"O never came so glad a morn before!
So rosy dimpling burst the infant light,
So crystal pure the air the meadows o'er,
The lark with such young rapture took his flight,
The round world seemed not older by an hour,
Than mine own daisy self! I laughed to see
How, when her first roses paled and died,
The blue sky smiled, and decked her azure lea
With daisy clouds, white, pink fingers, just like me!"

"Said the Silklark"

'O soft, small clouds, the dim sweet dawn adorning
Swan-like a-sailing on its tender grey,
Why dost thou, dost thou float
So high the winged, wild note
Of silvery lamentation from my dark and pulsing throat
May never reach thee,
Tho' every note beseech thee
To bend my white wings downward thro' the smiling of the morning,
And by the black wires of my prison lightly stray.

"Said the Wind"

"Come with me said the wind
To the Ship within the dock,
"Or dost thou fear the shock
Of the ocean hidden rock,
When tempests strike thee full and leave thee blind;

When low the milky clouds
Blackly tangle in thy shrouds
And every strained cord
Finds a voice and shrills a word."

"Said the Canoe"

"My master twain made me a bed
Of pine-boughs resinous, and cedar;
Of moss, a soft aand gentle breeder
Of dreams of rest;
The darkness built its big warm walls
Close round the camp, and at its curtain
Pressed shapes, thin, woven and uncertain
As white locks of tall waterfalls."

And hear these two last stanzas of her "Harvest Song."

"But O the little humming song
That sang among the sheavss!
'Twas grander than the airy march
That rattled thro' the leaves,
And prouder, louder than the deep,
Bold clanging of the waves:

"The lives of men, the ives of men
With every sheaf are bound!
We are the blessing which annuls
The curse upon the ground!
And he who reaps the Golden Grain
The Golden Dove hath found."

This "The mother's soul "she shews quite clearly that what we call "inanimate" nature was to her indeed animated by an understanding even sympathetic soul:

"But the pine tree bent its head
And the wind at the door-post said;
"O child, thy mother is dead!"
"But the fir tree shook its cones,
And loud cried the pitiful stones:
"Wolf Death has thy Mother's bones!"

"And the long white tapers shook and bowed,
And they said with their tongues of gold,
To the ice lumps of the grave mold:
"How heavy are ye and cold!"

"The wind came up from the red-eyed east
And bore in its arms the chill, soft snows.
They said to each tree: "Sere
Are the hearts the Mother held dear;
Forgotten, her babe plays here!"

"The child with the tender snowflakes played,
And the wind on its fingers twined his hair;
And still by the tall brown grave he stayed,
Alone in the churchyard lean and bare.
The sods on the nigh grave cried
To the mother's white breast inside:
"Lie still; in thy deep rest bide!"

"Her breast lay stil like a long-chilled stone,
Her soul was out on the bleak, grey day.

"A butterfly to the child's breast flew
Fluttered its wings on his sweet round cheek
The butterfly flew, followed the child,
Lured by the showy torch of its wings;
The wind sighed after them soft and wild
Still the stars wedded night with golden rings;
Till the frost upreared its head,
And the ground to it groaned and said:
"The feet of the child are dead!"

Note: The Eastern Empire the soul of the deceased is said to hover, in the shape of a bird or butterfly, close to the body until after the burial.*

"The moon to the pine tree stole
And, silver-lipped, said to its bole:
"How strange is the Mother's soul!"
"The wings of the butterfly grew out,
To the Mother's arms, long, soft and white;
She foldedthem warm her babe about,
She kissed his lips into berries bright,
She warmed his soul or her breast;
And the east called out to the West:
"Now the Mother's soul will rest!"

"A strange wind swept over oak and pine.
The trees to the home roof said:
" 'Tis but the airy rush and tread
Of the angels greeting thy dead."

Poor poet nature must often have seemed more friendly than her fellow-humans. I finish with what to me is her most beautiful poem.

The Rose

"This Rose was given to man for this.
He, sudden seeing it in later years,
Should swift remember love's first lingering kiss
And grief last lingering tears.
"Or being blind should feel its yearning soul
Knit all its piercing perfume round his own,
Till he should see on memory's ample scroll
All roses he had known.
"Or being hard perchance his fingers tips
Careless might touch the satin of its cup,
And he should feel a dead babe's budding lips
To his lips lifted up.

"Or being deaf and smitten with its star,
Should on a sudden, almost hears a lark
Rush singing up—the nightingale afar
Sing thro' the dew-bright dark.

"Or sorrow-lost in paths that round and round
Circle old graves, its keem and vital breath
Should call to him within the years' bleak bound
O Life, and not of Death."

HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN RECOMMENDS EXERCISE

Conduces to Concentration Which He Said Was Basis of Superiority.

OTTAWA, [illegible] Canadian Press. — That physical exercise and indulgence in healthy sports enabled man to develop self control, to deliver the best that was within him, and bring it to bear in conflicts and combats of life, was emphasized by Right Hon. Arthur Meighen last evening, speaking at the annual banquet of the Y.M.C.A. Physical De-Department.

Physical exercise contributed to one's usefulness by enabling one to concentrate. For if a man could not concentrate he would never excel, continued Mr. Meighen.

DO HOUSEWIVES NEED EXERCISE?

Housework Properly Carried Out Will Keep the Housewife Fit.

MUSKOGEE, OKLA., May 12.—The housewife who goes out of her home for exercise to reduce, build up or keep fit, is overlooking the possibilities of her own work.

For there are wonderful opportunities for physical development right in the daily chores of the home, says Miss Kathryn Sterling, physical culture supervisor in the city schools of Msukogee.

"Many women" says Miss Sterling, "feel they cannot spare the time for prescribed exercises, but they can get just the results they want at home, by systematizing their work and concentrating on their muscles.

"There's sweeping for instance.. Nothing could be better for the back and arms. It brings into play all the muscles of the shoulders of you move the broom, or sweeper, properly. This is where concentration comes in. Keep your mind on your muscles and let the sweeping take care of itself.

Rhythm in Work

"Making beds causes one to do a good deal of bending. Why not bend up and down rhythmically and remember that it is because you want to reduce the abdomen that you are making up beds?

"Going up and down stairs a dozen times a day is the very thing to acquire shapely legs. Don't bend over nor run to over-tax the heart, but hold yourself as erect as possible and keep a steady elastic gait."

"For the development or reduction the arms there is washing. Put your mind on that double chin or that gob of fat on the back of your neck and you will be surprised at the results of faithful concentration and a few simple exercises."

Here are more rules for the housewife, from Miss Sterling:

"Don't overwork, until you are so tired that you feel more like crying than smiling. Another day is coming.

"Smile, don't grouch. It takes several more muscles moves to frown than to smile.

"Keeping busy keeps one's mind occupied and you will not have time to be otherwisw than happy.

"The housewife is wise who systematizes her work so that she can find time for other interests, and while she can get all the exercise she needs out of her work, she should have some fresh air every day."

PATH TO PEACE A POSSIBLE RESULT OF BIG DEBACLE

League of Nations Agent in Rebuilding Austria Has Hopeful View—Austrians Are Likeable.

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS

VIENNA, May 12.—"A candle has been lighted in Austria for the salvation of Europe That candle may yet show Europe the way to peace."

In this way the commissioner general of the League of Nations here, Dr. A. R. Zimmerman, former burgomaster of Rotterdam, Holland, spoke of the international co-operation between nations—not individuals—for the reconstruction of practically down-and-out Austria.

Dr. Zimmerman is in absolute charge of Austria's finances, in fact is a sort of benevolent dictator here, responsible to the League and to no one else.

He accepted the Vienna post for three months, but now he has given up his home in Holland, his work and all connections there to put into his job of saving Austria for the Austrians everything he's got.

Likeable Type

And that's a lot. He is 54, but looks youngerlooks like a clean-cut American business man—the type who is president of everything, at the head of every progressive move for the good of this city, state or country and mayor of his city by popular demand—not by political machines. Magnetic. Practical—yet with ideals. Snappy brown eyes—almost black. Tendency to baldness. Youngish-looking mustache. Good dresser. A man to trust to the limit. That's Zimmerman.

"Europe," he told me during the talk I had with him at his office in the old "Common Ministry of Finance" for Austro-Hungary, Johaannesgasse, "is groping, groping in the dark, trying to find the way out.

"Here in Vienna we have lighted a candle—just a tiny flame—but with all the darkness in Europe today it ought to make itself seen.

Co-operating Now

"Here in Austria, for the first time in the history of the world, we see nations unselfishly co-operating to save another nation. Austria's former enemies are here now trying to help her get on her feet.

"Austria's recent enemies have postponed indefinitely all claims against Austria whether for relief credits, reparations, obligations or other.

"They have guaranteed the political independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty of Austria.

"They have joined together to raise money necessary to tide the country over the first critical months, and to obtain additional credits in the money markets of the world to see Austria through until her own budget balances.

Peace is Aim

"They have done, and are doing, all these things here in Austria with but one single object in view—the general peace and welfare.

"They are pledged not to seek, and none is seeking, in the slightest degree—any special economic or financial advantage in Austria.

"It is the first time such a thing has been known to happen. It is a new spirit. It is a candle showing the way.

"Austria's two main requirements now are, first, foreign credits; second, a strong government.

"I am very hopeful. I think we shall succeed. I am in the fight, heart and soul. I am not young, but I am prepared to give my life to the success of the undertaking.

"For, you see, Europe is groping in the dark. And we have lighted a candle. We must not let that candle go out."

Canadian Building Forecast for 1923

According to all the most reliable indications, 1923 is going to turn out a "boom year" in the Canadian building trades. A busy February always means a July with all the work that it can comfortably handle, and sometimes even more. For this reason, the wide-spread optimism which prevails today in building circles is more than justified. During February, 1923, construction contracts actually awarded in Canada amounted to $13,311,800, as compared with $10,718,300 for February, 1923 — an increase of almost 25%. The value of proposed work reported for the first time in February totalled $41,231,400. It is conservatively predicted that at least $365,000,000 will be expended on new construction during 1923. All in all, these encouraging figures give us ample reason to believe that the gloomy period of business depression is now definitely a thing of the past—it has "died the death" and there are very few who mourn its demise.

One cause of this increased activity in building is the stabilization of prices in the industry. As long as costs of construction were dropping, many people put off building for fear of losing money through the shrinkage of existing building values incidental to a rapid price deflation. This unsteady condition of construction costs is now at an end. Prices have reached rock bottom and if anything are on the upward trend.

On this subject ofprices, it is worth while to quote the statement of MacLean Building Reports, Ltd.: "For municipalities with public utility extensions to install, for business houses with office and manufacturing expansions in contemplation, and perhaps most of all for private apartment house dwellers and rent payers who have long dreamed of a certain little house of their own—for all these the problem is—Build now or wait further possible declines in costs? In reply to which a majority of considerations seem to suggest an affirmative answer . . . Labor has settled down to a sound basis of production, and the flow of money into building channels is rapidly increasing. Many of the big projects under way have been undertaken only after the investor has come to realize that the major conditions in the building field are now favorable. There is much wisdom in the advice being given at the present juncture by architects to their prospective clients—"Build now and avoid the rush!"

As has been already pointed out, this situation is particularly encouraging from the point of view of the would-be-home-owner. In spite o all the building that has been goin on since the War, a majority of th cities and towns of the Dominio have not yet solved their housin problems. It is therefore interesting to note that $2,854,000 or 21.4% of the February building budget wen for residental buildings.

A valueable side-light on the home building situation is thrown by Mr M. L. Caton, Vice-President of Th Barret Company, Ltd., one of Can ada's largest manufacturers of al kinds of roofings and roofing materials.

"Asphalt strip shingles," says Mr Caton, "are doing their bit to kee down building costs here in the Do minion. The principal item in th erection cost of any building is, o course, wages to labor. The hig wages now paid to many trade are due primarily to a serious shortag of men. As I am most vitally interested in roofings, I shall confine my self to that branch of the industry.

"As there is no near prospect o reducing the present high wages, th burden of cutting down costs lie with the manufacturers. And many of them are bearing this burden nobly. For example, take the case o prepared shingles. These shingles save money in three ways. First their initial cost is much less than many inferior forms of roofing. Sec ondly, they are fabricated in strip of three so that a roofer can la them almost twice as rapidly as sin gle shingles—there are only one half as many nails to drive. In thi respect, we have more than done our part in meeting the labor shortage Thirdly, as these strip shingles are made in three rich natural colors red, green and blue-black, there is no expense of painting. And a fourth saving occurs when it is only a ques tion of re-roofing, for strip shingles may be laid right over the old, worn out wooden shingles.

"This four-fold economy has not been achieved as a result of cheapening the product. Thanks to a thick mineral surface firmly imbedded in a heavy felt base, that is both saturated and coated with asphalt, these strip shingles possess waterproof and fireproof qualities in the highest degree. And their beauty of appearance makes them an attractive addition to any home. For all these reasons, I feel justified in claiming that if every material that goes to make up a finished house were able to offer the same serviceability at such a minimum cost as these mineral-faced strip shingles, the high cost of home-building would have vanished into thin air."

U. S. Golfers Were Eliminated--Belmonts Won Soft Ball Title

BELMONTS WON GAME AND CHAMPIONSHIP OF SOFT BALL LEAGUE

Had An Easy Victory Over Canadian Woollens Team Last Evening—Harrison Made Two Records.

SCORE WAS 15 TO 3.

The Belmonts are this spring's soft ball champs, winning the title last evening when they defeated the Woollens by the score of 15-3 in the second game of the play-off series.

"Hap" Harrison, because of Holyman's injury, was called upon to do the twirling for the Belmonts. 'Hap' was right there with the goods, setting up two new pitching records for future twirlers to shoot at. He retired sixteen batters on strikes, topping by one the previous record hung up by Gordon Matthews, the Rotarian pitcher. He allowed but one hit. Thus also going better by one than the previous record of two hits. Harrison had only one bad innings, the eighth. In that frame he walked two and the only hit, a two-bagger, was collected from him. He used a fast ball and had splendid control.

Dawson started the twirling for the Woollens and went well, but he received poor support. He was "yanked" in favour of Russell in the fourth. Russell got along handily until the seventh, when the Belmonts hit him hard. Dawson resumed the pitching burden and finished the game going strong.

The Woollens were not the same team that went through the Mercantile section without a loss, as far as the brand of ball they played was concerned. They showed badly the need of their star battery, "Benny" McLean and "Cy" Hopkins' guiding hand and baseball brains. They often fielded the ball cleanly and then pulled a boner by not knowing where to throw it. 'Lefty' Turner held up the receiving end of the battery in good style. Connors player left field in good style, catching some hard ones after long runs. Russell collected the Woollens' only hit, a two-bagger into the entrance way.

The Belmonts had an easy night, not having to strain themselves at all in their fielding efforts. They used their bats with good results, however, clouting out long hits. Harrison had four hits in six appearances. Stan Lowe was next with three hits, two going for doubles, in six trips to the plate.

The first frame went by scoreless and hitless. In the second innings the Belmonts starting in testing the ball with wallops and the Woollens started to roll up the errors. This continued during the remainder of the game. The Woollens managed to chase three across in the eighth when Harrison weakened slightly and the Belmonts' fielding let up a little. Line-ups:

Belmonts — Jobbitt, 3b.; Stuart, ab.; Heckman, l.f.; Lowe, 1b.; Haskill, c.; Harrison, p.; Batten, s.s.; Thompson, s.s.; Fanning, r.f.

Woollens— Russell, 3b.; Turner, c.; Dawson, p.; Legros, 1b.; Anthony, s.s.; Stiles, s.s.; Clarke, 2b.; Hilliard, r.f. Connors, l.f.

Gunners Challenge Champions to Game

The Gunners, the team that gave the Belmonts such a hard battle in the club section finals, only losing to them by one run, last evening challenged the champions of the soft ball league. This challenge will likely be accepted by the Belmonts. An admittance fee will be charged for this game. The proceeds will go towards the purchase of nets to be placed to protect spectators of the soft ball games.

THE A.A.U. AND CHARLEY PADDOCK

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, May 12.—From a neutral position on the outside, it looks like Charley Paddock, the world's greatest sprinter, is being harassed by the controlling body of amateur athletics, if he is not actually under direct personal fire.

Since he returned from the Olympic games in Antwerp, three years ago, Paddock has lived under a broadside of criticism because he would not show himself in the east. He had good reasons, but his critics closed their ears to what they chose to construe as "alibis."

Paddock then made a lot of sensational records which were vouched for by the Southern Pacific Association and by Robert S. Weaver, then president of the A.A.U. The records were not accepted, because the marks credited to him were considered as "impossible." Some assertions were cast upon the timers when it was hinted that none of them agreed on the records.

Then Paddock accepted an invitation to sprint in the games of the University of Paris, and the A.A.U. arose in its dignity and said he could not go, although it was admitted that the organization had no jurisdiction over Paddock when he was competing as a college athlete. At the same time permission was granted to the Yale-Harvard team to make a trip to England. This action must have caused a loud laugh at Yale and Harvard, as the A.A.U. has no more say over athletics at Yale and Harvard than Commissioner Landis has.

Paddock then sailed and it was threatened he would be declared a professional ,but the grounds were not made known.

Since he sailed, Paddock has been censured because he did not compete in the Pennsylvania relay carnival.

The fact of the matter is that Paddock could not compete in the Penn carnival and he was barred from taking part in the inter-collegiate championships, the only two events of importance in the east.

The University of Southern California wanted to send a team, including Paddock, to the intercollegiates this month and to do so it was necessary to be granted a membership in the Inter-Collegiate Amateur Athletic Association of America, the governing body of college athletics in the east, which is more familiarly known as the "I.C. Four A's."

Southern California's application was turned down on the technical grounds that the application was not accompanied by a detailed statement of the university's eligibility rules.

The Southern California officials naturally took this as a personal slap at them and they resented it. Feeling that the University of Pennsylvania was one of the leading bodies of the I.C.A.A.A.A. and that Penn must have supported the move to se aside the application of the Pacific Coast college for membership, the athletic officials of Southern California would not enter Paddock in the Penn relays and thus provide a big gate attraction for one of the universities that would not allow him to compete in the inter-collegiates.

So, Paddock had no place to run in the east this season, and he decided to go to Paris.

It has developed that there was more than "red tape" behind the act of the inter-collegiate association in denying membership to the University of Southern California.

From a source, the reliability of which cannot be questioned, it has been learned that several letters were written to the association from alumni of eastern colleges on the coast that Southern California should not be allowed to join the association.

One of these protests came from a former Princeton track star, now in California. He wrote that Howard Drew and Alma Richards were members of the Southern California track team that was to be sent to the inte.collegiates at Philadelphia the last of this month and that both were ineligible. Upon the information received from these sources, the application for membership was turned down and Southern California was barred from the meet.

Just before he sailed for Paris, Paddock told the writer that Richards and Drew were not members of the team and that they were not to be sent east for the meet. He said that Richards had competed this year in an independent meet and that he had worn a U.S.C. jersey because he had no other suit and that the letters were written

U. S. GOLFERS ARE OUT OF RUNNING

Wethered and Harris the Finalists in Meet For British Title — Ouimet Eliminated.

DEAL, England, May 12.—(Canadian Press.)—British golfers yesterday got rid of the last of the outsiders who sought the British amateur golf championship.

Roger Wethered, favorite with the galleries, and long a golfer of the finest type, and Robert Harris, Scotch, who has come close to winning the amateur title several times, will meet in the final test.

Wethered yesterday afternoon eliminated the last of the invaders from the United States when he vanquished Francis Ouimet, Boston, 2 up and one to play.

Douglas Grant, a resident of London and a citizen of the United States, lost the other semi-final to the short sturdy Scotchman by a score of 5 and 4.

Ouimet earlier in the day had won from Cyril Tolley, favored to reach the semi-finals, and considered one of the best of the British golfers. He went into the afternoon match with Wethered a favorite to win. His defeat marked the end of his third attempt to capture the amateur title.

Wethered played surely and steadily for the firsft hour and half, and in contrast to the perfection displayed by his opponent, appeared to wobble and waver. The young Englishman deserved his victory.

Wethered had Ouimet four down by the time he reached the thirteenth. Here the Bostonian rallied. He succeeded in winning the fourteenth and fifteenth holes and barely missed winning the sixteenth when his putt, curved to dodge a quarter stymie, ran around the rim of the cup and refused to drop. The end came on the next green, when both men took a four.

Ouimet and Wethered went out in a thunder storm and a heavy wind from the southwest.

Wethered won the first hole, 4 to 5, Ouimet failing to sink his putt. They halved the second in fours. They halved the third in fives. Ouimet laid Wethered a stymie on the fourth and squared the match when Wethered knocked Ouimet's ball into the cup. The next two holes were squared, but on the seventh with both in the rough on their drives, Ouimet's second was trapped and he was beyond the green with his fourth.

He almost got a 40-foot putt to square the match, but lost the hole. The eighth was halved.

On the ninth Wethered hooked into the crowd but the ball bounced from a spectator's head to the fairway. Ouimet missed his third putt on this green.

With the tenth squared, Wethered went on playing steadily. His first putt was sunk on the eleventh, twelfth and thirteetnh, when he became four up with five to go.

Ouimet's poor putting lost the twelfth, where he took three tries on the green for a six. He also missed a short one on the thirteenth.

The thunder storm in which the match started lasted until two holes had been played, after which the sun shone between intermittent showers. The two finalists are Britishers who represent the new and old school of golf. Robert Harris, a Scotchman, was an accomplished golfer before Roger Wethered, the Englishman, was born.

Harris, who has been dubbed by the experts "The Surprise of the Championship," is a stock broker. He was born in Dundee and is 41 years of age. When 20 years old Harris won his first cup, presented by the Dundee Telegraph. He has captured several more trophies since then, including the Gold Vase, presented by Golf Illustrated, which he won in 1911 and 1912.

Against such apparent prejudice there is only one thing for Paddock to do, and that is to keep his head. He is doing that very well and he has been conducting himself so gentlemanly that he has won plenty of support for himself if it ever come to a show-down.

LACROSSE

The first game of the season in this district is being played at Hastings this afternoon between the home club's juveniles and the Desceronto youngsters.

This week's weather has been decidedly unfavorable for practices, but it can't last all spring. Next week should produce three or four good workouts.

The Hastings intermediates have been presented by a friend with a complete set of new sweaters. Support of that kind comes easy on the club's expenses.

It has been suggested that the local juvenile team be built up around George Mein's Athletics of last year, retaining their name and filling up the ranks with boys from other teams in the juvenile city league last year. It is only an idea to be considered and it might meet with general approval.

"Bill" Tate of the Hastings intermeditaes is succeeded by Bill Clapper in the management. Tate was captain of the juniors last year and certainly made good.

SEVERAL RECORDS AT PHILADELPHIA

"Cy" Williams Hit Three Homers in Game With St. Louis—St. Louis Has 70 Hits in Four-Game Series.

PHILADELPHIA, May 12. — (Canadian Press.)—Several records were broken or equalled at the National League Park yesterday when Philadelphia defeated St. Louis 20 to 14 in a hard hitting contest.

Ten home runs were made by the two teams, which is said to be a National League record for one game. "Cy" Williams hit three of them, tying the mark of "Butch" Henline, a team-mate of the Philadelphia slugger, made last year.

Williams now has twelve circuit clouts for the season and leads both major leagues in this respect. His third home run yesterday was in the left field bleachers, the only time he has ever performed this feat.

St. Louis made 22 hits, which gives the visitors 70 hits for the four-game series, beating the record of 59 hits for four contests, made by Boston recently. The 14 runs made by the Cardinals gives them 41 for the series, beating Boston's mark by one run.

Mokan hit two home runs, both times with two men on base, and doubled on another trip to the plate. Mann also made two home runs, while Bottomley had four hits, one a double. Eight pitchers were used by the two teams and 27 players participated in the first contest. Score:

Building Stadium For Dempsey Fight.

SHELBY, Mont., May 12.—(Canadian Press).—That fight fans in western Canada will attend the Dempsey-Gibbons heavy weight championship fight here July 4, in large numbers, seems assured. Yesterday a man who said he represented fans in Swift Current, Sask., deposited $10,000 for tickets for his town.

A million feet of lumber has been purchased for the construction of the arena and carpenters are already at the preliminary work.

While Canadians will be welcome attendants at the fight, the Federal authorities are preparing to repel an expected invasion by bootleggers from the Dominion.

Addison K. Lusk, prohibition director for Montana, said yesterday he had prepared for more men to curb liquor violations.

FOOTBALL 100 YEARS AGO

RUGBY, May 12.—(Associated Press)—One hundred years ago, the "Rugby" game of football was evolved during the course of a game at Rugby School, which has just erected a tablet to commemorate the event. The inscription reads:

"This stone commemorates the exploit of William Webb Ellis, who with a fine disregard for the rules of football, as played in his time, first took the ball in his arms and ran with it, thus originating the distinctive feature of the Rugby game. A.D. 1823."

Mike McTigue Has Arrived in New York.

NEW YORK, May 12.— (Canadian Press.)—Mike McTigue, who left the United States some months ago unnoticed, returned on the Berengaria yesterday as light heavyweight champion of the world to a welcome fit for a Nabob.

The conqueror of Battling Siki arrived to a merry Irish tune played by a band. As he trotted down the gang plank, a crow of admirers captured him, lifted him over their heads and set up a great cheering.

McTigue intends to go into training immediately for his scheduled match for the title with Carpentier in this country on July 14. He declared he would meet any light heavyweight in the world, in a decision contest.

Questions

ONE—Is it possible for a batsman to reach first base on a foul fly ball that is caught?

TWO—Why doesn't the infield fly rule apply with a runner on first base only?

THREE—If for some reason a player fails to bat during an entire round of the batting order, what happens?

FOUR—Is there any limit to the distance a runner can run in order to avoid a fielder making a play on a batted ball?

FIVE—If a batsman try his best to dodge a wild pitch, and the ball goes fair, what is the ruling?

Answers

ONE—Yes, a batsman can reach first on a foul fly that is caught, if while making such a hit the the catcher interferes with him.

TWO—Because there is never a chance of making a double play, if the batsman will run out his hit as he is supposed to.

THREE—If for some reason he should fail to hit during an entire round and the mistake is not properly discovered, the batsman simply takes his regular turn the next time around.

FOUR—There is no limit. He simply must avoid interfering with the fielder, and can run as wide as he desires to do so, before said fielder gets his hands on the ball.

FIVE—Under a change of rules made in 1919, it was treated as an accident and counted as nothing. The majors, however, went back to the old ruling shortly after the start of 1920, which made such a happening a fair if the ball went fair and foul if foul.

DEAL, May 12—Canadian Press—Playing teams of ten golfers each have been selected for the Walker Cup Tournament at St. Andrew's Friday and Saturday of next week. From these ten eligibles eight will be finally nominated the day before the tournament begins.

The British are: Robert Harris (Captain); John Caven, E. W. E. Holderness, C. V. L. Hooman, W. W. McKenzie, W. A. Murray, Cyril Tolley, Roger Wethered and John Wilson with O. C. Bristowe in reserve.

The name of a reserve man for the British is for the reason that Holderness former British champion, may be unable to get leave from his employers to play.

Those from the United States are Robert A. Gardner, (Captain); S. Davison Herron; D. R. Johnston; Maxwell R. Marston, John F. Neville, Francis Ouimet, George V. Rotan, Jess Sweetser, Dr. O. F. Willing and Fred Wright.

WILLARD AND FIRPO

NEW YORK, May 12.—Jess Willard, the biggest piece Uncle Sam has on ring feet, and Luis Firpo, the huge Argentine, have been made heavy favorites to emerge from the pile of beef that will be thrown in the ring at the Yankee stadium today, as "logical contenders" for the heavyweight championship.

Willard has been established as a 13-10ll favorite over Floyd Johnson and Firpo money is being offered at 3-to-1 with no Jack McAuliffe cash in sight.

The odds on Willard are misleading, as opinion is almost unanimous that the crude, light-hitting Johnson hardly has a chance but those who like short end gambles and the "youthage" proverb are betting almost against their judgment.

Firpo is such a pronounced favorite that the backers of the Argentine giant might go four or five to one if there happened to be any money at all to back McAuliffe.

Interest in the other three bouts on the card that has been arranged for the benefit of the milk fund is less than normal and they are only serving for freak bets.

All of the boxers have completed their training this morning and the stadium was practically ready for the battles. Tex Rickard, who is directing the show for the committee, said that 70,000 spectators could be accomodated and that he expected to see every seat filled.

BEVY OF HEAVIES TO FIGHT TODAY

Ten Title Contenders to Meet at Milk Fund Tournament To-Day.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(Canadian Press).—Virtually all the available heavyweights of the world who are active contenders for Jack Dempsey's title, will meet in the Yankees' new stadium to-day in a series of elimination contests that promise to provide some pugilistic sensations.

The seats in the stadium will accommodate about seventy thousand, and if they are filled the receipts will total $450,000, admittance fees running from a dollar up to twenty.

The card is:

Louis Angel Firpo, 212 pounds, vs. Jack McAuliffe, 200 pounds.

Fred. Fulton, 214 pounds, vs. Jack Renealt, 190½ pounds.

Al. Reich, 206½ pounds, vs. Jim Herman, 218½ pounds.

Joe McCann, 208 pounds, vs. Harry Drake, 195 pounds.

All the principals are reported to be in excellent condition. Light rains started to fall shortly after ten o'clock this morning, threatening to cause the postponement of the show, but Tex Rickard said he would go ahead with plans until the weather conditions make it impossible.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

AN EXOTIC PICTURE.

Rich Scenes Abound in Dorothy Dalton's "Dark Secrets"

A most cosmopolitan assemblage is seen in Dorothy Dalton's new Paramount production, "Dark Secrets," which comes to the Capitol Theatre for two days, Monday and Tuesday. The scene is a gorgeous hotel in Cairo, Egypt, with its picturesque courtyard and terraces, its lily-pond and statuary, romantic looking balconies and distant palm trees. This exotic atmosphere is enchanced by the presence of birds of gorgeous plumage and tropical plants and flowers. The scene is rich with the color of interesting costumes and unusual uniforms as contrasted with the conventional garments of the Americans.

In addition to Miss Dalton's party of American tourists, are seen English army officers, one of whom, Lord Wallington, is her sweetheart; then there are Arabs in full desert regalia, gay ladies from Spain, Hindus, Egyptians, Mussulmans, Orientals and attaches of various legations. Small page boys and waiters, barefoot and swarthy of skin, their heads swathed in turbans, dart in and out among the pleasure seekers, performing their duties. Here, too the sinister Dr. Ali, an Egyptian physician, uses his poisonous influence to gain the confidence of Ruth Rutherford, played by Miss

MONTREAL, May 12.—(Canadian Press):—There was no improvement in the domestic demand for cash grain in the local market and business was generally quiet. The flour market was without feature. There was no change in the local millfeed market and business in rolled oats was quiet. The tone of the baled hay market is steady. The demand for potatoes was good. There was a fair demand for butter. There is an impression that prices will fall in the cheese market shortly.

MRS. TOPLAST'S SCHEME WAS A BRIGHT OFFERING

A humorous little playlet, "How the Ladies Earned Their Dollar, or Mrs. Toplast's Scheme," was a bright offering of thirteen ladies of the Mark street Methodist Church Ladies' Aid Society, at their church hall last evening. Rev. Mr. Ross acted as chairman for the entertainment, which was preceded by a brief musical programme, including an instrumental selection by Mrs. C. Smith, a reading by Miss Nellie Boorman and Scotch character vocal solos by Mr. R. Hendry.

The ladies also reported on their work for the month, which netted them in the way of talent money the handsome sum of $100.

The play took the form of a ladies' club meeting, at which each of the ladies, in old-fashioned costumes, related various ways of earning a first dollar, in ridiculous fashions. Those taking part were Mesdames Mounce, Morton, Marshall, Weir, Clarke, Weese, Ross; White, Speer Matchett Oke Throop and Miss Whattam.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — and New York Stock Exchange — And Curb Prices.

To-Day's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(United Press.)— In a furious assault that lasted throughout the entire short session to-day the bears succeeded in depressing stocks on the New York Exchange to new lows for the year. Declines of 1 1-2 points were common, while Dupont sold off 10 1-2 points from the previous close. Steel common hit a new low at 97 5-8 and so did numerous other speculative favorites. Despite the rich harvest which bears appeared to be gathering, brokers who have kept informed on recent professional operations declared that half the profits made on the decline which culminated last Monday were lost on subsequent recovery in American locomotive and Baldwin and this fact restrained some bear traders from further activity on the side of the decline.

Representatives of the largest banks and trust companies declare the bull market is not over and that the trend of securities will be upward for the next several months. This seems to be the general opinion of the constructive element. They base their opinion of belief that after the current lull in business there will be a secondary revival which will carry trade and securities to much higher levels. Bears are talking depression and follow up their arguments with vicious attacks on stocks. Bankers have not yet seen fit to back up their bullish attitude with substantial buying orders. Professionals followed up their success in the early trading with an attack on all sections of the list, creating a heavy tone throughout the market in the first hour. Stocks gave way with surprising ease. No group showing stiff resistance to the attacks. There was very little recovery from the low figures of the session.

Closing prices included United States' Steel 95 5-8, off 2. Rep. Iron and Steel, 49 1-8, off 1 3-8; Bethlehem Steel 53 1-2, off 1 1-2; Baldwin 125 1-4, off 2 1-4; American Loco., 133 1-4, off 1 1-2; Texas Company 45 1-2, off 1-2; Pan-American 59 1-4, off 3-8; California Petroleum 29 3-4, up 1-4; Studebaker 110 1-2, off 1-2; Dupont 127, off 10 1-4; General Motors 15 1-2, off 3-4; United States Rubber 51 1-2, off 1 5-8; American Can. 90 5-8, off 1 3-8; American Woollen 9 11-2, off 1 3-4; Corn Products off 1-4.

GERMANY'S GENTLE POOR SELL THEIR OLD FINERY

BERLIN, May 11.—Thousand of German gentlewomen are now going through the tragedy which Russian women of the same class have suffered for several years. Widows of officers and government officials, women with small pensions and limited incomes from investments, find themselves unable to buy the plainest food with their depreciated marks.

A few days ago the aged widow of a once prominent physician and her invalid daughter were found almost dead from hunger in their home, which had been stripped of every saleable article. The mother had done needlwork as long as she was able. She was too proud to ask charity, and the doctors who were called by neighbors to attend her said both the mother and daughter if left alone, would have been dead in another 24 hours.

In an effort to alleviate the condition of such persons and protect them from unscrupulous second-hand dealers, a number of philanthropic Berlin women have organized a fair where second-hand articles may be offered for sale. The owners may act as their own sales-agents or entrust their wares to representatives of the committee.

With German efficiency the members of the relief committee have provided tables behind which the sellers have chairs. They are mostly elderly women. Many of them are cripples, and almost without exception their worn and old-fashioned clothing indicates their gentle birth. A few very old men sit among the women and scarcely any of the vendors are young enough to do any manual labor. Thus they sit, day after day, waiting the chance to exchange the finery of by-gone days into fuel and food for to-day.

Peter Porker Says:

THERE are hidden delights in everyday food, provided you get a good article and cook it right.

"ROSE BRAND HAM cooked as follows is a revelation:

"Take thick slices (about three-quarters of an inch) from the middle of the ham, place them in a shallow dish, sprinkle with a little brown sugar, a few dabs of butter on top, just cover with milk. Place in oven and bake until milk has disappeared. Serve with any vegetable.

"Ordinary ham won't do—most likely too salt—buy a whole ROSE BRAND HAM. Use the middle slices as above, the ends can be used for frying and boiling—no waste."

A North American Association
—the model, all over the World

IT IS NOT a mere boast to say that the publications of the United States and Canada are the most progressive and farthest advanced of any country in the world.

Eight years ago—in co-operation with advertisers and advertising agents—the leading publishers assisted in organizing the association which places the buying of advertising space on a Basis of Certainty.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations has pioneered the way from old-fashioned, haphazard methods to the modern method of buying space with the publisher's books open to the advertiser. Through this work a remarkably efficient system for auditing publications has been built up and today is applied to practically all the leading newspapers, magazines, farm papers, and trade papers of the United States and Canada.

That this system is economically sound and fills a real need in business, is shown by the fact that other countries have patterned their associations after the A.B.C.

England, France and Holland have taken steps to build up Auditing Bureaus that will give the advertiser and the publisher the same opportunity to meet on common business ground that they have in America.

Publishers of this continent willingly co-operate with the A.B.C, because they believe that in furnishing audited circulation figures to the advertisers they are co-operating in a way that will be mutually helpful.

The EXAMINER is a member of the A. B. C. and would be pleased to submit a copy of the latest circulation report

COMEDY, "THE DEACON" MUCH APPRECIATED

Repeat Entertainment by Cognawaga Club Big Success.

Last evening in Victoria Hall the Cognawaga Athletic Club presented the comedy-drama entitled "The Deacon" to an appreciative audience, under the auspices of the L.O.L. No. 2440. Great credit is due all the characters for the manner in which they presented their parts. So great was the intoxication of the Deacon (Lewis R. Parks) that it was feared the police would interfere for breach of the O.T.A. Many compliments are due to the director, Mr. George Wagar and his assistant, Mr. Wm. McLaren.
The Village Band, directed by Edwin Rowe, presented their marches, waltzes, overtsres, etc., in a most hsmorous and entertaining manner. The vaudeville, under the direction of Edwin Rowe, was all that could be desired. "The Deacon's in Town" introduced by Walter Wright and chorus, greatly enlightened the people as to the character of the Deacon. "You Never Can Be Too Sure About the Girls" was a slight reminder handed out by Edwin Rowe. "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean," featured by Edwin Rowe and Walter Wright, was very much appreciated, as was the coon act presented by Arthur Vannest and Alvin Davis, introducing their song, "Y-You Tell Her, 'Cause I-I Stutter." These are only a few of the many vaudevilles presented.
The Cognawaga Orchestra added greatly to the evening's entertainment.
The Cognawaga Club are very thankful to the Cressman Co. for furniture supplied, also the Heintzman Company for the loan of a Victrola.

ROYAL KINGS OF EGYPT ARE BURIED IN PARIS

PARIS, May 12.—(Associated Press).—Recent investigation has disclosed the novel fact that a number of Egypt's royal dead are interred under the famous Bastille, shrine of France's freedom.
It appears that Champollion, the noted French archaeologist and inventor of the key to Egyptian heirogiyphics, years ago sent a number of mummies from Egypt to the Louvre. Egyptology was then in its infancy, and doubtless sufficient precautions had not been taken to retain the nummies in their original state. When the royal remains arrived in Paris it was found impossible to place them in the museums, as had been intended, and in 1830 they were buried in the Gardens of the Louvre.
Then followed the stormy days at the end of July, when the population of Paris rose in protest against the ordinances of King Charles X. Fighting took place near the Louvre and Tuileries, and the bodies of those killed were buried where they fell. It is recorded that in the course of his task one of the citizens struck with his spade a skull which he though to be that of a victim of the Massacre of St. Batholomew, but which was in reality that of one of the Pharaohs buried a few months before.
When the revolution had been accomplished the new Government decided to commemorate the event by the erection of a column, and the remains of the victims buried in the royal gardens were exhumed and placed beneath the new column in the Place de la Bastille. The bones of the dead Pharaohs were transferred with those of the Parisians who had risen to defend their rights, and still lie beneath the monument in the midst of one of the busiest squares of Paris.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR DRILLS PRESENTED COLORFUL PICTURE

About forty members of Cyrene Preceptory Knights Templar were the guests last evening of Moore Preceptory Knights Templar of this city. In spite of the several showers the visitors paraded from the C. P. R. Station to the Masonic Hall, led by the Salvation Army Band. Military uniforms with shining swords and white mantles emblazoned with the Red Cross of the Order were a picturesque sight and one that the citizens seldom have an opportunity of seeing.
On arrival at the hall Cyrene drill corps under the command of Adjutant W. J. Foster entertained the large number of assembled citizens on Hunter Street with some well executed drills, sword manual and manoeuvres, which were warmly applauded by the members of the local Preceptory. The Knights were then marshalled by Eminent Sir Knight L. E. Bowerman, the Presiding Preceptor. The visiting Knights then proceeded to the Lodge Rooms, where they were cordially welcomed by Eminent Sir Knight R. L. Dobbin, Presiding Preceptor, and Right Eminent Sir Knight Walter Francis and other Past Preceptors.
The officers of the visiting Preceptory were then invited to assume the respective chairs and confer the illustrious order of the Red Cross upon the candidates-in-waiting.
The ritualistic ceremony was exemplified in a most excellent and impressive manner and was greatly appreciated by every member present.
At the conclusion of the Red Cross Eminent Sir Knight Bowerman, on behalf of the officers and members of Cyrene Preceptory, presented to Eminent Sir Knight Dobbin a beautiful Preceptor's Knight of Malta Jewel, which was suitably acknowledged.
At the close of the Preceptory the Knights repaired to the banquet hall, where a splendid programme of music and song was provided by Mr. Frank Oldfield, well-known baritone of Toronto, and Cyrene Quartette, composed of Sir Knights W. Moore, G. C. McIntvre, Hugh Freeston and Albert David.

A DIVERSITY IN TALENT AND AGE

Balance of Recital by Mr. King's Pupils Particularly Good.

Mr. George H. King, whose first recital for this season took place on the third of this month, presented the balance of his pupils in an interesting vocal and instrumental recital last evening at Trinity Sunday School Hall, Reid street. The pupils were assisted by Miss Sylvia Ross, reader, of Albert College, Belleville.
Although the programme was a lengthy one, it was made interesting by the diversity in talent and age, the performers ranging in size from small lads and lassies in black suits and white frocks to senior pupils of Mr. King, and the reading given by Miss Sylva Ross were particularly good. The visiting elocutionist made a splendid impression with her clever rendition of several selections. "The Pilot of the Plains," an Indian legend by Pauline Johnson. was a fine example of the youthful performer's dramatic ability and intense sincerity. Miss Ross has a pretty inflected voice which makes all her readings charming bits. "Red Roses", in Italian dialect, and two child numbers: "Watchin' Sparkin'." and "Little Peter,' were well received.
Master Walter Townsend made a triumphant and lasting impression on his audience last evening. This small lad, with his uconcerned demeanor and clever musicianship, played from memory a bright and sparkling number, the "Morceau Characteristique," which brought renewed applause from his audience. Following this was a rendition of the test piece for boys under eleven years of age at the recent Musical Comppetition Festival in Toronto Part of Mozart's "Sonata No 1 in C had been selected for the competition. but, after a week's study, the played entirely from memory last entire eleven-page composition was evening by the brilliant little lad.
In the instrumental section of the programme, Miss Elva Nugent played in fine style "Sous Bois", while Miss Doris Phillips was especially good in her playing of Mendelssohn's "Rondo Capriccioso."
The vocal numbers were well given. Particularly pleasing were the tenor solos of Messrs. V. Boorman and A. Fenton; the contralto work of Miss Marie McBain of Springville Miss H. Broom and Miss Beulah Payton while soprano solos which were received with applause were those of Miss Vera Botterill of Lakefield and Miss Mae McKim.
Others taking part were: Instrumental: the Misses Alma Blanchard, Jillian Brown, Lillian Collins, Dorothy Adams, Hilda Ephgrave, Z. Irvine, Reta Head. Mary Medd, A. Stoneham, Doris Cooper, Caroline Beavis, L. Sargeant, Gladys Renouff Mabel Neville and Master Orville Huffman, Vocal: Mrs. A. Wells, the Misses May Ritchie, Lillian Freeman and E. Williamson.

The annual meeting of the Central Home and School Association took place last evening, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. F. Miller; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. O. M. Steer; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. Walter Burns; 3rd Vice-President, Mrs. Cruikshank; Secretary, Mrs. Jas. A. Spencer; Treasurer, Mrs. J. D. Craig; Executive: Mesdames R. Denne, E. Howson, G. Hall, E. H. Bartlett, M. Morgan, E. V. Warne, A. M. Weldon, Bennett, G. C. Carruthers and Miss Smith. Social Committee—Mrs. W. Stinson and Mrs. S. Constable. Programme Committee — Mrs. Geo. Johnson. Visiting and Relief — Mrs. Wm. Payne and Mrs. L. Sharp. Membership—Mrs. Patterson.
Reports of last year's activities, showing a successful year, in which the ladies did a great deal of good in relief work, and supply of milk to under-nourished children, in providing prizes for different events, etc., were read by the secretary, Mrs. E. H. Bartlett, and by Mrs. Gordon Hall, who gave the treasurer's report in the absence of Mrs. G. Johnson.

MAY USE GURKHAS TO QUEL CHINESE

Action Contemplated Against the Shantung Bandits—Would Fear the Indians.

LONDON, May 12. — (United Press.)—A movement is afoot to obtain fifty thousand Gurka troops from India to quell the Chinese bandits who have terrorized a section of Shantung and seized foreigners, according to a dispatch from Peking to the Daily Mail.
This step is being taken to stop the series of outrages committed. It was said Indian troops would not frighten the population as white invaders would.

LOCAL DOGS WIN BRANTFORD PRIZES

Jimmy McMartin's two Boston terrier entries in the Telephone City Kennel Club's show at Brantford this week made a decidedly good showing against very keen competition. "Blucher King" took second in the puppy class, second in the under 15 lb. class, second in Canadian bred dogs and third in the limit class and third in the open class under fifteen pounds. "Peggy King" in the class for novice females from 20 to 25 lbs. took a second and was third in the limit and open classes for females, so that altogether Mr. McMartin's two entries, which were bred by him in Peterobrough, won four seconds and four third prizes. The Brantford show was a great success with over 200 dogs benched.

THE WEATHER.

The cool weather, the snow and rain, of the past week, has retarded spring It is now a week or ten days behind its accustomed schedule, and losing time. For many years I have noticed carefully each spring the first buds on the maples, when the leaves were half-formed, and when the trees were fully arrayed in their complete dress of foliage. These dates are about May 5th, 12th and 23rd respectively. At this date they should be in half leaf. At present the buds are only well developed. Unless some very warm weather at once arrives they are hardly likely to be in full leaf by Victoria Day, or what the older generation knew as the Queen's Birthday, the first holiday of the summer season, and the time at which all nature looks it fairest and best.—W.P.

MUSSOLINI IS A STRONG MAN FOR ITALIANS

Whole Nation Seems to Be Under the Spell of This Strange Man's Eyes.

FASCISTI OBEY

By William Philip Simms.

ROME, May 1.—Is Benito Mussolini, Prime Minister of Italy, a strange, new kind of Svengali? And is Italy playing the role of Trilby—an entire nation under the spell of this strange man's eyes?

To-night I interviewed Mussolini and I confess I am inclined to believe this more than half true. From the moment I entered his amazing office in the new Foreign Affairs Building here, I had this feeling, a sensation I remember having only once before. That was when I interviewed Mme. de Thebes, the celebrated sorceress of Paris, now dead, in her mysterious room hung all around with black velvet and lighted only by the glow from crystal globes used in her practice of Black Magic.

I have interviewed kings and emperors, presidents and princes, premiers, dictators and all manner of men and women, but Mussolini impressed me as none of these impressed me.

He's Different.

I mean he is different from any statesman I ever saw, as different as night from day. I have talked with political leaders whose profundity impressed me more, whose ideas seemed to me to be fundamentally more sound and in whose hands I would prefer to see placed the destiny of my own land.

But I have seen none other anythink like Mussolini, the man with the hypnotic eyes, "black magic" statesman of Italy, the man who stares at the citizens of his country, from king on down the line, and they all sing to his bidding—like Svengali made Trilby sing in the romance which everyone has read.

Does Mussolini realize his hypnotic power? He must. The first thing that met my eyes as I came ashore at Brindisi, way down in southern Italy, was a billboard picture of the Fascisti leader, a picture so extraordinary that it held me spellbound until I could make out what it was all about. The head was inclined forward just a trifle and from under beetling brows two enormous black eyes, the whites showing all round, huge, exaggerated eyes that stared straight at you and into you and through you precisely like the hypnotic stage pictures of Wilton Lackaye as Svengali.

Pictures Everywhere.

All over Brindisi I kept finding myself sniped at from the ambush of every fence and wall by those two orbs. I could well imagine the effect this might have on the ignorant and less sophisticated peasants of the country.

My Sole object in coming to Italy was to see and talk with the remarkable owner of those eyes—the man who had turned Italy, almost over night, into an armed camp ready to do his bidding—the man who marched on Rome with a powerful army at his back and "took" it without firing a shot, took it and forced the king to do his will—the man who dissolved Parliament and made his word supreme.

For that is what Mussolini did and nobody is more keenly aware of this fact than Mussolini himself.

He openly boasts that he has but to wave his hand and 160,000 "Black Shirts"—Fascisti soldiers—will snap into action and obey his slightest word.

TW OYEARS .....(..... ....

LINDSAY, May 14 (Special to The Examiner). — Harry Raymond alias Harry Yorke an individual prominent in the criminal annals of Peterborough and Lindsay, was last week sentenced at Belleville to two years in Portsmouth Penitentiary, Kingston, for theft.

Raymond was arrested at Marmora for stealing money from the house of Frank Jones, and admitted his guilt from the start.

Raymond has had a spectacular career. His record is one of the most unenviable in crime annals in this district, for he has time and again been undergoing terms, although even yet he is only 43 years of age.

According to his own admission he was sentenced at Cobourg to six months for theft in 1903, at Peterborough to three months in jail for theft in 1912, to a term in the Ontario Reformatory as Harry Yorke for breaking into and entering a store in Lindsay in 1915, in having broken prison in 1916 at Burwash, and to having undergone a sentence of four months at Belleville for perjury.

Raymond asked for clemency from the Court, but the County Crown Attorney said the man was a menace to the community, his record as a thief and perjurer being one that showed him a dangerous character.

LINDSAY TEAM HERE SATURDAY

Petes Arrange Battle With Section A. Outfit.

Local ball fans will be glad to know that arrangements have been made for a visit on Saturday afternoon from the Lindsay Central Ontario League team, who will clash with the Petes at Riverside Park in a game that will afford another opportunity to judge of the respective ability of the two sections of the Central loop. It may be the only appearance of the Lindsay team here this year, and as the Scugog crew have many new faces on the line-up the clash should be of unusual interest to the fans. The game will put both teams in good shape for the League opening on Victoria Day, a week from Thursday. The Petes are taking no chances and have called a practice for every evening this week.

PETERBOROUGH DENTISTS AT TORONTO CONVENTION

Several Peterboro Dentists are in Toronto attending the Fifty Sixth Annual Convention of the Ontario Dental Association which opens to-day. Besides the various clinics, designed to provide something of instruction for evryone, there is a programme of dinners, re-unions, and various forms of entertainment which should make the convention an enjoyable affair for all who attend.

Some of the questions which will be discussed, which are of interest, not only to the dental fraternity but to every citizen, are the following: Are we attaining the maximum accomplishment in dentistry through education? The failure of the dentist to educate the patient and the consequent failure to obtain co-operation. Results of neglected mouth conditions The demands upon the dentist by the laity.

All these subjects will be threshed out by men long experienced in the subjects on which they speak, and should be of great benefit to the dentists and, through them, to the citizens of Ontario at large.

SAYS POVERTY LIES BEHIND BRIGAND BAND

Word-Pictures of Contact With Freebooters in China Conveyed in Dispatches by Missionaries

PENETRATE LAIR

HOBOKEN, N.J., May 14. — Poverty—looming like a gaunt specter—is the direct cause lying behind Chinese banditry.

That sums up eye-witness stories of hand-to-hand contact with marauders of the type that a few days ago swept down upon a train in Shantung and carried off many Americans and other foreigners.

Word-pictures of contact with freebooters are contained in despatches by two missionaries now in China —Rev. Raphael Vance and Rev. Timothy McDermott, Passionist priests—to the editor of The Sign, monthly magazine of the Order.

These two men have penetrated the fastness of the Shantung district, and by long experience intimately understand the psychology and motivating forces lying behind the roving bands of pillagers.

Terrorize Populace.

"The ordinary people fear these men," Father Raphael writes, "and make little or no resistance. When the war was over it was commonly believed that soldiers, disbanded, would take to their guns and the 'bandit business' simultaneously.

"Twice last week bandits came down from the mountains and stormed the eastern gate of the city, burning and destroying property. They came without warning. It is a daily occurrence for several of these bandits to be beheaded along the river near the mission.

Looked Upon as Gods.

"They go to their death like martyrs and are very often reputed as gods by the people and always by their fellow-robbers. They have absolutely no fear of death. In one year over a thousand were summarily executed here in Yuan Chow; but their numbers are increasing alarmingly.

"Now we are expecting another more serious attack, because a few days ago their commander-in-chief was captured through treachery, and executed. Some of those chieftains have thousands of men under command in regular military fashion. Very often when the leaders make peace with the government, their men are all made regular soldiers.

"They long since have passed the asking stage. They beg no alms now. What they want they take—by force, if necessary.

"Nearly all are still in uniform. Through the southern provinces they arch in military fashion, pillaging, burning, kidnaping and murdering as they move along.

Respect Old Glory.

"The term soldiers and robbers has come to be synonymous to many in China. Only a few months back several thousands of these robbers besieged Yuan Chow for more than a week. They had the

TRYING AVOID RUPTURE WITH THE RUSSIANS

London is Hopeful of a Satisfactory Settlement--Krassin is Working Overtime.

VESSELS RELEASED

LONDON, May 14.—(Special.)—London is hopeful that a satisfactory settlement of the Russo-British crisis will be effected without even a break in existing trade relations.

Leonid Krassin, who is flying from Moscow, is expected this afternoon and it is now reported that the trawler "James Johnson" has been released with a small fine and the "Lord Astor" and its crew unconditionally.

Krassing is personally anxious to continue the relationship and British business is anxious to avoid a breach as Russian trade headquarters would then move to Stockholm or Copenhagen.

Lord Curzon's attitude is still stiff as he is said personally to resent not only the Soviet attitude, but recent demonstrations of the Russian people. While certain elements in the Labor party have been making strong demonstrations in favor of Russia, the party as a whole is divided on the question of openly opposing the government on any important question of foreign policy.

Mormans Start on a Tour Through States

NEW YORK, May 14.—(Special). — One hundred and fifty Mormon missionaries will set out on foot in pairs Tuesday morning from a number of eastern cities to convert twelve states to the doctrines of Brigham Young. After a three-hour exhortation conducted by the Eastern States Mission here, the Mormonites will swing packs onto their backs and start hiking with instructions to preach their beliefs in every town and countryside from Maryland to Maine.

GAVE TALK ON MILK PROBLEM

Dr. N. H. Sutton Addressed the Local Board of Health This Morning.

The necessity for pure milk was featured at this morning's regular meeting of the Board of Health. Dr. N. H. Sutton, District Officer of Health, was a visitor, and led the attack on the stronghold of bacteria. Of all the many questions that come before the Board of Health, the question of a pure milk supply is the most vital," he said.

It is the duty of the Board of Health to supply the Sanitary Inspector with the facilities to inspect the cow stables and the conditions of milk production regularly. Everyone who supplies milk to the city comes under the jurisdiction of the Board, and must submit his utensils and apparatus to the inspection of the Sanitary Inspector.

Lighting, bedding, cleanliness, facilities for cleaning out the barns, the frequency of cleaning, the currying and grooming of cows to remove adhering dirt, and the general conditions of the barns should be inspected closely. The Sanitary Inspector should arrange his visits so that he would be present at milking time to see that the cows and utensils and the workers are clean and the apparatus properly sterilized. Dr. Sutton said that 25 per cent of the tubercular disease in children comes from milk. As soon as milking is done the utensils should be taken out of the barn and the milk should be immediately chilled.

This is especially necessary in summer. Methods of bringing the milk into town should also be checked over and tabulated.

The man who does not conform to the regulations, if he is teachable and likely to show improvement, while those who refuse to better conditions should have their licenses cut off immediately.

Dr. Sutton advocated testing the milk at regular intervals in the laboratory. The spring of the year is probably the most suitable time for checking up on dirt conditions, because then bedding is plentiful and the condition can be easily checked

"White wash," the Doctor said, "should not be allowed to cover a multitude of sins."

Supply Facilities.

Answering an objection by Sanitary Inspector C. S. Stapleton, that he had not time to do his city work and carry out all the duties that Dr. Sutton outlined, the Doctor said, "I suppose that Board of Health will get you all the facilities you need, and after it is done you will find a great benefit to the health of the City of Peterboro.

Dr. T. W. H. Young, City Health Officer, stated that before a milk license is issued or a renewal granted, the applicant's barns and utensils are inspected by the sanitary inspector.

Mr. Stapleton reported that he had inspected 58 places in March, and had found the majority of them satisfactory.

Replying to a question from Dr. Young as to the number of sanitary inspectors required under Dr. Sutton's recommendations, the Provincial District Officer said that if regular inspections were made of the barns in spring and early winter and tests made periodically in the interim no extensive inspections would be required at other times. Those whose milk did not come up to the standard prescribed might be checked up, but those who keep the grade of the milk up need not be subjected to barn inspection oftener than twice a year.

The chairman, G. H. Duncan, expressed his opinion that good results would accrue to a close co-operation between the Board of Health and the District Officer of Health.

Dr. Sutton pointed out that milk dealers can have their product tested at any time in the Provincial Laboratory free of charge, and indicated that any man who is anxious to provide pure milk will have this done. No matter how careful a man may be in his work there may be a slip somewhere, which would be revealed by frequent tests, he said.

Install Conveniences.

The Board passed a resolution calling on six citizens to install sani-

SOCIETY OPENS A GAY SEASON IN OLD LONDON

Group of Fledgling Feminine Beauties Have Begun to Flutter Their Wings in Metropolis.

ALL-NIGHT DANCES

(By Marie Dorland.)

LONDON, May 14. — In Mayfair, that very compressed but ultra-fashionable part of London where even a three-roomed flat

In Mayfair, that very compressed bult ultra-fashionable part of London where eevn a three-roomed flat above a butcher shop is "a good address," a crop of fledgling society beauties have begun to flutter their wings and from now until the end of July, when the festivities officially come to an end, they will dance virtually all night every night. The London "season' like most other English institutions is a tradition. For generations it has been the custom for the country families—those who have wealth or handles to their names—to take a house in the west end of London in the early summer and entertain and be entertained till they are so exhausted that only a month or two deer stalking in Scotland will soothe theeir ajded nerves.

The Marriage Market.

Cynics call it "the marriage market" and each year some one of them kicks his heels in print by offering timely advice to young men of the fashionable world on the subject of match-making mothers. The extraordinary part about the private dances is that the guests think nothing of accepting three or four invitations for the same evening, and having given a party the "once over" of roling on to the next. One wouldn't try that more than once with a Canadian hostess but here it seems quite comme il faut.

Outside of the court, it is at the foreign embassies where one sees the most brilliant and cosmopolitan assemblies—Russian princesses resplendant in what is left of the family jewels; the exquisitely-dressed dark-eyed wives of South Americans who spent the war years coining money; Spanish beauties; French women, carmen-lipped and subtly charming; and Indian princesses in the simple splendour of the East's unchanging draperies.

Feminine interest during the past week or so has naturally been centred on clothes. Worth, the great French dressmaking firm, which, by the way ,was established by an Englishman and sponsored by the French Empress Eugenie in the heyday of her charms, sent to London a bevy of fascinating mannequins and seventy wondrous creations. Some of the colour combinations were amazing. One frock combined mauve pink and cerese. A corsage of deep red roses is not supposed to harmonize with a cerese ostrich feather hair ornament, yet on a delicately-shaded gown it did.

Worth's position as the king of dressmakers is unassailable. Not only are his colourings perfect, but the materials really deserve the much-abused sartorial superlative "georgeous,' 'and a line of drapery have been achieved with such artistry that on a beautiful mannequin his creations have all the thrilling allure of a great master's painting.

New Sports Hats.

Robin-Hood— or rather, Douglas Fairbanks— and his merrie, merrie men, have been responsible for a new vogue in sports hats. In town as well as country one sees them everywhere — soft suede affairs in woodsy colours with pointed brims turned up jauntily on one side and a long quill feather swooping over the shoulder. But perhaps the film —and the fahion—reached you long ago. Californian productions often have whiskers before they are seen by English audiences.

The Canadian Red Cross Society has a strong organization in London. Their office is in the Bank of Montreal, in Waterloo Place, just off Piccadily Circus, which has something of the atmosphere of a club and is a favorite Canadian rendezvous. One of the society's chief activities is arranging tours to the Canadian graves in France. Already this year they have sent a hundred and sixty pilgrims.
